Funeral Sermon to Order.

The old Bridewell burying ground, which is now the subject of legislation in the English parliament, is the resting place of Mme. Creswell, so often mentioned by the Charles II. dramatists, who died in Bridewell prison, and left $50 for a sermon to be preached at her funeral, on condition that nothing should be said of her but what was well. The preacher got out of the difficulty neatly by saying: "All that I shall say of her is this: She was born well, lived well, and she died well; for she was born with the name of Creswell, she lived in Clerkenwell, and she died in Bridewell."—Chicago Post.

How He Fixed It.

"Can't you learn to say 'No?'" she demanded.

"Certainly," he replied, and thereafter he arranged with his boon companions to ask him if he would refuse a drink, instead of asking if he would have one. Thus he was enabled to say "No," without suffering any deprivation.—Chicago Post.

What Everybody Says.

Every one who uses Doan's Kidney Pills free trial has a good word to say for them—that's why they are most prominent in the public eye.

Aching backs are eased. Hip, back, and loin pains overcome. Swelling of the limbs and dropsy signs vanish.

They correct urine with brick-dust sediment, high colored, excessive, pain in passing, dribbling, frequency, bed wetting. Doan's Kidney Pills dissolve and remove calculi and gravel. Relieve heart palpitation, sleeplessness, headache, nervousness.

Louisville, Ky.—For a year or more I have been suffering with severe pains in the small of my back and kidneys; had tried a number of remedies but without relief. I decided to try Doan's Kidney Pills, and purchased two boxes, and am glad to state that after taking the two boxes of pills I was relieved of all pains, and have not been troubled since. Prior to taking these pills it was impossible for me to get a full night's sleep, but I am not experiencing any difficulty in this respect now.—Yours truly, John E. Kramen, 2423 W. Main Street.—(Foreman American Tobacco Co.)

Aberdeen, Wash.—I had a bad pain in my back; I could hardly walk or sit down. I could not write for sample, but got a fifty-cent box of druggist, and they have made me all right. No other medicine did me any good.—Aug. Carlson, 85 1st St., East.

Chicago, Ill.—When I received the sample of Doan's Kidney Pills I was suffering terribly with my back, was sick and unfit to do anything. The several remedies I had used, though highly recommended, did no good, but rather irritated the trouble and made me worse. Before I had used up the sample I was feeling so much better that I got more from the drug store. I could not sleep at night. Had to get up six or eight times, and the urine was so red, would almost think it was part blood—there was a thick sand, like brick-dust sediment. I cannot tell one-half that I suffered, nor how good I feel now that I am cured by Doan's Kidney Pills; but here I am, sixty-six years old, able to do my own work, feeling well as I did twenty years ago, for which I thank Doan's Kidney Pills ten thousand times.—Mrs. E. T. Gould, 914 W. Lake Street. Doan's Pills cure when others fail.

THE OLD SOLDIER'S DAY.

Beautiful Custom of Observing Memorial Day—The Nation's National Debt.

In 1865 occurred one of the most impressive and soul-stirring pageants which this country has ever seen. On the 23d and 24th of May, the armies of the union passed in grand review before the president and the secretary of war, in Washington. On the first day 80,000 men of the Army of the Potomac marched through the streets of the national capital, and on the following day the 69,000 members of Sherman's army carried their tattered flags over the same line of march.

In all there were 149,000 men in that blue tide which, for six hours on one day and seven on the next, flowed past the capitol; and on the great banner which stretched across the front of the building the tired and war-worn veterans read a sentiment which must have touched their hearts. It was their country's acknowledgment of her sense of obligation to them. The words were these: "The only national debt we can never pay is the debt we owe the victorious union soldiers."

Today, says the Youth's Companion, a thousand little processions made up of those same men will march behind muffled drums and with flowers in their hands, to decorate the graves of the comrades whose marching days are done. Those who passed before the president in the grand review of 1865 were mostly young men, some of them mere boys. The little companies which make their way from post headquarters to the cemetery to-day are made up of old men. Each year finds the heads whiter, the line thinner, the steps more feeble. Yet the loving memories remain unchanged, the old comrades unforgotten, the service in their honor unneglected.

The dignity and faithfulness with which the veterans of the civil war observe this annual ceremony has not been lost upon the country. The pathetic spectacle of these feeble old men marching every year under the flag they once defended has touched us all. It has helped us to realize that we have indeed a "national debt we can never pay," and has confirmed the beautiful custom of giving one day in the year to our dead, be they soldier or civilian.

THE NATION DOES NOT FORGET.

MEMORIAL DAY IN THE SOUTH.

The Story of How the Custom of Decorating Soldiers' Graves Originated.

An association known as the Ladies' Aid society, was organized in 1861 for looking after soldiers who died in Columbus hospitals. They were buried under the direction of these ladies, who thereafter took charge of these graves, making it a practice to go in a body to care for and beautify them with plants and flowers. January, 1866, Miss Lizzie Rutherford, a member of the society, made the suggestion that a specified day should be adopted upon which a memorial service should be held for the purpose of decorating the confederate graves annually. The proposition met at once with the greatest favor, and a letter was addressed to each of the chapters in their cities and towns suggesting similar action on their part.

These letters were written in March, 1866, and from their publication resulted the observance of April 26 as Memorial day for the confederate dead in several southern states.

The floral displays are always magnificent in the larger cities, and especially is this true of Richmond. In historic old Hollywood lies the gallant and beloved Stuart. There, too, sleeps the old cavalier Pickett, and many others scarcely less distinguished. There, also, rests the president of the confederate states, and by his side the "Daughter of the Confederacy." And on Memorial day flowers from the hills of Vermont commingle over her grave with those from the plains of Texas and the land of the setting sun as a tribute to her worth and in attestaion of a reunited country.—Woman's Home Companion.

Our Comrades Live.

Still they live, our gallant comrades, still they live for evermore.
When the waves of Time beat softly on eternity's bright shore,
Tho' our wistful mortal vision may not pierce the veil between,
Still we feel their presence with us in this peaceful summer scene
And our hearts are thrilled, uplifted, as by Heaven's diviner air
While we scatter fragrant flowers o'er their green graves everywhere.

THE INTELLIGENT JUROR.

One Who Had to Inquire the Meaning of "Plaintiff" and "Defendant."

It is a common and natural practice of lawyers in addressing a jury to single out one member who seems to them the most intelligent, and to deliver their appeals to him. They usually feel that if they can impress him, his influence will be valuable in its effect upon the other members. If they make a mistake they rarely discover it, says the New York Sun. But the stenographer of one division of the supreme court tells an incident of a mistake that was found out.

All the testimony in a case had been taken, the lawyers for both sides had summed up, and the judge had charged the jury, when up rose the intelligent juror whom both counsel had singled out as the recipient of their impassioned appeals. He wanted the court to give him some information.

"I have been bothered a good deal," said the juror, "about two words the lawyers use here all the time."

"What are they?" asked the court, expecting to be called upon to expound res inter alios acta or a fortiori, or some other dead terms.

"Why, 'plaintiff' and 'defendant,'" said the juror. "I don't just know what they mean."

An Old Lady's Discovery.

Garnett, Ark., May 18th—For 18 years Mrs. Mary Dunlop of this place has suffered with Kidney trouble, which was so bad at times that it made her life a burden. She tried much medicine and many treatments, but got no better.

At last, however, Mrs. Dunlop claims to have found a perfect remedy, and she is so pleased at the wonderful cure she herself has received, that she is telling all her friends and praising the medicine to everyone she meets.

The name of this medicine is Dodd's Kidney Pills, and it has done wonderful work for Mrs. Dunlop.

Everybody is talking about it, and some people are claiming to have been cured of Rheumatism by it.

A Mrs. Garrett who lives in Brazils, this state, was at the point of death with some Cerebro-Spinal trouble, and was saved by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

It is certain that no other medicine ever introduced here has done so much good in such a short time.

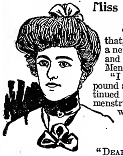
Miss Rose Peterson, Secretary Parkdale Tennis Club, Chicago, from experience advises all young girls who have pains and sickness peculiar to their sex, to rely on Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

How many beautiful young girls develop into worn, listless and hopeless women, simply because sufficient attention has not been paid to their physical development. No woman is exempt from physical weakness and periodic pain, and young girls just budding into womanhood should be carefully guided physically as well as morally.

If you know of any young lady who is sick, and needs motherly advice, ask her to write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., who will give her advice free, from a source of knowledge which is unequaled in the country. Do not hesitate about stating details which one may not like to talk about, and which are essential for a full understanding of the case.



Miss Hannah E. Mershon, Collingswood, N. J., says:

"I thought I would write and tell you that, by following your kind advice, I feel like a new person. I was always thin and delicate, and so weak that I could hardly do anything. Menstruation was irregular.

"I tried a bottle of your Vegetable Compound and began to feel better right away. I continued its use, and am now well and strong, and menstruate regularly. I cannot say enough for what your medicine did for me."

How Mrs. Pinkham Helped Fannie Kumpe.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—I feel it is my duty to write and tell you of the benefit I have derived from your advice and the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The pains in my back and womb have all left me, and my menstrual trouble is corrected. I am very thankful for the good advice you gave me, and I shall recommend your medicine to all who suffer from female weakness."—Miss Fannie Kumpe, 1922 Chester St., Little Rock, Ark. (Dec. 16, 1900.)

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will cure any woman in the land who suffers from womb troubles, inflammation of the ovaries, kidney troubles, nervous excitability, nervous prostration, and all forms of woman's special ills.

[Special Washington Letter.]

"VIRGINIANS are proud of every chapter in the history of their state," says Senator Daniels. "There are some paragraphs in some of the chapters which are not so brilliant as others; but, on the whole we are proud of every chapter in our history."

The occasion calling forth the remark is the fact that Virginia is growing old, and has a history of almost 300 years. On the 25th of May will occur the anniversary of the landing of Capt. John Smith and his fellow-freebooters upon the soil of Virginia, and the beginning of the permanent establishment of the first white colony in this republic of ours.

On May 25, 1607, now 296 years agone, Jamestown island was occupied and preparations begun for town-building. This was 13 years before the landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth, so there can be no doubt that this was the first permanent white settlement upon the land which now constitutes the United States of America.

There are upwards of 15,000 Virginians residing in the national capital, making their livings as federal officeholders. That is to say, that some 3,000 office-holders from Virginia support a colony of 15,000 people, all of them intensely loyal to their state, and proud of their lineage. Some 20 years ago there began an annual exodus from Washington to Jamestown to celebrate the anniversary; and there will be no hiatus in this procedure. The pilgrimages will begin two days before the anniversary, tens of thousands of Virginians will visit Jamestown, but the principal celebration this year will be in Richmond.

REBECCA ROLFE (POCAHONTAS) WORSHIPING ON JAMESTOWN ISLAND.

In order to describe this ancient locality the writer went to Jamestown island, the trip occupying only two days. It is situated 30 miles above Norfolk and Newport News, on the James river, and is about 70 miles below Richmond. Old inhabitants say that it has shrunken within a generation, but that it has now an area of 1,700 acres. It is two and a half miles long, and only little more than half a mile in width. From the main shore it is separated by a narrow stream and some marshy lowland, over which there is a low wooden bridge. The whole place looks "old-timey."

The island is as barren of civilization as Palmyra of the desert, and the only evidences of its former teeming habitation are the walls of the Ambler mansion-house, and the pitiful piece of tower of the first Protestant church built of brick in the new world. These objects of interest were pointed out by a young colored woman from the mainland, who also directed the traveler to the screened little acreage surrounding the relics of the church and the long neglected cemetery. There are no pictures of these interesting objects, but the tower is like any ordinary old tower, and the mansion remains are composed of the small bricks imported in those early days; about half of the size of modern bricks. The mansion is said to have been built with bricks which were formerly used in official and ancient structures. Tradition has it that in this old mansion there resided a woman who declined the honor of marriage with George Washington.

If this be true she must have almost hated herself afterwards when George became "first in war, first in peace and first in the hearts of his countrymen."

There is an association of ladies known as an association "For the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities," and it is this association which has surrounded these sole relics with wire fences and thick wire screens. These ladies took this step only six years ago; rather late in the day for the preservation of these antiquities, for hogs, wild and tame, and other cattle have browsed about the tower and the walls and over the graves of the cemetery for many, many years.

The ladies employ a custodian, but he was not on duty when the narrator called. He is said to reside in a little shanty there which is surrounded by heavy earthworks thrown up 40 odd years ago by confederate soldiers. By his absence he lost one fee of ten cents, which he is allowed to charge as part of his compensation for living there in the midst of squalor, dirt, malaria and musty reminiscences.

On reaching the north end of this historic island, work done and being done by the federal government was discovered. It seems that the island has been crumbling so rapidly of late years that the Virginia senators have secured appropriations for the purpose of preventing the entire destruction of the island by the swift current which sweeps unobstructed for eight miles, and fiercely carries away tons of clay and sand. Ripraps and jetties along shore may divert the channel a little, but if the island is to be fully protected it will prove to be a very costly proposition. The northern portion of the ruins of the town are said to be under water, and the covered foundations of former habitations can be seen from the side of rowboats. Alongside the northeast of the island there are big blocks of stone just beneath the surface of the water. They are held together by cement, and evidently formed the foundation of some big official building.

The biggest ships of the olden time used to come up the James and anchor at the wharves of Jamestown, but they could not do so now. Indeed, when the capital was moved to Williamsburg in 1723 the channel was becoming visibly more shallow. Thus was business affected in the beginning of the decline of Jamestown. There were big financial and political battles in those days, preceding the removal of the capital; and tradition hath it that several hot-blooded Virginians emptied their guns at and into the bodies of each other. However, the inevitable came, the capital was removed, Jamestown slowly fell into innocuous desuetude, and Williamsburg flourished. We have seen just such rivalries and battles between rival towns, far in the interior of the new world, within our own generation.

The brick church, of which only the tower is left, was built in 1638, when the colony was only 30 years old. Previously the people had worshiped in a large wigwam made of logs. The new brick church was 56 feet long and 28 feet wide, furnished lavishly with donations from England; everything in it being as rich and regal as the trappings and vestments of the best churches in the old country. Gov. Dale wrote: "There is some comfort in religion now;" as though his religion had been no comfort to him in the commodious log wigwam.

But for the removal of the capital to Williamsburg there might have been a great educational institution at Jamestown, because Parson Blair, the Scotchman from the University of Edinburgh who founded William and Mary college, was assigned to the parish at Jamestown in the new brick church, just before the transfer of the capital. He had for a short time been pastor of the parish of Varina, where Pocahontas was one of his parishioners. She was the wife of John Rolfe, an extensive tobacco planter, and was known as Rebecca Rolfe; quite English, you know, as compared with her aboriginal name when she hurried into history by her rush to the rescue of Capt. John Smith. Parson Blair often said that if he had remained at Jamestown he would have founded the college there—an institution which has endured until this day, and will ever endure.

The celebrated educational institution was originally built of bricks made on Jamestown island. They were made in the style of the imported bricks, but were not imported; neither were those which were used in the church at Jamestown. Parts of the ancient structure remain in good state of preservation, and the old church at Jamestown would still remain intact, if civilization had not deserted it.

ROUND ABOUT THE STATE.

Winona is to have a new brewery.

A Red Wing woman tried to mail a letter in a fire alarm box and called out the fire department and hundreds of spectators.

Thomas Short, seventy years of age, and rather feeble, fell into the river near Fort Snelling, and would have drowned had not Dr. C. B. Strang and Frank LaDue, a university law student, jumped in and dragged him out of eight feet of water.

The Clark-Jackson Lumber company secured a contract from the Hines Lumber Company of Chicago to saw $20,000,000 feet of lumber this season. Contracts for 30,000,000 feet more will be let necessitated by the burning recently of the Scofield mill at Superior which was to have sawed the entire 50,000,000 feet for the Hines company.

Harry Child, son of Dr. H. B. Child, of Minneapolis, had a narrow escape from drowning in Lake Minnetonka. He was in a sailboat when the craft capsized. Harry Swenson, a Minneapolis attorney, reached the young man with a rowboat and took him to shore.

Albert Peterson of St. Paul, a passenger on an eastbound Northern Pacific train, fell from his car near Trout creek, Mont., and died in a Missoula hospital, where he was conveyed by a special train.

John Oliver was sentenced for two months at Slayton for selling mortgaged property. Austin and Robert McCullom, brother, were sentenced to the reformatory for stealing horses.

A. S. Pierce, an employe of the Milwaukee road, was held up in St. Paul by a man and a woman and robbed of $50. The woman was arrested and $40 found on her person. The man fled with $10.

A river driver giving the name of E. D. Williams, was locked up at Little Falls on a charge of having had several small checks cashed with the forged name of A. C. Morrill.

William Koelner of Collegeville town was possibly fatally injured in a saw mill accident. He was struck by a driving belt and thrown on the carriage. He sustained a fractured skull.

Henry Green, of St. Cloud, a veteran of the Eleventh Minnesota in the civil war, is dead at the age of 72. He lived in Stearns county since 1861, and was forced by the Indians to leave his homestead near Melrose in Pioneer days.

By breaking in a plate glass door thieves effected an entrance to the store of the Huhn Drug company in Minneapolis and made away with about $25 worth of candy and cigars.

The story of Cole Younger,"by himself is out. This sets us to wondering if Doc. Ames will pulish a book on "Boodling in Minneapolis,"by himself.--Fertile Journal.

A book from the Doc. would undoubtedly he entertaining, and we are of the opinion that he could get some assistance in its preparation from the leaders in the defeat of Columbia County.

A warm discussion was overhear last week about the desision of the supreme court on the Columbia county case, when one of party made the enquirey. What attorney did McIntosh have to attend to their case in court?, and the answer was, they had a man from St. Peter. Did they get him out of the insane hospital and was he voilent?, asked the first speaker. Oh no was the answer I guess they got him out of one of the mild wards, where they are imaginers; that they are famous attorneys.

Down in Grant county O.T., there are two villages, (about the size of McIntosh and Fosston) that have been in a county seat fight for five years, and we take the folowing item from the Medford Patriot, just to let our county seat fighters see what opinion the Medford people have of their rival Village of Pond creek.

"A Pond Creek "swell"gave up the ghost and went up to where St. Peter sat at the gate. He was greted with, Thou canst not enter here, young sir, dost thou not remember the Sunday evenings with thine lady when thou shouldst have been in church?"So the wretched Pond Creekite slowly wended his way down to hell. The Devil met him at the door and said: Thou shalt not be let into my kingdom, for thou was once "rotted egged" out of town."The foresaken one raised his head and put up this pitiful wail:"Oh Lord! Do I have to go back to Pond Creek?"

Shaving in Egypt.

The earliest reference to shaving of the beord is found in Genesis xli, 14, where we read that Joseph on being summoned before the king shaved himself. There are several references as to shaving in Leviticus, ond the practice is alluded to in many other parts of the Bible. However, Egypt is the only country mentioned in the Bible where shaving was practiced. In all other countries at that time such an act would have been considered ignominious. Herodotus mentions that the Egyptians allowed their beards to grow when they were in mourning. So particular were they as to shaving at oll other times that to have neglected it was to make oneself the butt of coarse and ridiculous jokes.

Even in this day and age when the Egyptian wonts to convey the idea of a man of low condition and slovenly habits he always pictures to you a man with a full beard. This notion is very ancient, a fact attested by works of art found in burial monuments dating back thousands of years.

Hunting on Treacherous Soil.

Snipe shooting on an Irish bog is an excellent test of a gunner's skill and enthusiasm. An experienced bog shooter, if he finds himself going down throws himself flat on his side or back and at the same time throws his gun to his attendant, generally an Irish "gosson," who rarely fails to catch it. The sensation of being bogged is very unpleasant, but if a man throws himself on his side or back there is strength enough in the peat to support his body.—Forty-five Years of Southern Europe.

A traveler writes: "I have often been struck by the ease with which people in southern Europe are amused. In Paris 100,000 people go out to Longchamps for the Grand Prix race, and half a million people go out and line the roads on their return to see them come back. In Rome at the feast of the "Divino Amore" 5,000 people go out on the Campagna to a spot where once stood a temple to Venus and hold a picnic, while 50,000 go out and line the Appian Woy to see them return. In Madrid this peculiarity is even more marked. On the Puerta del Sol about a thousand people stand around and do nothing outdoors, while crowds of people sit indoors or lean from balconies to watch them do it. And in Seville the idle rich sit in clubs and cafes on the Sierpes to wotch the lower classes walk by, while the lower classes walk by to watch the idle rich sitting in the clubs and cafes on the Sierpes."

Heartless.

"Thinks it will be cultivated in Europe?"

"No; he's got an idea thot maybe she'll lose it on the woy."—Baltimore News.

Reading the Bible.

How long will it take a person to read the Old Testament with its 592,439 words, or the 181,258 words of the New Testament? And how long to read the 773,692 words of both?

A man can read understandingly 100 words every minute. By hurrying a man can read 150 words, or probably more. I will assume that a man can read critically—that is, carefully and understandingly—at least sixty words a minute. That is slow reading, being only 3,600 words an hour. Suppose a man should devote an hour a day to the Bible.

At this rate he would read 108,000 words in thirty days, or in a month's time. He would therefore read the Old Testament in less than six months, and he would finish the New Testament in less than two months.

A STARTLING TEST.

To save a life, Dr. T. G. Merritt, of No. Mehoopany, Pa., made a startling test resulting in a wonderful cure. He writes "a patient was attacked with violent hemorrhages caused by ulceration of the stomach. I had often found Electric Bitters excellent for acute stomach and liver troubles so I prescribed them. The patient gained from the first, and has not had an attact in 14 months." Electrict Bitters are are positively guarenteed for Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Constipation and kidney troubles. Try them. "A connoisseur, my boy," answered the great manufacturer, "is an eminent authority—an authority, in short, who admits that our goods are the best."

SENSATION.

There was a big sensation in Leesvill, Ind, when W. H. Brown of that place, who was rxpected to die, had his life saved by Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumptio. A Common Color.

The elder Dumas once was wearing the ribbon of a certain order, having recently been made a commandant, and an envious friend remarked upon it. "My dear fellow," he said, "that cordon is a wretched color! One would think it was your woolen vest that was showing!"

"Oh, no, my dear d'E——," replied Dumas with a smile. "You're mistaken. It's not a bad color; it is exactly the shade of the sour grapes in the fable."

Wig Wearing Very Old.

The ancient Egyptians all wore wigs, and the early Christians from A. D. 427 to A. D. 917 considered a false head covering a badge of distinction. This, too, in direct opposition to Tertullian, who in vain declared them devices and inventions of the devil, and Clement of Alexandria, who warned his hearers that when the sacred hands of the clergy were laid on their heads the blessing would not penetrate through the false hair.

A SENSE OF HUMOR.

IT IS A POTENT FACTOR IN KEEPING LIFE SWEET TO THE END.

One Need Not Be a Youngster In Mere Years to Have and Enjoy Fun. Age May Be Made as Green, as Jolly and as Gay as Giggling Youth.

"Take your fun while you may; you'll never be young but once," is a popular fallacy. It presupposes two things—that the young, because of youth, must have fun and that as soon as it is passed the capacity for enjoying it is over.

Some never grow old, and some are never young. Age lies in the individual and is not a question of dates.

Because a person ceases to be able to giggle at every remark, to bubble over with gleefulness at the slightest provocation, is no criterion that real mirthfulness has fled. The delicate sense of humor that may take the place of this showy buoyancy is far more to be prized.

A sense of humor is a potent factor in keeping life sweet to the end. A green and jolly old age is as jolly as a gay youth.

A sense of humor can be cultivated, and it should be as assiduously as forbearance, kindness or any of the cardinal virtues.

With the slipping away of youth despair asserts itself only when it is thought joy and mirth must flee also.

Are we sure that youth is so positively happy as it is supposed to be? Is there not a restlessness, an uncertainty, in the steps of a young girl that causes anxiety to be mingled with every move? She is full of theories, is imbued with ideals, but how to obtain the desired ends is a mooted question. She can never be as securely happy as is the married woman, or unmarried, who has, as it were, found her feet surely and knows how to get what she wants, or, at least, knows what she wants to get. There is a restless looking forward for pleasures each day, an unhappy killing of time before some promised joy arrives in the young that all who have passed it can painfully remember.

Girls are so imbued by the thoughtless, with the idea that all joy ceases with youth, that they have a feeling of commiseration for those who have bid farewell to this ephemeral period. Little do they realize how the study of all life, the enlarged power to feel, to see, to bear, to live, to enjoy, is the priceless gift of every added year.

There is something pitiful in watching the nervous grasp at joy in youth. We see constantly young girls literally afraid to loosen their hold on one day or one pleasure to fulfill an act of simple duty.

There is a not unfamiliar story of a young girl in a ballroom who was stopped as she walked about the floor on the arm of one of her partners by an old family friend, who inquired, with interest, for her mother.

"My dear, I'm glad I saw you," he repeated. "How's your mother?"

No reply. She only clung to the arm on which she leaned and was hastening by when the old gentleman, seeing her fear lest her escort should slip away, laid his hand on the young man's coat collar.

"My dear, I'll hold him," he cried, twinkling his eye wickedly. "How's your mother?"

He was not a very nice old gentleman, perhaps, but that he got a full share of fun out of life none could doubt, and the attitude of the young girl, holding fast to her prize lest he should escape, is exactly the attitude of youth that looks to the early days for all its share of joy.

I was in a group of young unmarried women, some nearing thirty, others who had just overstepped this critical date. They were expressing in graphic language their sensitiveness about their age.

I have taken some pains to hunt up statistics about the attractions and accomplishments of women who were past this age which I commend to their perusal. In the first place novelists are taking women between thirty and forty for their heroines. It is the woman who dares to have thoughts and has cultivated herself to the point of expressing them who commands friends and lovers who are worth while.

Helen of Troy was over forty when she perpetrated the most famous elopement on record, and as the siege of Troy lasted twenty years she could not have been very juvenile when the ill fortune of Paris restored her to her husband, who, it is said, received her with love and gratitude.

Cleopatra was past thirty when Antony fell under her spell, and her fascinations for him had not lessened when she died ten years later.

Pericles wedded Aspasia at the age of thirty-six, and she wielded undisputed influence over men for thirty years afterward.

Livia was thirty-three when she won the love of Augustus, over whom she maintained her ascendency to the last.

Louis XIV. wedded Mme. Maintenon when she was forty-three years of age.

Ninon, a celebrated beauty and wit of her day in France, captivated the love of the Abbe de Berias at the age of seventy-three.

Anna of Austria was thirty-eight when Buckingham and Richelieu were her devoted and jealous admirers.

There are women ready to die of senile debility at forty and women who first begin to taste the full perfection of womanhood's development at that age.

It may be noted in passing that old age must be full of mortification if the ghosts of wickedly spent time haunt the mind.—Susan W. Ball in Terre Haute Gazette.

WORKING WITHOUT SYSTEM

Lack of Mental Control and Concentration Is Fatal.

A man who does forcible work must dismiss a subject from his mind when he is done with it. This increases the grasp and power of the mind and keeps it clear for concentration upon the thing under consideration. Nothing can be accomplished with half a mind; you must concentrate or focus all your powers upon the thing you are doing. This you can never do when things by the score are half settled in your mind; continually obtruding themselves for consideration, and hindering the thought of present problems.

When you have anything in hand, settle it. Do not look at it, lay it down, then look at something else and lay that down also, but settle things as you go along. It is a thousand times better to make an occasional mistake than never to settle anything, but be always balancing, weighing and considering many things at a time.

It is vigorous thought which counts. A subject which is handled, so to speak, with the tips of the mental fingers, never amounts to anything. You must seize and grasp with all your might the thing you are attempting, and do it with vigor and enthusiasm, if you wish to bear the stamp of superiority when completed. Another defect in your work, which arises from the faults I have mentioned, is failure to complete things. Your work bears the impress of incompleteness, and seems always to lack something.

If you could overcome these defects you might be successful, for you really possess great ability, but lack definiteness. Evidently your mind has not been trained to exactitude. There has been carelessness in your education somewhere. It may be partly the fault of your teachers or your parents in not calling your attention in early life to these deficiencies. If this had been done the task of correction would have been easier than it is now, but the faults may still be overcome if proper diligence be used. I hope, for your own sake, that you will set about it with determination.—Success.

Curing an Otter Skin.

A full grown sea otter is from four to five feet long and perhaps a foot or more wide. When a hunter secures one he loosens the hide from the nose and head, and, without cutting it lengthwise at all, he pulls the skin down over the body, the hide being so elastic that this is not a difficult job. It is then stretched over a smooth board six and a half feet long, nine inches wide at one end and ten at the other end. Each end of this board is tapered to a point. Another board exactly the same size is then inserted, and the skin is stretched a foot or eighteen inches longer than its original length.

A third board half the length of the other is wedged in and the skin lightly tacked at the ends to hold it in place. If any flesh adheres to the skin it is then cut off, and the hide is cured and dried in this condition. In a few days it is taken off the boards and turned fur side out, when it is ready for market.

Child Study.

The study of child psychology is attracting ever increasing interest and enthusiasm. Problems in crime and insanity are becoming solvable. The right of the child to proper treatment, bodily and mental, is making a stronger appeal. It is coming to be better known just what treatment fosters a balanced development and just what physical conditions preclude the possibility of such development. Parents will know that the nervous, fractious child needs the services of a brain expert, possibly afterward of a skilled surgeon. It will be understood that stubbornness can be cured if rationally dealt with or made a nucleus of crime if murderously mismanaged. May every educated parent aid in this beneficent work by studying his own child fairly and impartially and collecting materials from his neighborhood that will give the students a broader outlook! Fair, honest statements from varying environments are of value. Read, study along this line and see what wonderful avenues of thought open up.—Health.

CHANGE OF LIFE.

Some sensible advice to women passing through this trying period.

The painful and annoying symptoms experienced by most women at this period of life are easily overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It is especially prepared to meet the needs of woman's system at the trying time of change of life.

It is no exaggeration to state that Mrs. Pinkham has over 5000 letters from women proving the great value of her medicine at such times.

"I wish to thank Mrs. Pinkham for what her medicine has done for me. My trouble was change of life. Four years ago my health began to fail, my head began to grow dizzy, my eyes pained me, and at times it seemed as if my back would fail me, had terrible pains across the kidneys. Hot flashes were very frequent and trying. A friend advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I have taken six bottles of it and am to-day free from those troubles. I cannot speak in high enough terms of the medicine. I recommend it to all and wish every suffering woman would give it a trial."—Bella Ross, 88 Montclair Ave., Roslindale, Mass.—$5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

It has been estimated that between 8,000,000 and 10,000,000 persons in the United States take a vacation every summer. They spend between $400,000,000 and $500,000,000 yearly in pursuit of pleasure. This is a great deal of money to spend during a vacation, but this season the expenditure per capita may be somewhat less on account of the low railroad rates offered by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway.

From July 1 to 10 this line will sell tickets to Colorado and return from Chicago for $25. This will enable many to enjoy their summer's outing at slight expense. Colorado summer resorts are cooler than the seashore.

For scenic beauty the Rocky Mountain region is famous the world round. The most attractive spots among these peaks are beautifully pictured and faithfully described in a new book just published by the passenger department of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway. It will be sent on receipt of six cents to pay postage.

Through train service, Chicago to Denver, every day via the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul and the Union Pacific line. F. A. Miller, General Passenger Agent, Chicago.

Nothing But Luck.

Enpeck—Meeker is certainly a lucky individual.

Slowun—What's the explanation?

"Last fall he tumbled into an open sewer and recovered $5,000 damages from the city and yesterday he fell out of a third-story window and lit on his mother-in-law."—Chicago Daily News.

Old Railroad Ticket Is Now a Curiosity.

Mrs. Laura E. Howey, librarian of the State Historical society, of Montana has received from C. E. Reese, of Virginia City, one of the tickets used in the early '60s on the stage lines of Montana. It is from Virginia City to New York, issued by the Wells Fargo company, the fare at that time being $150. The ticket is composed of eight coupons.

The first is by stage, supposedly to Salt Lake, there being left a blank space to be filled in. From there it is over the Union Pacific railroad to Omaha, by omnibus to Council Bluffs and from there to Chicago over the Chicago & North-Western Railway.

From Chicago the ticket is over the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne & Chicago to Pittsburg and from Pittsburg to Harrisburg over the Pennsylvania Central. From the latter place to New York the ticket calls for passage over the Allentown line to New York.

A DANGER SPOT.

A dangerous spot for pain is the small of the back; it tells of Kidney ills as do most pains and aches in the back. Kidney ills begin with backache and end with Diabetes, Dropsy, Bright's disease. Cure Kidney and Bladder troubles before they reach the serious stage. Read how easily it can be done.

W. J. Hill, of 40 South Union Street, Concord, N. C., proprietor of hardware and harness store, Justice of the Peace, and one of the best known residents of that city, says: "Doan's Kidney Pills proved a very efficient remedy in my case. I got a box at the Gibson Drug Store and used them for disordered kidneys and backache from which I had experienced a great deal of annoyance, trouble and pain. The kidney secretions had bothered me for a long while, were very irregular, dark colored and full of sediment. The Pills cleared it all up and I have not had an ache in my back since taking the last dose. My back is much stronger and my health generally is improved a great deal. I am glad to make a public endorsement of the Pills trusting that it may be the means of relieving some other sufferer."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mr. Hill will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists, price 50 cents per box.

A MAY MORNING.

What magic flutes are these that make
  Sweet melody at dawn,
And stir the dewy leaves to shake
  Their silver on the lawn?

What miracle of music wrought
  In shadowed groves is this?
All ecstasy of sound uncaught:
  Song's apotheosis!

The dreaming lilies lift their heads
  To listen and grow wise;
The fragrant roses from their beds
  In sudden beauty rise:

Enraptured, on the eastern hill,
  A moment, halts the sun;
Day breaks; and all again is still:—
  The thrushes' song is done!

A Warning Conveyed

Advice of Knob County Native Regarding Trapping of Chicken Thieves.

"I HAIN'T spoke to old Jason not since he shot the big tame deer o' mine right in its own pastur' and lugged it away, knowin' it was mine and that he hadn't no more right to do it than he had to shoot one o' my cows," said the man from the Knob country, "and yit now he goes and summonses me to be defendant in a lawsuit he's bringin' ag'in me for slander! Hain't spoke to him nor mentioned his name in better than four years, and here he goes and summonses me to be the defendant in a suit for slander!

"Josiah come in t'other day and he was consider'ble glum. I asked him what was achin', and he says:

"'It's them chickens o' mine,' he says. 'Half a dozen o' my best ones was stole last night. Half a dozen was stole the night afore that, and I s'pose that half a dozen 'll go ag'in to-night, and then I won't have none left,' he says. 'That's what the ailin' is, Dan'l,' says he.

"Josiah is old Jason's son-in-law, and a consarned nice young feller he is, too, for all o' that. And Jason lives neighbor to Josiah.

"'I'm goin' to put a b'ar trap in that hen coop to-night,' says he, 'and jest find out who it is that's unpopulatin' of it,' says he.

"I sot and thunk awhile, and then I says:

"'Josiah,' I says, 'before you set a trap for your chicken thief, let me tell you a little recollection about somethin' that happened in the Knob country somethin' like a good many years ago. Then,' says I, 'if you want to set your trap, why set it. It won't make no difference to me,' I says.

"'The time I'm referrin' to,' says I, 'Sackrider & Jupp was in pardnership in the shingle splittin' and ladder makin' business, over back o' the Knob. Sackrider had a daughter Jinny. She wan't more than 18 when this happened, but she could fill out a calico dress like sugarcake dough run into a mould.

"'Sackrider's pardner, Judd, was a tiptop, strappin' youngster of 22 or so. He was an urphan on his mother's side, but his poor old father, Abner, was left to be a consolation and a comfort to him. The old man lived on the boy, and had the rheumytis most o' the time, with now and then a call from plumbago in the back, and similar cheerful ailin's.

"'Abner was a fine old man, but there was folks mean enough to say that though he was always sufferin' terrible when his boy was around—which the youngster's name was Caleb—he was chipper enough when the boy was away in the woods, shingle splittin' and could walk three miles to the tavern and absorb more rum and tanzy that any other citizen o' that bailiwick. That's what there was folks mean enough to say about Abner, but you'll find jest setch meddlin' folks everywheres, Josiah, everywhere.'

"'Caleb, he never knowed of their talk, though, and was always worryin' about his poor old father, and feelin' sorry for him, and saying that he was afeared he wasn't doin' enough to make the old man comfortable on his way to t'other shore.

"'The ground that Sackrider's daughter Jinny walked on was worth somethin' like $10,000 a squire inch to Caleb and the price mark that Jinny put on Billy was so high that the Queen o' Sheby couldn't a carried enough treasures and things in her chist to pay it, and setch bein' the case, of course, it was a settled thing, all over the destrict that them two was goin' to marry one another when the time come right.

"'There was considerable o' sheep stealin' and chicken stealin', and setch pastimes as them going on back o' the Knob in them days, and nobody was more dead sot ag'in 'em than Sackrider's daughter Jinny.

"'"Why, says Jinny to Caleb one day, "I wouldn't think no more o' shootin' a sheep thief," says she, "than I would o' shootin' a skunk, and I git mad," says she, "every time I think o' one!"

"Caleb he said that he did, too, and that he didn't want nothin' to do with anyone that belonged to a sheep thief.

"'"Me neither," says Jinny. "I'd as soon tetch p'isen!" says she.

"'Along early that spring a man came through there buyin' up sheep. Caleb had some o' the choicest kind o' sheep, but none of 'em was for sale.

"'The sheep buyer he sort o' deputized Uncle 'Lijer, at the tavern, to pick up all he could and forward 'em to him at the Eddy. Now, somehow or other, of all the sheep that had been stole in the deestrict the most of 'em had always been took for Caleb, and somehow when chickens was levied on, Caleb's seemed to be the favorite brand o' chickens that was called for.

"'And after the sheep-buyer went away, Caleb's sheep kep' a-goin' more than ever they did. So Caleb he jest made up his mind he'd fix a way to find out who it was that was walkin' off with his mutton, and put a stop to it.

"'Actin' on his idee he drove what sheep was left into an old cabin he had in the woods, about a mile from his clearin', and shut 'em up. Then he went home and told his poor old father, who was sufferin' tremendous with the rheumytiz that day, what he had done with the sheep.

"'"That's a good idee," says Abner. "If they won't be safe now," says he, "you mowt jest as well turn 'em loose and let 'em run from Dan to Beersheby," says he.

"'"And more than that," says Caleb, "I'm gointer to set the b'ar trap right in front o' the cabin door," says he.

"'Poor old Abner he winced with a twang o' the rheumytiz, and when he got over it he says to Caleb:

"'"That's another good idee," says he. "Only don't set the trap in front o' the door. Set it under the window. If the thief comes he'll be sure you've got the door locked and he'll go to the winder to climb in," says Abner. "Set the trap under the winder," says he.

"'Caleb said he would, and along in the afternoon he started with the trap for the cabin. On the way there he gut another idee. He wouldn't set the ba'r trap at the cabin. He'd rig up a dead fall door that'd come down with a bang and ketch on the bottom the minute the thief opened the real door to the cabin and stepped inside.

"'Then he'd nail the winder down and as the dead fall door couldn't be opened from the inside, he'd have the thief snug in the cabin and his leg wouldn't be all smashed by a trap. Caleb rigged up setch a door.

"'The work took so long that Caleb didn't git back home 'till way after dark, and his sufferin' old father had gone to bed, so Caleb didn't disturb him to tell him about it.

"'Next mornin' bright and early, Caleb went over to the cabin to see if anybody had been circumvented in tryin' to walk off with a sheep or two o' hisn, and sure enough the dead-fall door was down.

"'"Ha, ha!" says Caleb. "I've got the sheep-stealin' citizen, have I?"

"'He yanked the ketch of the door open and riz the deadfall. Josiah, who do you s'pose walked out o' the cabin? Caleb's poor old father!

"'Now, most fathers, after being treated like that, would have been so tremendous mad that they'd have made the fur fly around there, and no mistake, but sufferin' old Abner wasn't mad. He was jest hurt.

"'His poor old heart was panged. He looked in sorrow at Caleb, and he says:

"'"Caleb," says he, "I'd never 'a' thunk it of you. An' only son, too!" he says. "And trappin' for his poor old father as a sheep thief! "If you didn't want me around no longer, Caleb," he says, "I'd 'a' gone fur, fur away, if you'd only give me a hint. But, no matter. You needn't git no warrant. I'll go give myself up. You've cooked the evidence ag'in me, all right, and my gray hairs'll go down in sorrow to the county seat and rest in the jail."

"'Caleb he jest bellered and bellered, to think that Abner should imagine for a minute that he s'pected him o' bein' a sheep thief.

"'"Tain't so much what you've done to me, Caleb," says poor old Abner, "but what'll Jinny say? Will Jinny be likely to take up with the son of a sufferin' father that you've gone and made out to be a sheep thief? She won't do it, Caleb! In aimin' at your poor old father I'm afeerd that you've put the ball under your own foreshoulder, Caleb," he says.

"'This made Caleb feel worse and worse to see what a terrible thing he had gone and done, and he begged of his sufferin' parent to tell him what he could do to undo it.

"'"Well," says Abner, the tears runnin' down his cheeks, "I can't never feel the same to'rds you as I use' to, Caleb," says he, "but seein' as you're conscience-struck, I won't disgrace you by exposin' what you've done, provided you give me $100 in cash and pay my stagin' to Sprout Hill, over in Jersey, where I've wanted to spend my closin' days for a long time back," says Abner.

"'And Caleb, sorrowin', done it. And he never sot no more traps for sheep thieves. And the funny part of it was that he never lost no more sheep nor chickens, which he said was more than he deserved, after treatin' his poor old father the way he did, when he had got up and gone 'way over to the cabin in the night, sufferin' as he was with the rheumatiz, to watch ag'in the comin' o' thieves and chase 'em away, not wantin' 'em to git in the jaws o' the big b'ar trap that he thought was sot under the winder.

"'Caleb and Jinny got married, but see what a narrow escape Caleb had from losin' her, jest by trappin' for sheep thieves!

"'Of course,' says I, 'there 'hain' no setch danger in your tryin' a b'ar trap in your chicken coop, if you want,' I says; 'but b'ar traps clutches tremendous hard, and there's them a livin' neighbors to you that—well,' I says, 'you've heerd my little recollection o' the Knob country, and if you want to set a trap, why set it! That's all!' I says.

"Josiah sot and thunk a spell, and then went home—I hain't spoke to old Jason nor mentioned his name in better than four years, and here he goes and summonses me to be the defendant in a suit for slander he's bringin' ag'in me! Must be that somehow he must 'a heerd somthin' or other and took it personal!"

TOO TRUSTFUL.

Described His Lost Spectacles Too Accurately for the Reward Offered.

A great many stories are told of the late Thomas Brackett Reed, many of which, doubtless, are clever inventions, but the following, related by a friend of the dead statesman, sounds enough like him to be true, says Youth's Companion.

The friend, while traveling in a sleeping car, had been careless enough to leave his gold-framed spectacles lying for a few moments on a shelf in the wash-room, and when he went to look for them they were gone. He immediately put up a written notice in two or three places, describing the spectacles and offering a reward of one dollar for their recovery, but to no purpose. He never saw them again.

He related the incident one day to Mr. Reed.

"When you described the spectacles and offered a dollar to the finder," asked the latter, in his accustomed drawl, "were you careful to say they were gold?"

"Certainly."

"Well, that's the reason you didn't get them," rejoined Mr. Reed. "The millennium hasn't come yet."

A FALSE ALARM.

Singular Source of a Startling Rumor of the Destruction of New York.

From Mexico City there comes in a private letter this story of how the rumor became current there in April of the destruction of New York, reports the Times:

"On the afternoon of the 3d inst. there was a rumor here of a terrible earthquake and cyclone in New York. Everybody talked about it, and each one had a worse tale to tell; half New York was destroyed, with 1,000,000 people. Think of my anxiety! I was afraid to telegraph. At last I made up my mind to do so, but when I reached the cable office they showed me a telegram just received in reply to an inquiry, which read: 'Not a word of truth in it.' I was greatly relieved. It seems that two Spaniards who live here and who had been on a visit to Europe returned to New York that day. They are known among their friends here as 'Earthquake' and 'Cyclone,' and are besides great eaters. One of their friends in New York telegraphed to a friend here:

"'Earthquake and Cyclone arrived; have swallowed up half New York.'

"This was the cause of the whole thing."

A Sensational Case.

Alston, Mich., May 25th.—Houghton County has never witnessed a more striking medical case than that of Mr. James Culet of this place.

Mr. Culet had spent a small fortune with the best physicians in the county and in addition to this he has tried every medicine he could hear of.

He had a very bad case of Rheumatism and Kidney Trouble, from which he had suffered for twenty years. Nothing he could get seemed to do him any good, and he was gradually growing worse.

He has no Rheumatism now and explains it thus:

"One day I happened to see an advertisement of Dodd's Kidney Pills and decided to try them.

"I made up my mind to give them a good fair trial, as my case was a very bad one and was of over twenty years' standing.

"I used altogether 42 boxes and I can truthfully say that they have driven out every trace of the Rheumatism.

"I feel like a new man, and I can and do most heartily recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills for Rheumatism and Kidney Trouble."

An Undertaker's Advertisement.

A man in clerical garb was handing out cards to the home-going crowd at the entrance to the Brooklyn bridge one evening recently. On the face of the card was an identification blank, in case of accidents. The plan looked easy and convenient, and most persons tucked the cards in their pockets. When they got home they found on the reverse side the advertisement of an undertaker who advertised a new scheme in burials. The indorsement of a clergyman read: "His tact and painstaking preparation at the committal service in the provision of tent, matting, chairs and a patent lowering device, go far toward making the last moments with the dear departed as comfortable as possible."—N. Y. Times.

Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio

Gentlemen:—"A few years ago I had to give up social life entirely, as my health was completely broken down. The doctor advised a complete rest for a year. As this was out of the question for a time, I began to look for some other means of restoring my health.

"I had often heard of Peruna as an excellent tonic, so I bought a bottle to see what it would do for me, and it certainly took hold of my system and rejuvenated me, and in less than two months I was in perfect health, and now when I feel worn out or tired a dose or two of Peruna is all that I need."—Mrs. J. E. Finn.

Catarrh Causes Female Diseases.

America is the land of nervous women. The great majority of nervous women are so because they are suffering from some form of female disease. By far the greatest number of female troubles are caused directly by catarrh. These women despair of recovery. Female trouble is so common, so prevalent, that they accept it as almost inevitable. The greatest obstacle in the way of recovery is that they do not understand that it is catarrh which is the source of their illness.

Peruna cures catarrh wherever located.

SAD DEVASTATION.

North Topeka, Kansas, Is Nearly Wiped Out by Fire and Flood, Causing Great Loss of Life and Terrible Suffering.

Topeka, Kan., May 31.—North Topeka, where 10,000 people were quartered a few hours ago, is now a mass of ruins, covered with a raging flood. A fire started yesterday afternoon by a live wire and quickly spread. At 3 o'clock two blocks of buildings between Morris and Gordon streets, on the west side of Kansas avenue, were burning. As the buildings were surrounded by water there was no way of fighting the flames.

The situation grew more deplorable every moment. The current of the flood grew stronger and the flames increased. Four hundred houses soon burned and the whole of North Topeka was threatened. As near as can be learned between 150 and 200 persons are dead. Most of these were burned to death.

Reporters who arrived just after midnight from the river say that the water is yet rising. An unconfirmed report from Wamego and Manhattan, west of Topeka says another rise is coming down the Republican and Blue rivers.

Fire Chief Wilmarth says that the fire on the east side of Kansas avenue in North Tokeka is rapidly taking the remaining buildings.

The fire went toward the wind and this served to check its progress, but much burning wreckage floating about made the destruction of the remaining houses certain.

People on roofs of houses were heard calling frantically for help.

It is said that two boats loaded with people were swamped and that a dozen or more persons were drowned.

Thorey, another suburb of Topeka, located northwest of the city, near the reform school was inundated.

The Jackson school house sheltered 100 people. They entered the building before the water became so high, and then could not escape.

Topeka, Kan., June 1.—There is ground for hope that the worst has passed. The five-miles-wide Kansas river is settling back into its rightful channel.

Not a square foot of land can be seen in any direction. There is but small chance of any of the residences being left standing at the end of the flood.

Sherry, Oakland and the region about the reform school are all under rushing waters.

Leading men have made a careful examination of the flood and all its conditions, and as a result of their investigation they give 250 as the probable number of lives lost. A more conservative estimate places the number of dead at 175. The higher figure is as apt to be correct as the lower. It is merely a matter of guessing. Members of rescuing parties tell of seeing people drop from houses, only to be swept away by the flood, and others tell of men who, terrified at the approach of fire, dropped into the water, where they sank and did not reappear.

This estimated number of dead does not include the large number classed as missing, who cannot otherwise be accounted for. Neither does it include those who are supposed to have lost their lives in the fire. In the latter class there is absolutely no means of arriving at even an approximate number of victims.

BRAVE ARMY NURSES

They Are Entitled to a Niche in the Temple of Fame.

Grizzled Veteran Proudly Declares His Love for the Angels of the Battlefield and the Camp Hospital.

[Special Washington Letter.]

It is an old saying, and not devoid of truth, that "republics are ungrateful." It is particularly true that people never give their full meed of grateful appreciation to those who go forth to battle for their country.

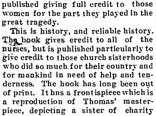
The time will soon be here when the millions of young men and women of the land will make gay holiday of the day set apart for the decoration of the graves of the soldiers of the great civil war; but only the aged and tottering will make of that day what was intended it should be by the statesmen who enacted the legislation making it a national holiday. It was expected that forever the people would gather annually in grateful and tearful memory of those who fell in battle or died of disease, that this nation should remain inseparable.

But while there is declining appreciation and gratitude for all that was suffered and done by the soldiers there seems to be almost an entire forgetfulness of the angels of the battlefield, those brave women and true who served their country in danger of shot and shell, as well as in the presence of contagion and infection, in the hospitals and on the terrible field of carnage.

One of the eminent veterans of that great strife recently led the narrator to the Congressional library to see a book buried deep down in the numberless tomes; a book only a soldier would discover, entitled "Angels of the Battlefield," a volume devoted to paying tribute to the noble band of women Samaritans, the army nurses. The old soldier, who is an omnivorous reader, and exceptionally well informed, stated that this is the only volume ever published giving full credit to those women for the part they played in the great tragedy.

This is history, and reliable history. The book gives credit to all of the nurses, but is published particularly to give credit to those church sisterhoods who did so much for their country and for mankind in need of help and tenderness. The book has long been out of print. It has a frontispiece which is a reproduction of Thomas' masterpiece, depicting a sister of charity lying wounded upon a battlefield, supported by one of her sisterhood, each wearing the peculiar white widespreading headgear of their order and surrounded by sympathizing soldiers. The veteran, as he gazed at the picture, said: "In common with thousands of others, I looked for the white bonnet as one would look for an angel; and she came to me."

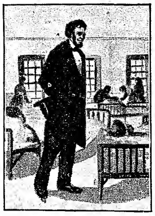
Inasmuch as this volume cannot be purchased, you will undoubtedly be interested in having some of its best points laid before you. In the preface the author says: "The sisters do not have reunions nor campfires to keep alive the memories of the most bloody lustrum in our history, but their war stories are as heroic, besides being far more edifying than the veterans usually tell.



WOUNDED ON BATTLEFIELD.

"The chivalrous men who wore the blue and the gray, who caused American manhood and valor to be known and respected the world over have on many occasions and in various ways given expression to the esteem and affection in which they hold the women who devoted their lives to the sick and wounded. The ranks of war sisters have been gradually thinned out by death until very few of them remain, resting in their convent homes, tranquilly awaiting the final summons to the land where conflict is unknown."

Four sisterhoods took part in the civil war, the Sisters of Charity, Sisters of Mercy, Sisters of St. Joseph and Sisters of the Holy Cross. The book containing the history of their deeds is replete with stirring incidents, one of them being particularly pathetic. Sister Mary Lucy of the Sisters of Charity of Nazareth, richly endowed by nature, was the music teacher in St. Mary's academy, Paducah, Kentucky. She volunteered as one of the hospital nurses. She was assigned to some of the most severe typhoid fever cases, and the manner in which she nursed these patients won for her unqualified praise from doctors and attendants. In the latter part of December of the first year of the war the sister contracted the fever from one of her convalescent patients, and in a very few days she died. She was given a soldier's burial. Several files of soldiers marched with muffled drums and noiseless tread to the Ohio river, where the coffin was placed on a boat under a flag of truce and carried back to Paducah. A guard of devoted soldiers watched the coffin day and night from the time the body was taken to the hospital until it was buried in consecrated ground. At night the tender-hearted warriors kept their vigils around the coffin with torches made of pine knots.



LINCOLN IN THE HOSPITAL.

Three of the sisters who occupied most responsible positions became especially conspicuous because of their superior attainments. One of these was Sister Anthony, who served all through the war and won enduring laurels at the battle of Shiloh. Another was Sister Gonzaga, who had charge of the Satterlee hospital at Philadelphia, where upwards of 50,000 sick and wounded soldiers were treated. Both of these sisters were Sisters of Charity. Another was Mother Angela, of the Holy Cross order, who gave up a flourishing academy at South Bend, Indiana, to devote herself to the care of the soldiers. Mother Angela was a cousin of James G. Blaine, and she always maintained great admiration for that great statesman. Gen. Grant always spoke of her as a remarkable woman. She and Gen. Grant had their first meeting at Cairo, Illinois, where Grant had his headquarters in an old bank building. Mother Angela went there to report for duty. Grant was sitting behind two iron bars, writing busily and as busily smoking. As soon as he was notified of the presence of Mother Angela, he laid aside his cigar, came forward bareheaded, apologized for the tobacco smoke, and said: "I fully appreciate the value of your services, and will do everything I can for you. I will give orders that you do not want for anything." And he did. Whatever Mother Angela called for was always promptly forthcoming.

One story concerning President Lincoln is told in the book, in which is narrated the visit of the president to Stanton hospital, in Washington City. "None of the sisters had ever seen the president, but when a tall, angular man, with a suspicion of a stoop about the shoulders, slowly sauntered up the path leading to the hospital, the sisters intuitively knew that it was President Lincoln. The homely, wrinkled face, with its care-worn appearance, and the potent, almost pathetic eyes, appealed at once to the tender sensibilities of the sisters. They knew little and cared less about the merits of either the northern or southern side of the bloody controversy, but they had a keen appreciation of human suffering and human sympathy, and their hearts went forth to this plain man, who so uncomplainingly carried the woes of the nation upon his shoulders.

"The president went from cot to cot, shaking hands with the poor patients, addressing some of them with the jocular manner which he frequently employed, to conceal the anguish caused by seeing so much suffering. He remained at the hospital for some time, and with the trained eyes of a man of affairs he observed the cleanliness of the place, and did not fail to notice all the sisters were doing for the relief and comfort of the patients. When he departed he shook hands with each of the sisters, and congratulated them upon the good work they were doing."

There are stories concerning what the sisters did for generals, and also of what they did for private soldiers in extreme cases. There are stories, also, of what they did for the sufferers on southern fields, on the other side, where poverty caused greater privation and suffering, because facilities were lacking.

Columbia County, which was a part of Polk county, was defeated while Clearwater was on the same basis carried.

·The Mallard Call.

All the difference was in the lawyers, that argued the case in the supreme court. It is our private opinion publicly expressed, that if A.R.Holston had been the attorney in the Columbia county case the result would have been the same as it was in the Clearwater County case.

It appears that the road and bridg law of the last legislature, by which the state fund is divided among the henchmen of local members instead of being spent by a state commission for the public benefit, as the constitution provides, was so carelessly drawn that it is unconstitutinal. Here is an opportunity for the good roads association to do a great public service by applying for an injunction against the distribution of the loot. If the state auditor chose to take the responsibility his predecessor took in the case of the beet sugar bounty, he could refuse the disbursements. But it would be better to proceed through the courts, and the Good Roads association is just the body to do it. The nature of the whole bill is plain from the Hennepin county appropriation of $1.200 to two local politicians of $300 to build a bridge. This is the way to get a state commission next session.

Minneapolis Tribune.

The above was undoubtedly written by one of the Tribune editors that has not visited the northern part of state, and does us an injustice, by an attempt to convey the impression that the money is to be used as "loot", insted of repairing roads. In the Polk county appropriation we find the sum of $1.000 to be used in repairing the roads on the township lines between Hill River and Eden and Chester and Gully, under the supervision of John Hilstad S.S.Stadsvold and Sivert Larson. Mr.Hillstad and Stadsvold are prominet business men of Fosston that have taken an active interest in the building and improvement of roads in this part of Polk county, and would see to it that this money was expended to repaire the road, as they would rather add to the amount than to take from it.

Since the trial of Doc. Ames the Minneapolis editors seem to have boodle and "loot", on the brain, but as good a paper as The Tribune, should not allow them space to abuse the honest intententions of those that are trying to build good roads.

A Horse's Strength.

The average weight of a horse is 1,000 pounds; his strength is equivalent to that of five men. In a horse mill moving at three feet per second, track twenty-five feet diameter, he exerts with the machine the power of four and a half horses. The greatest amount a horse can pull in a horizontal line is 900 pounds, but he can only do this momentarily; in continued exertion probably half of this is the limit.

The Sacred Plants of the Druids.

The Druids held many plants sacred, as, for instance, vervain, selago, mistletoe, and among trees the oak and the rowan. There is [illegible] no serious doubt as to the identity of any of these except the second (selago), which is generally thought to be the club moss. Oak mistletoe is certainly rare, and that may have been the reason why it had an especially sacred character, but it does exist.

Blood Corpuscles.

The war between the white corpuscles of the blood and the microbes of disease was first described by the Russian pathologist, Metchnikoff. While devoting himself to the study of inflammations he in each case noted the presence of white cells in the blood currents in abnormal numbers. Inside these white cells he invariably found the specific microbe of the disease under consideration. It seemed that the big corpuscles were devouring the poisonous microbes. Sometimes the number taken up by a corpuscle was too great, and it died as a result. If this overcoming of the white corpuscles by the microbes was general the patient died.

Emerson the American.

In Emerson as an American, as a patriot, we of the new world have an inheritance peculiarly our own which will grow richer with the spending, for the spending of such an inheritance means that we ourselves be spent for the republic. Far as we may go beyond our present failures, beyond what Morley calls this our corrupt period, far as we may go on the line of our nobler national accomplishments (and amid all our discouragements we must not forget these nobler accomplishments), far as we may travel in the pathway of our true ideals, still before us and ever higher on that pathway will be seen the beckoning figure, will be heard the urging and inspiring voice of Emerson.—Century.

A STARTLING TEST.

To save a life, Dr.T. G.Merritt, of No. Mehoopany, Pa., made a startling test resulting in a wonderful cure. He writes "a patient was attacked with violent hemorrhages caused by ulceration of the stomach. I had often found Electric Bitters excellent for acute stomach and liver troubles so I prescribed them. The patient gained from the first, and has not had an attact in 14 months." Electrict Bitters are are positively guarenteed for Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Constipation and kidney troubles. Try them. Tortillas.

Tortillas, the Mexican substitute for wheat bread, are made from selected corn. The kernels are boiled soft in limewater and after being thoroughly washed are rubbed between the hands to remove the outer husk. They are then ground while wet to a soft mass with stones or a peanut butter mill, patted into thin cakes, baked on a dry griddle and eaten while still hot.

Babies' Crying.

The instant a child is born it cries. This is a providential expansion of the lungs and not, as many suppose, an indication of suffering or pain. Well developed, well formed and healthy babies cry lustily at birth, while the weak child has a feeble little cry. For the first few months the cry is tearless, and it is not till the second year that lachrymal or tear ducts are fully developed. After that there is a copious shedding, and a very slight cause will lead to crying.

Definition of a Baby.

"What is a baby?" is asked, and then the following complicated definition is given: The prince of wails, a dweller in Lapland, the morning caller, noonday crawler, midnight brawler, only possession that never excites envy, a key that opens the hearts of all classes, the rich and the poor alike, in all countries; a stranger with unspeakable cheek that enters the house without a stitch to his back and is received with open arms by all.

The Stableman's Plan.

On one occasion a famous clergyman witnessed the tact of a stableman in coaxing a recalcitrant colt into his stall and soothing him until completely reconciled. Having expressed his congratulations, he remarked with a touch of melancholy:

"I wish I could get the workingmen of my parish into church as easily as you get your young horses into their stalls, Thomas."

"Well, sir," said Thomas, "I should think it could be done, providin' you understands the natur of 'em an' gives your mind to it."

The cleric smiled. Thomas might manage horses, but workingmen—that was a different matter.

"Perhaps you'll think it over and let me know your method," he finally suggested.

Thomas promised and, being appealed to a few days later, was ready with his "method."

"And you think you have hit on a plan to get workingmen to church, Thomas?"

"I think so, sir."

"And how would you?"

"Blindfold 'em an' back 'em in," said Thomas.—Kansas City Independent.

OYSTER CULTURE.

Bivalves Are Planted, Cultivated and Harvested Like Other Crops.

The average citizen may not know that oysters are planted, cultivated and harvested like any other crop, a person who engages in this industry being known as an oyster planter. Thousands of acres of oysters are under cultivation in Hampton Roads, which during the harvesting season is often literally alive with the reaping machines of the oyster men.

When the oysters are from one and a half to two years old they are usually large enough to be sold, and as a rule part of them are sold at this age and the balance in the third or fourth year, after which time the ground is allowed to rest a year before being planted again. Great care must be exercised in the selection of bottoms for oyster planting if the planter would be financially successful.

The largest packer in Hampton opens from 100,000 to 200,000 bushels of oysters in a year. In this house as the men open the oysters they drop the shells on an inclined plane, from which they slide into a trough and are carried along by scrapers attached to an endless chain, called a "shell conveyor," which takes them without further labor to the shell-pile in the yard. When a shucker has filled his gallon measure he carries it to the strainer, where the oysters are strained and measured. They are then emptied into large casks kept full of fresh water, by means of which any loose shell or grit is washed out. From these casks the oysters are dipped into a second strainer and when separated from the water are again measured and packed.

The shells are sold for from 1 to 3 cents a bushel and are used extensively by oyster planters for the propagation of oysters. They are placed in small piles on grounds found suitable for the purpose, where the spat or small oyster will attach itself to the shells. They are also used for making shell lime and for building the excellent shell roads found in some parts of the Virginia peninsula.—Philadelphia North American.

TOLD IN A DREAM.

The Message That a Dying Girl Conveyed to Her Brother.

Here is an interesting, if somewhat "creepy," story which reaches us from a correspondent upon whose good faith we can rely: A certain young lady, whom we will call Mary A., was recovering from illness. The doctor had declared her to be out of danger, and her friends and relatives were rejoicing in the fact. Nevertheless, Miss A., receiving a visit one day from a sister, gravely assured her that she was going to die. The sister poohpoohed the idea and treated it as an invalid's fancy. Miss A., however, with the utmost calmness, repeated her statement. She was certain that she would die that night and begged her sister to fetch her parents and other relatives to say goodby. Thinking to humor her, the sister complied. One person was absent from this strange family gathering—a brother, who was at sea and was expected home in a week or two. "But it does not matter," Miss A. quietly observed. "I saw him last night in a dream and said goodby to him in his cabin." Before the sun rose again Miss A.'s prediction had come true; she was dead. That, however, is not the strangest part of this weird story. When in due time the sailor brother reached port he was met by his other sister who began to tell him the sad news. "Ah!" he interrupted, "you need not tell me! Mary is dead. I knew it, for she came to me one night in my dreams and told me she was going to die and wanted to say goodby." On comparing dates it was found that the dreams were dreamed on the selfsame night.—London News.

The Human Interrogation Point.

"Mamma," said the human interrogation point, "who knows the most—teacher or papa?"

"Why, on general topics your father is better informed, Johnny."

"Well, does papa know more than the minister?"

"Of things worldly, yes. Your father, Johnny, is a very well informed man, as I hope you will be some day."

"Does papa know more than you, mamma?"

"Johnny, when will you ever get over the habit of asking a long string of foolish questions? Run away and have your tea at once."—New York Press.

Unnecessary Worry.

"What's the matter with you?" asked the political boss.

"I'm worrying about what my constituents will say to me about my vote on that bill you made me put through last night."

"Say, when did you become responsible to your constituents? I want you to understand that I'm the one who is expected to do the explaining when there's any to be done."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Edam Cheeses In History.

"The famous Edam cheeses which grace the table of every well kept hotel and restaurant in the country," said a prominent grocery man, "are often a subject of inquiry as to what they are and whence they come. Their round shape, with that peculiar reddish purple tinge, is a marked contrast with all other cheese productions of the world. There is nothing new fashioned about them, for if colonial tradition is true Mynheer Peter Heyis of Edam, Holland, who brought a lot in the hold of his Dutch ship in 1631 to the Delaware river, so tickled the fancy of the Indians with these odd looking articles that he bought a large tract of land, afterward named the Valley of the Swans, from the redskins with a barrel of his Edam cheeses. After the cheese had been devoured the gentle aborigines repented themselves of their rash speculation and a month later massacred the entire Dutch colony."

Irish Wit.

I must admit that Irish wit is often of the most mordant and even sardonic kind. Was there ever a more sardonic stroke of description than that O'Connell gave of Peel's bloodlessness? "His smile was like the silver plate on a coffin."

Of another and lower quality, but good of its kind, is the following fishwife's sarcasm: A friend of mine was waiting his turn to be served in a fish shop while a little wizened old gentleman priced every fish in the shop. "How much is this—and this—and this—and this?" etc., till the exasperated shopwoman exclaimed: "Ah! Go on out of that wid ye! It isn't fish ye want, but information!"—London Answers.

Child Study.

The study of child psychology is attracting ever increasing interest and enthusiasm. Problems in crime and insanity are becoming solvable. The right of the child to proper treatment, bodily and mental, is making a stronger appeal. It is coming to be better known just what treatment fosters a balanced development and just what physical conditions preclude the possibility of such development. Parents will know that the nervous, fractious child needs the services of a brain expert; possibly afterward of a skilled surgeon. It will be understood that stubbornness can be cured if rationally dealt with or made a nucleus of crime if murderously mismanaged. May every educated parent aid in this beneficent work by studying his own child fairly and impartially and collecting materials from his neighborhood that will give the students a broader outlook! Fair, honest statements from varying environments are of value. Read, study along this line and see what wonderful avenues of thought open up.—Health.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

The relation of woman's nerves and generative organs is very close; consequently nine tenths of the nervous prostration, nervous despondency, "the blues," sleeplessness, and nervous irritability of women arise from some derangement of the organism which makes her a woman. Herein we prove conclusively that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will quickly relieve all this trouble.

Details of a Severe Case Cured in Eau Claire, Wis.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham: — I have been ailing from female trouble for the past five years. About a month ago I was taken with nervous prostration, accompanied at certain times before menstruation with fearful headaches. I read one of your books, and finding many testimonials of the beneficial effects of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, experienced by lady sufferers, I commenced its use and am happy to state that after using a few bottles I feel like a new woman, aches and pains all gone.

"I am recommending your medicine to many of my friends, and I assure you that you have my hearty thanks for your valuable preparation which has done so much good. I trust all suffering women will use your Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Minnie Tietz, 620 First Ave., Eau Claire, Wis. (May 28, 1901).

Nothing will relieve this distressing condition so surely as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; it soothes, strengthens, heals and tones up the delicate female organism. It is a positive cure for all kinds of female complaints; that bearing down feeling, backache, displacement of the womb, inflammation of the ovaries, and is invaluable during the change of life, all of which may help to cause nervous prostration.

Read what Mrs. Day says:

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham: — I will write you a few lines to let you know of the benefit I have received from taking your remedies. I suffered for a long time with nervous prostration, backache, sick headache, painful menstruation, pain in the stomach after eating, and constipation. I often thought I would lose my mind. I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and was soon feeling like a new woman. I cannot praise it too highly. It does all that it is recommended to do, and more.

"I hope that every one who suffers as I did will give Lydia E. Pinkham's remedies a trial."—Mrs. Marie Day, Eleanora, Pa. (March 25, 1901.)

Free Medical Advice to Women.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all women to write to her for advice. You need not be afraid to tell her the things you could not explain to the doctor — your letter will be seen only by women and is absolutely confidential. Mrs. Pinkham's vast experience with such troubles enables her to tell you just what is best for you, and she will charge you nothing for her advice.

Another Case of Nervous Prostration Cured.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham: — Allow me to express to you the benefit I have derived from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Before I started to take it I was on the verge of nervous prostration. Could not sleep nights, and I suffered dreadfully from indigeston and headache. I heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's wonderful medicine, and began its use, which immediately restored my health.

"I can heartily recommend it to all suffering women."—Mrs. Bertha E. Deirkins, 25½ Lapidge St., San Francisco, Cal. (May 21, 1901.)

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Race Program.

The race program for the next state fair is beginning to attract attention among the people interested in horse affairs. Notwithstanding certain insinuations regarding horse racing without a pool-selling adjunct, which were made during the late session of the state legislature, it is a fact that the races at the Minnesota fair have been built up magnificently since pool selling was abolished. At first it was slow work, but during the last four or five years, progress has been steady and rapid.

Last year the entries at the Minnesota state fair were pronounced the equal of any of the grand circuit race meets, and this by the highest authority.

This year the program has been enlarged by the addition of one $1,000 race, as well as two novelties for Minnesota horses only. These Minnesota races are a free-for-all pace on Tuesday of fair week and a free-for-all trot, which will come off on Friday. A silver cup is the prize.

County Established.

In a decision handed down by the supreme court, it is held that the new county of Clearwater, which was established last fall by a division of Beltrami county, has a perfect right to its individual existence.

The establishment of Clearwater county has been contested by Attorney General Douglas, who held that the election by which the division was made was irregular. There were three petitions for division voted on in Beltrami county at the last election, the proposed new counties being Clearwater, Roosevelt and Black Duck.

Clearwater received 664 votes, and there were but 48 against the proposition; for Roosevelt there were 610 and against Roosevelt 691; for Black Duck there were 161 and against Black Duck 388.

Big Revenue.

State Auditor S. G. Iverson announces that the state's outstanding loans from the permanent school fund aggregate nearly $2,000,000. The money is loaned to 1,800 different borrowers including counties, cities, villages and townships.

Bonds aggregating $177,604.10 and interest amounting to $76,556.51 will become due July 1, 1903. The interest goes to the general school fund and is apportioned among the schools of the state per capital. The state loans about $200,000 every year.

Most of the loans were made for the erection of school houses. Others were used for jails and court houses in counties, water and electric light plants in cities and villages and roads and bridges in townships.

Prison Twine Sold.

Minnesota farmers are getting binding twine from the prison plant at 2½ cents a pound less than the jobbers' price for the same quality. This concession is appreciated, so that contracts are now out for every pound of the 7,000,000 that will be made by the plant up to Aug. 1. For the first time in the history of the plant there is no twine left for dealers. Last year dealers took about 1,400,000 pounds of the 5,500,000 manufactured.

Warden Wolfer has been able to make the extremely low price by going direct to Yucatan and buying the sisal from the planters, avoiding the manipulation of the market by the binding twine trust.

Reduced Fare.

Attorneys representing the Minnesota & International railway are said to have consented to judgment being entered in favor of the state in the case against the company in which it was ordered to show cause why the passenger rate of four cents a mile should not be reduced to three cents a mile the same as on most roads in the state. A hearing in the matter as between the state railroad commission and the Minnesota & International was to have been held in this city on Thursday before Judge Spooner, but the judge received a telegram announcing the decision of the company as stated above. The new rate will become effective July 1.

To Prevent Fires.

Copies of the new forest fire law will be sent to all fire wardens by General C. C. Andrews, state fire warden. General Andrews is getting out 11,000 cloth posters to warn people against setting fires adjacent to timber lands. Malicious setting of fires is punishable by $500 fine or ten years' imprisonment. Careless handling of fires near timber lands, use of combustible gun wads, or refusing to assist fire wardens in putting out fires, are punishable by $100 fine or three months' imprisonment.

News Notes.

The village of Pillager voted bonds of $1,500 to aid in the construction of a bridge across the Crow Wing river.

The members of the German Lutheran church at Glencoe have subscribed over $12,000 for their new edifice which they will start this fall.

The manufacture of turpentine, axle grease and charcoal from pine stumps will be the business of the Standard Turpentine Manufacturing Company of St. Paul with a capital stock of $20,000, which filed articles of incorporation with the secretary of state.

Judge Kelly of the Ramsey district court has decided that the state auditor is an official of so high a station that he cannot be mandamused by the Minnesota Sugar Company, which seeks to compel him to draw a warrant for $19,533.21, claimed to have been earned under the bounty law.

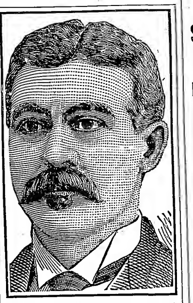
REGISTER OF THE U. S. TREASURY USES PE-RU-NA FOR SUMMER CATARRH.

Summer Catarrh Afflicts Men and Women.

HON. JUDSON W. LYONS, Register of the United States treasury, in a letter from Washington, D. C., says:

"I find Peruna to be an excellent remedy for the catarrhal affections of spring and summer, and those who suffer from depression from the heat of the summer will find no remedy the equal of Peruna."---Judson W. Lyons.

No man is better known in the financial world than Judson W. Lyons, formerly of Augusta, Ga. His name on every piece of money of recent date makes his signature one of the most familiar ones in the United States.



Hon. Judson W. Lyons.

Two Interesting Letters From Thankful Women.

Miss Camilla Chartier, 5 West Lexington St., Baltimore, Md., writes:

"Late suppers gradually affected my digestion and made me a miserable dyspeptic, suffering intensely at times. I took several kinds of medicine which were prescribed by different physicians but still continued to suffer. But the trial of one bottle of Peruna convinced me that it would rid me of this trouble, so I continued taking it for several weeks and I was in excellent health, having gained ten pounds."—Miss Camilla Chartier.

Summer Catarrh.

Mrs. Kate Bohn, 1119 Willoughby Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:

"When I wrote you I was troubled with frequent headaches, dizzy, strange feeling in the head, sleeplessness, sinking feelings, faintness and numbness. Sometimes I had heartburn. My food would rise to my throat after every meal, and my bowels were very irregular.

"I wrote you for advice, and I now take pleasure in informing you that my improvement is very great indeed. I did not expect to improve so quickly after suffering for five long years. I am feeling very good and strong. I thank you so much for Peruna. I shall recommend it to all suffering with the effects of catarrh, and I consider it a household blessing. I shall never be without Peruna."

For those phases of catarrh peculiar to summer Peruna will be found efficacious.

Peruna cures catarrh in all phases and stages.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O.

Those Delightful Americans.

"Here's a story, the truth of which is vouched for by an English lady resident in Florence. She has a balcony that overhangs a street in which are some shops, and a few days ago an American mother and daughter paused to look in at the window, and interchanged the following remarks: 'Mamie, are you quite sure that this is Venice?' 'Why, yes, mamma,' was the reply, 'you know it says in our itinerary that we are to be in Venice on April 15, and to-day is April 15, sure!'"—London Modern Society.

Lively Occupation.

To one unfamiliar with country nomenclature the question asked by the young man might not seem wholly unnatural.

"And were you never in the country during the season of husking-bees, Mr. S—?" asked the young lady.

"No. The idea! How do you husk a bee, anyway?"—Philadelphia Press.

Minnesota Man's Discovery.

Adrian, Minn., June 1st.—Philip Doyle, of this place, says he has found out a medicine that will cure any case of Kidney Trouble. As Mr. Doyle was himself very sick for a long time with this painful disease, and is now, apparently, as well as ever, his statement carries the confirmation of personal experience.

In speaking of the pills, Mr. Doyle says: "In regard to Dodd's Kidney Pills, they are certainly a wonderful medicine—the best that I have ever taken.

"I was very bad for a long time with Kidney Trouble and could get nothing to help me till I tried Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I used altogether about ten boxes, and I can say emphatically that I am completely cured. I am entirely well, without a symptom of Kidney Trouble left.

"I can heartily recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills to anyone who is suffering with Kidney Trouble, for they made me all right.

"I have advised several of my friends to try them, and not one has been disappointed."

Her Preference.

Fashionable Doctor—My dear young lady, you are drinking unfiltered water, which swarms with animal organisms. You should have it boiled; that will kill them.

GRIPPE HURT KIDNEYS.

The lingering results of La Grippe remain with the kidneys for a long time. They suffer from over exertion and the heavy drugs of Grippe medicines. Doan's Kidney Pills overcome this condition.

Aurora, New Mexico. — I received the free sample of Doan's Kidney Pills which I ordered for a girl nine years old that was suffering with bed wetting, and she improved very fast. The pills acted directly on the bladder in her case and stopped the trouble. J. C. Lucero.

Battle Creek, Mich. — My husband received the sample of Doan's Kidney Pills and has taken two more boxes and feels like a new man. He is a fireman on the Grand Trunk R. R., and the work is hard on the kidneys. Mrs. Geo. Gifford.

Pliny, W. Va. — The free trial of Doan's Kidney Pills acted so well with me, I wrote Hooff, the druggist, at Point Pleasant, to send me three boxes, with the result I have gained in weight, as well as entirely rid of my kidney trouble. My water had become very offensive and contained a white sediment and cloudy. I would have to get up six and seven times during the night, and then the voiding would dribble and cause frequent attempts, but, thanks to Doan's Kidney Pills, they have regulated all that, and I cannot praise them too much. Jas. A. Lanham.

Aching backs are eased. Hip, back, and loin pains overcome. Swelling of the limbs and dropsy signs vanish.

They correct urine with brick dust sediment, high colored, pain in passing, dribbling, frequency, bed wetting. Doan's Kidney Pills remove calculi and gravel. Relieve heart palpitation, sleeplessness, headache, nervousness, dizziness.

TORTURING DISFIGURING

Skin, Scalp and Blood Humours

From Pimples to Scrofula From Infancy to Age

Speedily Cured by Cuticura When All Else Fails.

The agonizing itching and burning of the skin, as in Eczema; the frightful scaling, as in psoriasis; the loss of hair and crusting of the scalp, as in scalled head; the facial disfigurements, as in acne and ringworm; the awful suffering of infants, and anxiety of worn-out parents, as in milk crust, tetter and salt rheum,—all demand a remedy of almost superhuman virtues to successfully cope with them. That Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent are such stands proven beyond all doubt. No statement is made regarding them that is not justified by the strongest evidence. The purity and sweetness, the power to afford immediate relief, the certainty of speedy and permanent cure, the absolute safety and great economy, have made them the standard skin cures, blood purifiers and humour remedies of the civilized world.

Bathe the affected parts with hot water and Cuticura Soap, to cleanse the surface of crusts and scales and soften the thickened cuticle. Dry, without rubbing, and apply Cuticura Ointment freely, to allay itching, irritation and inflammation, and soothe and heal, and, lastly, take Cuticura Resolvent, to cool and cleanse the blood. This complete local and constitutional treatment affords instant relief, permits rest and sleep in the severest forms of eczema and other itching, burning and scaly humours of the skin, scalp and blood, and points to a speedy, permanent and economical cure when all else fails.

Sold throughout the world. Cuticura Resolvent, 50c. (in form of Chocolate Coated Pills, 25c. per vial of 60), Ointment, 50c., Soap, 25c. Depots: London, 27 Charterhouse Sq.; Paris, 5 Rue de la Paix; Boston, 137 Columbus Ave. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Proprietors.

LIFE'S DARKER SIDE.

Washington Has Its Poor Just Like Every Other City.

Profligacy's Next Door Neighbor Sometimes Is Most Degraded Poverty—Shrewd Manipulators of Sympathy.

[Special Washington Letter.]

IT IS not prophecy nor oracular ipse dixit, but simple statement of fact, that "the poor ye have with you always."

There will be no poor people in the world when all men become communists after the manner of the 12 apostles and the disciples who "had all things in common." Until the coming of that millenium of communism the poor we will have with us always.

But when that condition shall have been developed, in the moral evolution of which we are a part, what will become of our talents for benevolence? Where no poverty exists there can be no benevolence, and ultimely no need of the benevolent faculty. To banish poverty will be to cause brain upheaval; the benevolent faculty dying and some other faculty, may be a nobler one, taking its place.

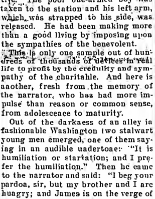
Men, women and children who learn to live by their wits impose upon the benevolent; so that on this account in all towns and cities charities are organized and intelligently managed. Not long ago a poor boy with only one arm rang a door bell in this city and appealed for charity. He wanted money to help him get back to his home in Boston. In reply to an inquiry he said that his left hand had been caught in some machinery and his entire arm destroyed.

Before giving him aid the citizen undertook to examine the stump of his arm. The poor boy shrank from the examination. He stepped backward and soon began running away. He was caught by the citizen who displayed the badge of a precinct detective. The poor one-armed boy was taken to the station and his left arm, which was strapped to his side, was released. He had been making more than a good living by imposing upon the sympathies of the benevolent.

This is only one sample out of hundreds of thousands of devices in real life to profit by the credulity and sympathy of the charitable. And here is another, fresh from the memory of the narrator, who has had more impulse than reason or common sense, from adolescence to maturity.

Out of the darkness of an alley in fashionable Washington two stalwart young men emerged, one of them saying in an audible undertone: "It is humiliation or starvation; and I prefer the humiliation." Then he came to the narrator and said: "I beg your pardon, sir, but my brother and I are hungry; and James is on the verge of suicide. We are scions of an old Maryland family; but our good clothes and 17 pennies are all we have left."

He showed the pennies; also two beautiful rows of teeth; also two honest dark brown eyes. His story was so interesting and so modestly told that he and his silent, moody brother were taken to a restaurant where they ate two big suppers; just as very hungry men would eat—raveneously. Then they were given as much ready money as their benefactor could spare, and they departed with their stomachs full of good food, and their eyes filled with grateful tears.



TWO YOUNG MEN EMERGED.

Thirty-five dollars were in the pocketbook of their friend when he met the poor fellows; but there was no pocketbook at all when he reached in his pocket for it an hour later. The poor scions of an old Maryland family were very clever pickpockets.

It is on account of these shrewd manipulators of sympathies, and money-getters, that associated charities exist in every town and city. Wise men and women now a days do not give alms to those who call at their doors. They contribute to the organized charities, and send beggars of every description to headquarters, where aid is systematically given. In this manner imposture is impossible; and its prevention works no hardship upon the poor and needy. The deserving are even better cared for than when they depend upon intermittent benevolences.

The general secretary of associated charities in this city, Mr. Charles Weller, has long devoted himself to this work and he personally knows scores of worthy ones at whose doors hard times come knocking at all seasons of the year. He not only gives personal attention to all cases coming through the mails (and his daily mail is a heavy one), but he makes personal tours of the city, going to those quarters where vice and poverty mingle in unholy alliance; where vice makes poverty despicable, and where poverty encourages vice.

Careful study of this problem of systematic charity develops one singular fact; and that is, that the Christians who love their fellow men (in prayer meetings) are buying and renting houses in alleys. Their investments yield ten per cent., or upwards; and, as they grow rich out of the hard earnings of the poor, they "thank God that they are not as other men are." There are alleys which are respectable, but they are all paths downward to poverty and its kindred, crime. It is to the alleys that fuel and food are taken by the associated charities. Whole families dwell in single rooms of alley houses, and five families have been found huddled in one alley house of three rooms. Under such circumstances it is as useless to try to teach virtue as it would be to try to get an Apache papoose to understand the meaning of differential calculus. It is simply incomprehensible.

AN ALLEY "RESIDENCE."

Some of these alleys are in the rear of fashionable residences, and pestilence stalks back of the brownstone fronts. In an alley one block from the palatial embassy of Great Britain a family dwells in a single room where the cooking, eating, sleeping, washing, ironing and quarreling are all done. In the same alley not long ago there were five cases of smallpox discovered. The alley houses have no cellars, no drainage, no modern conveniences. It is a wonder that disease does not become rampant here, when one has revealed these alley conditions.

The colored people in the alleys of south Washington are worse conditioned than ever they were in slavery days. One of the old women said that she had been living on one spot for upwards of 50 years; that she had ten children and all were gone out into the world except the baby; that she had no knowledge of her other children; and that they never called on her. In slavery days, when families were occasionally separated by the masters, hands were held up in horror. But, in these latter days, when poverty separates families, few people on the surface realize what is going on in the submerged tenth.

When asked, in his office, how he could endure hearing so many personal pleas, Mr. Weller replied: "I've been hearing hard luck stories for so long that I understand them all before they are uttered. There are very few new ones to me. And yet each individual's case is all the world to him; consequently I listen as though each case were something entirely new and demanding special attention." He entertains poor girls and women with graceful ease, putting them under no obligations, and making them feel that they have made him happy by giving him an opportunity to help them. He is a diplomat as well as a philanthropist.

But he can be stern and just, as well as generous. The man or woman with a false hard luck tale might better take it somewhere else, for he will detect the least discordant note in the story. They who occasionally have the effrontery to attempt to impose on Mr. Weller usually have their labor for their pains, and it is hard labor on the farm, where they are sent by the police court judge. In such cases there is no disposition to be merciful or to extenuate the wrongdoer. And so the word has gone around among the hoboes that Washington is not a good place to go with any but genuine hard luck stories.

ROUND ABOUT THE STATE.

Geo. C. Pehl was killed by the Soo limited in St. Paul.

Fannie Humphrey was arrested in Minneapolis on a charge of shop lifting.

Chas. McCarthy fell off a street car in Minneapolis and had a rib broken.

The annual convention of the Norwegian Lutheran Free church was held in Minneapolis.

John Kestler of St. Paul fell from a Milwaukee train and sustained injuries from which he died.

The body of Albert Lindberg, a laundry driver in Minneapolis, was found floating in the Mississippi river.

The servant girls of Brainerd have about decided to organize, which is the result of the spirit of unionism in that city.

Conductor George E. Carey was struck on the head by the target of a switch at Elk River and received a bad cut over the eye.

Ladderman John Noonan of the Minneapolis fire department was injured while en route to a fire and died at St. Mary's hospital about two hours later.

Cyrus Covell was run over and killed by a Milwaukee freight train in Lake City. The remains were discovered by the engineer of the Pioneer Limited.

C. A. Pfeiffer of Minnesota City has a curiosity in a chicken hatched out of one of his incubators. It has four legs and four feet. As yet it is very clumsy and does not know what to do with its extra legs.

The hearing which the state railway and warehouse commission had appointed for June 10 for inquiring into the reasonableness of the rates on coal and lumber charged by the railroads of the state has been postponed to 10 o'clock June 18.

There were 171 permits aggregating $371,924 issued by the building department of St. Paul during May as compared with 133 permits aggregating $280,955 for the corresponding month of last year.

A span of horses and a fine new harness were stolen from the barn of Auton Granlal in the town of Dover. The owner succeeded in tracing the horses to Gilmanton, where he lost all track of them.

The binder twine factory at the Stillwater prison will be operated three hours each day over time in an effort to meet the demands being made upon it by farmers who are consumers of twine.

William Dockery, of the famous Dockery gang in Minneapolis, was taken from St. Cloud, where he had been serving an unfinished reformatory sentence, and transferred to the penitentiary at Stillwater.

The Duluth jury in the case of the State against John Tanko, charged with the murder of George Bollich, found the prisoner guilty of murder in the second degree. He was indicted for murder in the first degree.

Arthur E. Kellar, residing at 651 Wabasha street, St. Paul, committed suicide by shooting himself through the temple. Ill health, contracted while a volunteer in the Spanish war, was the cause of his deed. He leaves a wife and one child.

George W. Cline, a St. Cloud jeweler and music dealer, was arrested in Little Falls for selling pianos from house to house without a license. Cline contends that he took the orders and made delivery later, and has hired a St. Cloud attorney to fight the case.

The body of Mathew Hickey, a private in the Tenth artillery who was drowned by the capsizing of a boat in the Mississippi river was found floating near the upper pier in St. Paul. Martin Jannsk was catching drift wood when he discovered the body. The remains were turned over to the commandant of the fort.

After waiting two days in the union station, nine-year-old Bertha Thomas and her seven-year-old brother Louis were met by their father, D. R. Thomas, who came to St. Paul to accompany them the remainder of the distance to their new home near Grand Forks, N. D. The children, who traveled alone from Springfield, Mass., to St. Paul, had almost given up hope of meeting their father when he entered the station.

Fully 600 Jews of St. Paul, in a mass meeting, adopted resolutions sympathizing with the survivors of the Kishineff massacre for the loss of their kindred and friends and expressing abhorrence of such acts of lawlessness. The resolutions were prepared by Senator Hiler H. Horton of St. Paul, and were adopted by a rising vote.

If the plans of Henry Copilovich, president of the Standard Turpentine company of St. Paul materializes, the old stumps on devastated pine lands will be worth nearly as much by weight as new lumber. Mr. Copilovich has obtained exclusive control of a process by which turpentine axle grease and charcoal worth $13 net can be obtained from one cord of stumps. A large plant is to be located in northern Minnesota at a cost of $10,000.

The new pulp mill of the Northwest Paper Company, at Brainerd, has started up, and the company will run night and day from now on. The mill has a capacity of fifteen tons a day, and cost in the neighborhood of $140,000. The Northwest Paper Company also assumed control of the dam on the Mississippi in this city yesterday. The company has taken a long lease of the dam.

HINDOO SUPERSTITIONS.

Sneezing Is a Bad Omen and Keeps Men From Business.

A resident of Dharmapuri, writing on the subject of Hindoo superstitions, says that a married woman, a dancing girl, a mirror and an ass—the most neglected of the Indian domestic animals—are also among the first objects of good omen which a Hindoo should meet as soon as he wakes from his sleep. A Hindoo does not stir out of his house on any errand, not only during the Rahukalam—an hour and a half a day—but also some time before it. Some do not do any work during Gulikakalam as well—another one hour and a half a day. The correspondent does not mention that in more advanced countries some people make Rakukalam and Gulikakalum last a great deal longer. Besides these there are Natchathirams (stars), of which there are twenty-six, each of which occurs every day. A particular Natchathiram on a particular day is either good or bad. At times an orthodox Hindoo will not have a "good" day even in a fortnight. Even sneezing is inauspicious. Instances are not rare in which men are prevented from attending their office by sham sneezing. The espying of a male and a female crow together means the approaching death of the observer. His fate may be averted by writing a letter to some of his relatives at a distance saying that he is dead. The appearance of a rat snake at the right hand side of a journey is considered most lucky. A Hindoo will never feed a guest for the first time on Sundays, Tuesdays or Thursdays—these days are supposed to bring enmity between the host and the guest. A Hindoo doctor will never administer medicines to his patient, even if he is very dangerously ill, for the first time on any day other than Sunday or Thursday. It is also laid down that a Hindoo should never sleep with his head toward the south—the direction in which Yama, the god of death, is supposed to live. East and west are always preferred.—Madras Mail.

A CROWDED CITY.

To Walk In Constantinople Is Like a Fierce Struggle.

To walk in Constantinople is like a fierce and active struggle. One should look at once before, behind and underneath one's feet. Some danger or disgust is always threatening. I never walked up the steep road which leads from the bridge to Pera without the feeling that I was fighting my way through a hostile city. A horn blows furiously, and a black man runs up the hill, clearing the way before the dashing and struggling horses of the tram. At the same moment a cab drives at full speed down the hill, and the horses set their feet on the pavement. In front of you a man balances slices of offal on a long pole across his shoulder. They dangle before and behind. He swings cheerfully with his burden through the crowd. A Kurd, stooping under a weight higher than himself, follows, step by step, behind you. Your feet slip in slushy mud and catch on the cobbles or in the gaps of the road.

A dog with a red wound behind his ear and a long strip of mangy skin on his back lies asleep in the middle of the pavement. You step into the road to avoid the dogs and the hamals, and wheels and horses are upon you. You step back into the midst of the dogs and the hamals. As you stand aside for a moment a beggar with a handless arm rounded into a stump and a woman with her face eaten away in the cavity of the hood which she draws back before you appear suddenly, filling what had seemed the only alley of escape. The sun soaks down into the narrow street. The smell of the mud rises up into your nostrils, mingled with those unknown smells which in Constantinople seem to ooze upward out of the ground and steam outward from every door and window and pour out of every alley and rise like a cloud out of the breath and sweat and foulness of the people.—Arthur Symons in Harper's Magazine.

Algy Was Not Particular.

There was company at tea and little Algernon felt that it was an occasion upon which he might assert himself. "Me," he remarked, holding up his bread and butter in scorn, "can't I have some jam on this?"

"What?" ejaculated his economical mamma. "Jam on butter? No, indeed! Certainly not!"

"Oh, I don't care about it being on the butter," said Algy calmly. "Put it on the other side."—London Answers.

Why Negroes Can Bear Heat.

The function of a negro's black skin is supposed to be the conversion of the sun's light into heat. The heat thus generated remains in the skin and does not penetrate to the deeper tissues. Being thus provided with a sun proof armor the negro can stand an amount of heat that would be fatal to a white man and run little or no risk of sun stroke.

Blood Corpuscles.

The war between the white corpuscles of the blood and the microbes of disease was first described by the Russian pathologist, Metchnikoff. While devoting himself to the study of inflammations he in each case noted the presence of white cells in the blood currents in abnormal numbers. Inside these white cells he invariably found the specific microbe of the disease under consideration. It seemed that the big corpuscles were devouring the poisonous microbes. Sometimes the number taken up by a corpuscle was too great, and it died as a result. If this overcoming of the white corpuscles by the microbes was general the patient died.

Butchers and Blue.

The blue smock of the butcher, says an English paper, has often aroused curiosity. The color was originally adopted by the guild of butchers in the middle ages at a time when each trade had its distinguishing color; but, while other guilds dropped their colors, butchers stuck to blue because blood stains are less noticeable upon that color than upon any other. At a very early period blue was the universal wear of serving men. It was then the cheapest of dyes. Sir Walter Scott in his well known poem "Marmion" talks of "an old, blue coated serving man."

Caucasia.

The 10,000,000 inhabitants of Caucasia are made up of the remnants of many ancient nomadic tribes. According to Russian statistics, only 2,500,000 are Russians, 1,000,000 are Armenians, 1,600,000 Tartars and Georgians, while the rest are principally Mohammedan tribes. It is asserted that there are thirty different languages and dialects spoken in Caucasia.

A STARTLING TEST.

To save a life, Dr.T. G Merritt, of No. Mehoopany, Pa., made a startling test resulting in a wonderful cure. He writes "a patient was attacked with violent hemorrhages caused by ulceration of the stomach. I had often found Electric Bitters excellent for acute stomach and liver troubles so I prescribed them. The patient gained from the first, and has not had an attact in 14 months." Electrict Bitters are are positively guarenteed for Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Constipation and kidney troubles. Try them. Sticky Onion Juice.

A very convenient mucilage can be made out of onion juice by any one who wishes to use it. A good sized Spanish onion, after being boiled a short time, will yield on being pressed quite a large quantity of very adhesive fluid. This is used quite extensively in various trades for pasting paper on to tin or zinc or even glass, and the tenacity with which it holds would surprise any one on making the first attempt. It is the cheapest and best mucilage for such purposes and answers just as well as many of the more costly and patent cements. Some of the cements sold by street fakirs at 10 cents a bottle consist of nothing but onion juice and water, and the bottle and cork cost a great deal more than the contents.

Sharing His Bed.

A Grub street friend of Dr. Johnson's was Derrick, of whom he wrote, "I honor Derrick for his strength of mind." One night when Floyd, another poor author, was wandering about the streets he found Derrick asleep upon a bulk. Upon being suddenly awakened Derrick started up. "My dear Floyd," said he, "I am sorry to see you in this destitute state. Will you go home with me to my lodgings?" And they turned in on the bulk together like the good fellows they were.

Why Harry Wasn't Proud.

Little Harry's eldest sister has just presented her husband with a new baby.

"Well, Harry," said his father, "do you feel proud of being an uncle?"

"No," replied the urchin.

"Why not?" asked his father.

"'Cause I ain't no uncle; I'm an aunt. The new baby's a girl!"—New York Press.

Measuring Hides.

The ancient tanner paid an expert high wages to guess at the contents of his hides when sold by measure. To day an unskilled workman hands the irregular shaped pieces to a little machine that looks something like a table with a double top which, quicker than the mind of the expert can guess it, reckons with exactness the square contents in both the metric and standard systems.

Here the Credit.

"There is one thing I like about your husband—he never worries you when getting ready to go out with him."

"Very little credit is due to him for that. Whenever I see that I am not likely to be ready in time I simply hide his hat or his gloves and he can't look for them until I have finished dressing!"

A chimney of 116 feet height will without danger sway ten inches in a wind.

A SENSE OF HUMOR.

IT IS A POTENT FACTOR IN KEEPING LIFE SWEET TO THE END.

One Need Not Be a Youngster In Mere Years to Have and Enjoy Fun. Age May Be Made as Green, as Jolly and as Gay as Giggling Youth.

"Take your fun while you may; you'll never be young but once," is a popular fallacy. It presupposes two things—that the young, because of youth, must have fun and that as soon as it is passed the capacity for enjoying it is over.

Some never grow old, and some are never young. Age lies in the individual and is not a question of dates.

Because a person ceases to be able to giggle at every remark, to bubble over with gleefulness at the slightest provocation, is no criterion that real mirthfulness has fled. The delicate sense of humor that may take the place of this showy buoyancy is far more to be prized.

A sense of humor is a potent factor in keeping life sweet to the end. A green and jolly old age is as jolly as a gay youth.

A sense of humor can be cultivated, and it should be as assiduously as forbearance, kindness or any of the cardinal virtues.

With the slipping away of youth despair asserts itself only when it is thought joy and mirth must flee also.

Are we sure that youth is so positively happy as it is supposed to be? Is there not a restlessness, an uncertainty, in the steps of a young girl that causes anxiety to be mingled with every move? She is full of theories, is imbued with ideals, but how to obtain the desired ends is a mooted question. She can never be as securely happy as is the married woman, or unmarried, who has, as it were, found her feet surely and knows how to get what she wants, or, at least, knows what she wants to get. There is a restless looking forward for pleasures each day, an unhappy killing of time before some promised joy arrives in the young that all who have passed it can painfully remember.

Girls are so imbued by the thoughtless, with the idea that all joy ceases with youth, that they have a feeling of commiseration for those who have bid farewell to this ephemeral period. Little do they realize how the study of all life, the enlarged power to feel, to see, to hear, to live, to enjoy, is the priceless gift of every added year.

There is something pitiful in watching the nervous grasp at joy in youth. We see constantly young girls literally afraid to loosen their hold on one day or one pleasure to fulfill an act of simple duty.

There is a not unfamiliar story of a young girl in a ballroom who was stopped as she walked about the floor on the arm of one of her partners by an old family friend, who inquired, with interest, for her mother.

"My dear, I'm glad I saw you," he repeated. "How's your mother?"

No reply. She only clung to the arm on which she leaned and was hastening by when the old gentleman, seeing her fear lest her escort should slip away, laid his hand on the young man's coat collar.

"My dear, I'll hold him," he cried, twinkling his eye wickedly. "How's your mother?"

He was not a very nice old gentleman, perhaps, but that he got a full share of fun out of life none could doubt, and the attitude of the young girl, holding fast to her prize lest he should escape, is exactly the attitude of youth that looks to the early days for all its share of joy.

I was in a group of young unmarried women, some nearing thirty, others who had just overstepped this critical date. They were expressing in graphic language their sensitiveness about their age.

I have taken some pains to hunt up statistics about the attractions and accomplishments of women who were past this age which I commend to their perusal. In the first place novelists are taking women between thirty and forty for their heroines. It is the woman who dares to have thought and has cultivated herself to the point of expressing them who commands friends and lovers who are worth while.

Helen of Troy was over forty when she perpetrated the most famous elopement on record, and as the siege of Troy lasted twenty years she could not have been very juvenile when the fortune of Paris restored her to her husband, who, it is said, received her with love and gratitude.

Cleopatra was past thirty when Antony fell under her spell, and her fascinations for him never lessened when she died ten years later.

Pericles wedded Aspasia at the age of thirty-six, and she wielded undisputed influence over men for thirty years afterward.

Livia was thirty-three when she won the love of Augustus, over whom she maintained her ascendency to the last.

Louis XIV. wedded Mme. Maintenon when she was forty-three years of age.

Ninon, a celebrated beauty and wit of her day in France, captivated the love of the Abbe de Bering at the age of seventy-three.

Anne of Austria was thirty-eight when Buckingham and Richelieu were her devoted and jealous admirers.

There are women ready to die of senile debility at forty and women who first begin to taste the full perfection of womanhood's development at that age.

It must be noted in passing that old age must be full of mortification if the ghosts of wickedly spent hours haunt the mind.—Susan W. Ball in [illegible]

STARTLING EVIDENCE.

Fresh testimoney in great quantity is constantly coming in, declaring Dr, King's New Discovery for Consumption Coughs and Colds to be unequled. Dumas and Porthos.

Dumas, like Balzac, was fond of his own creations. Among them all he loved Porthos best. The great, strong, vain hero was a child after his own heart. One afternoon, it is related, his son found Dumas careworn, wretched, overwhelmed. "What has happened to you? Are you ill?" asked Dumas fils. "No," replied Dumas pere. "Well, what is it, then?" "I am miserable." "Why?" "This morning I killed Porthos—poor Porthos! Oh, what trouble I have had to make up my mind to do it! But there must be an end to all things. Yet when I saw him sinking beneath the ruins crying, 'It is too heavy, too heavy for me!' I swear to you that I cried." And he wiped away a tear with the sleeve of his dressing gown.

A Clever Method of Stealing.

An ingenious and successful trick was played at a London flat in broad daylight. A gentleman rang the bell at 3 o'clock and inquired whether Mr. Grey was at home. "No, sir," said the janitor. "He rarely if ever comes back from the temple before 5 o'clock." "That is strange," returned the other, "since I know he has an appointment here with a Mr. Johnson at 4 o'clock." Then he went his way.

At 4 o'clock to the minute Mr. Johnson called and, giving his name, was of course allowed to wait in Mr. Grey's apartments, which he denuded of everything of "portable value" in ten minutes and then walked out, observing as he passed the porter that he could wait no longer.

Parrots Are Vegetarians.

Parrots are vegetarians. They live chiefly upon a light but nutritious diet of fruit and seeds or upon the abundant nectar of rich tropical flowers. And it is mainly for the sake of getting at their chosen food that they have developed the large and powerful bills which characterize the family. You may have perhaps noted the most tropical fruit eaters, like the hornbills and the toucans, are remarkable for the size and strength of their beaks.—Cornhill Magazine.

Shark Soup.

In Ceylon there is a considerable trade in the oil of the white shark. The fins of the animal are very rich in gelatin and are used largely by the Chinese for making soup, of which they declare that the turtle soup so prized by epicures in this country is but a distant and feeble imitation.

No Signs Wanted.

ELEPHANTS IN BURMA.

The Great Beasts Sometimes Work Without Immediate Oversight.

In Burma the animal generally used in lumbering operations is the elephant. While "my lord the elephant" solves in a unique way the transportation problem—always a vexatious one in lumbering operations—he does more than that. The stolid and slow moving ox can haul a load from one place to another, but the load has to be made ready for him in the first place, and after it has arrived at its destination it has to be unloaded. The elephant takes care of all these operations. Not only he is a draft animal, but in some instances, at a word from his driver, he picks up a timber, carries it to the designated point, and then not only deposits it where it belongs, but does so with precision and comparative ease, accomplishing a result almost impossible by hand labor, and with less expenditure of time than would be required by a steam crane.

In most cases an elephant driver, or mahout, is required for each elephant, but human labor is so cheap as not to be a factor in the expense. The elephant furnishes the labor which is paid for, and the driver is looked upon as a necessary, though not altogether desirable, concomitant, as the native helper is not so much to be relied upon as his big charge. Opium and the strong brews of native roots work on human frailty, but the elephant has no desire for these. In many big lumbering operations the elephants are seemingly "told" what they are to do in the morning, and in some degree left to carry on the work during the day according to their own devices. Very remarkable are the stories told of their sagacity. One of these stories, vouched for as true, concerns lumbering, and tells of an elephant that was about to pick up a log just as the great gong which signaled the close of the day's work was sounded. To the surprise of the mahout, the log, only a little larger than others which had been carried, proved too heavy for the elephant to lift from the ground. Another elephant was requisitioned, but the two together failed to make any headway with the heavy timber, and the attempt was given up. In the morning the first elephant went immediately to the timber, lifted it with apparent ease, and carried it to the required resting place.—Forestry and Irrigation.

FRUITS AND FLOWERS.

Most kinds of fruit trees thrive best in rolling lands.

If mildew appear on the rosebushes, dust with sulphur.

The garden must be mellow, rich and kept clean. This is the inside secret of successful gardening.

An application of hard wood ashes will supply the soil with the potash so necessary in growing small fruits.

Bone meal is an excellent garden fertilizer, but it does not give immediate results unless dissolved with acid.

The longer an orchard is kept in cultivation and a crop taken off the greater becomes the necessity of liberal manuring.

The greater portion of the roots of the grapevine grows near the surface. For this reason the cultivation should be shallow.

In the garden especially one of the drawbacks to the germination of seeds is that they are often covered with too much earth when planted. Usually the smaller the seed the less covering is required.

A Self Denying Offering.

Some young girls were giving a vaudeville performance for a local charity. A young man who thought himself facetious tossed upon the stage after one of the "turns" a bouquet whose chief ingredient was a head of cabbage. The girl who received this offering of appreciation read the card that accompanied it, and advanced to the footlights.

"It gives me great pleasure," she said, "to know that Mr. Edward Morgan has enjoyed my performance. I hoped that the audience might like it, but I never expected for a moment that Mr. Morgan would so far lose his head as to throw it upon the stage!"—New York Tribune.

A Henpecked Astrologer.

Lilly, the astrologer and alchemist, could not see for himself sufficiently far into that future which he professed to be able to scan so clearly for others to guard him against making a fool of himself by marrying. He caught a vixen, "of the temper of Mars," to use his own words, and the fact that she brought him £500 as dowry did not count for much in the way of compensation seeing that "she and her relations cost him £1,000."

The Grandeur of Him.

An impeccably dressed gentleman the other day, when walking along Piccadilly, felt a movement in his pocket, and clapping his hand thereto seized the wrist of the thief. He drew forth the erring member, and, looking at it with supreme disgust, he released it, saying with a grimace of disgust, "For heaven's sake, my good man, go and wash your hands before you put them in a gentleman's pocket again."—London Tatler.

The Pain of Silence.

"We women," she was saying again, "suffer in silence."

"I can readily believe that you do suffer in silence," the man replied, "you take so much pleasure in talking."—Philadelphia Press.

A Nice Distinction.

"If you were a woman," said the bachelor girl, who was entertaining a caller, "I'd show you my new frock, but as you are a man I'll show the slippers that go with it."

Edam Cheeses In History.

"The famous Edam cheeses which grace the table of every well kept hotel and restaurant in the country," said a prominent grocery man, "are often a subject of inquiry as to what they are and whence they come. Their round shape, with that peculiar reddish purple tinge, is a marked contrast with all other cheese productions of the world. There is nothing new fashioned about them, for if colonial tradition is true Mynheer Peter Heyls of Edam, Holland, who brought a lot in the hold of his Dutch ship in 1631 to the Delaware river, so tickled the fancy of the Indians with these odd looking articles that he bought a large tract of land, afterward named the Valley of the Swans, from the redskins with a barrel of his Edam cheeses. After the cheese had been devoured the gentle aborigines repented themselves of their rash speculation and a month later massacred the entire Dutch colony."

Irish Wit.

I must admit that Irish wit is often of the most mordant and even sardonic kind. Was there ever a more sardonic stroke of description than that O'Connell gave of Peel's bloodlessness? "His smile was like the silver plate on a coffin."

Of another and lower quality, but good of its kind, is the following fishwife's sarcasm: A friend of mine was waiting his turn to be served in a fish shop while a little wizened old gentleman priced every fish in the shop. "How much is this—and this—and this—and this?" etc., till the exasperated shopwoman exclaimed, "Ah! Go on out of that wid ye! It isn't fish ye want, but information!"—London Answers.

A writer in tracing the ancestry of the dog to wolf and jackal notices typical differences in the case of their eyes, their body colors and markings, the habit of turning around before lying down and other interesting peculiarities, but he does not mention the most striking and infallible way of distinguishing them—namely, by the fashion in which they carry their tails.

Wolves and coyotes have a sneaking way of carrying their tails low, almost dragging on the ground, while dogs carry their tails up, and the further removed they are from the feral type the higher they carry them. Shepherds and collies, which retain many of their racial characteristics, carry their tails lowest of all; setters and pointers a degree or two higher, stiffening out straight when drawing on game; terriers and hounds elevate their tails to the spinal line; St. Bernards and Newfoundlands affect a curve over the back, while pugs actually come to a full twist. An old plainsman could tell a wolf or coyote as far as he could see him, and in buffalo days this was a most useful indication of buffalo herds being not far away. These predatory creatures always followed a moving herd.—Forest and Stream.

A Poor Bureau.

Paper of the Ancients.

The interior bark of trees was formerly used to write upon, and its Latin name (liber, a bark) seems to intimate that its use was as ancient as the art of writing itself. In one respect the bark was superior to the leaf. It could be rolled into a volume, while the leaf would crack if subjected to such a process.

DOCTOR ADVOCATED OPERATION--- PE-RU-NA MADE KNIFE UNNECESSARY.

CATARRH is a very frequent cause of that class of diseases popularly known as female weakness.

Catarrh of the pelvic organs produces such a variety of disagreeable and irritating symptoms that many people—in fact, the majority of people—have no idea that they are caused by catarrh.

It all the women who are suffering with any form of female weakness would write to Dr. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio, and give him a complete description of their symptoms and the peculiarties of their troubles, he will immediately reply with complete directions for treatment, free of charge.

Mrs. Eva Bartho, 133 East 12th street, N. Y. City, N. Y., writes: "I suffered for three years with leucorrhea and ulceration of the womb. The doctor advocated an operation which I dreaded very much, and strongly objected to go under it. Now I am a changed woman. Peruna cured me; it took nine bottles, but I felt so much improved I kept taking it, as I dreaded an operation so much. I am today in perfect health and have not felt so well for fifteen years."—Mrs. Eva Bartho.

Miss Maud Steinbach, 1399 12th St., Milwaukee, Wis., writes:

"Last winter I felt sick most of the time, was irregular and suffered from nervous exhaustion and severe bearing down pains. I had so frequently heard of Peruna and what wonderful cures it performed so I sent for a bottle and in four weeks my health and strength were entirely restored to me."—Miss Maud Steinbach.

Every where the women are using Peruna and praising it. Peruna is not a palliative simply; it cures by removing the cause of female disease.

Dr. Hartman has probably cured more women of female ailments than any other living physician. He makes these cures simply by using and recommending Peruna.

MRS. EVA BARTHO.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

BLIGHT AT YOUR CORE

Just as a Fruit Tree, Outwardly Well, May Wither and Die, So May You, Though Strong, be Sick from Internal Blight.

HOW TO STERILIZE YOUR BLOOD AND KILL DISEASE GERMS OF CONSUMPTION

A Great Free Offer to All Readers of this Paper, by Accepting Which They May Obtain Free by Mail, a Large Bottle of the New Sterile Medicinal Food, Ozomulsion.

Is it your heart?
Is it your kidneys?
Is it your lungs?
What organ is wrong?
Where is your weak spot?
Wherever it is, strengthen it with Ozomulsion.

It seems strange to some people, that a man may look the picture of health, may have muscles of iron, may be like a blooming fruit tree, and yet at core his vitality may be sapped away, just as the fruit tree, with green leaves and bark, may really be dying from blight at the core.

There is a remedy for you, if you are such a victim.

It is Ozomulsion.

The trouble with you internally, whether your heart, liver, lungs, or other organs, are affected, is due to weakness. The weakness comes from impoverished blood, poisoned, perhaps, by a pernicious microbe.

Ozomulsion sterilizes and enriches the blood. Furnishes vital salts that the sick body needs. Stimulates the working of your internal organs. Puts your entire body upon a new footing of health.

Pains and disease of every kind vanish after the use of Ozomulsion. It begins at the foundation and builds up.

It is not a drug or nerve stimulant. It is a Food. It is a New Idea in medicine, and is successful, because it works with nature.

Ozomulsion is made from the finest and purest cod liver oil, impregnated with salts and medicines which regenerate and vitalize all the internal organs of the body.

Ozomulsion can be depended upon to make you well.

It Positively Cures Consumption.

TRY IT FREE!

To prove what Ozomulsion will do for you, or for any member of your family, we will gladly send you by mail, prepaid, a Free Sample Bottle of Ozomulsion Food. It is the emulsion physicians prescribe and use the year round in their families and practice and is sold in large bottles Weighing Over Two Pounds.

Send us your name and complete address (by letter or postal card) and the Free Sample Bottle will at once be mailed you.

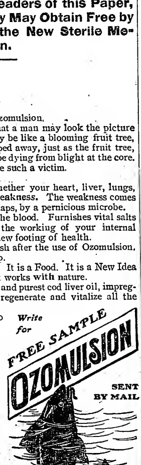
The Food That Does Good



WESTERN CANADA'S IMMIGRATION.

[From the Chicago Record-Herald.]

"Canada has anticipated a very heavy immigration this year, and she now has figures to show that she is actually getting it in a way to meet all her expectations. In the first four months of this year the doors of the Dominion opened to 40,672 persons, according to a report prepared by the committee on agriculture and colonization of the Canadian parliament. This is almost twice as large as the immigration in the corresponding months last year, and fully three times as large as in 1901, the respective figures being 22,482 and 13,393.

"Most of these newcomers have been attracted by the wheat lands of the Northwest territories. They have moved direct from Winnipeg and they have turned that city into a great camp, in which they have been fitting themselves out for the last stage of their adventure for new homes.

"Of the immigration of this spring a little over a third has come from Great Britain, the figure being 16,457. This is three times as large as the British immigration of the corresponding months of the preceding year, and it is within 2,500 of the number of immigrants that the United States attracted from Great Britain and Ireland in the same period this spring. As to the remainder of the immigration into Canada, 13,770 settlers came from the United States, a 50 per cent. increase over the preceding year, and 10,445 from Continental Europe, a 40 per cent. increase.

"These 40,672 immigrants into Canada may appear trifling in comparison with the 291,070 persons who entered the United States in the same period, but they are proportionately more important to the country. Canada's population is one-fifteenth of ours, but her immigration is now two-fifteenths as large as ours. It is worth remembering also that Canada's immigrants are almost entirely of Anglo-Saxon and Teutonic races, while our immigration is now two-thirds made up of Romance and Slav elements.

"Speculation is natural as to the future of Canada in her relations to the United States when her Northwest territories are filled up, but the one absolutely certain fact of the near future is that the United States is to have a great competitor in the grain markets of the world."

The above editorial article taken from the columns of the Chicago Record-Herald of May2 26th shows the condition of the Canadian Immigration, which as pointed out, has had a constant growth—a marvelously increasing growth—for the past six or seven years, until this year, it is confidently assumed the increase to Canada's population, by way of Immigration, will exceed 100,000. This is accounted for by the great agricultural resources which abound there. It is no fairy tale, but the matter-of-fact experience of the tens of thousands bear ample testimony to the wealth and riches in store for all who choose to accept of the opportunities offered.

Those who wish to learn more of the country can secure illustrated atlases, pamphlets, etc., giving full and reliable data issued under Government authority, by applying to any of the authorized agents of the Canadian Government. These agents whose names appear below will quote you the exceptionally low rates that take you to the free grant lands of Western Canada and render you any other assistance in their power:

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Freight Line Taxes.

State Auditor S. G. Iverson has notified the freight line companies doing business in Minnesota to report the amount of capital stock, real estate value, mileage and other information relating to the business condition of the companies on or before July 31 for taxation purposes, under the law passed by the recent legislature. Mr. Iverson estimates that the law will add from $5,000 to $6,000 to the state's revenues.

Freight line companies have not been required to pay taxes since Feb. 22, 1902. A law passed in 1897 and amended in 1899 required the companies to pay a flat rate of 2 per cent. This, the supreme court decided, was unconstitutional. The new law specifies that the rate shall be the average rate fixed by the state on other classes of property.

The law provides that the state board of equalization shall ascertain the value of the capital stock of each company in the state by substracting from the company's entire capital stock the value of its real estate and taking a proportion of the result based on the proportion of the state mileage to the company's entire mileage.

School Land Sales.

State Auditor S. G. Iverson announces that no school land will be sold until next October. Mr. Iverson beleives that the land is a good investment and should not be forced on the people. His plan is to offer it for sale only where actual settlement is contemplated.

The law makes the state auditor ex-officio land commissioner and prohibits him from disposing of more than 100,000 acres a year. The state has about 1,250,000 acres of school land unsold situated mainly in Itasca, Cass, Aitkin, Beltrami, Crow Wing, Mill Lacs, Hubbard and other nothern counties.

Last year 100,000 acres were sold at an average of $9.78 an acre, $3:54 above the average price which had been obtained for the previous 40 years.

The permanent fund resulting from the sales amounts to about $15,500,000. Mr. Iverson estimates the value of the unsold lands at $3,000,000.

Old Settlers.

The annual reunion of the Old Settlers' association was held at the rooms of the historical society in the capitol, St. Paul. Only nineteen of Minnesota's pioneers were able to attend the meeting. Although all of them have battled against the conditions of a new country since 1849 they are all in good health. A request from the Territorial Pioneers was read that the Old Settlers hold their annual meeting on June 1 with the Pioneers. The matter was discussed at length and was finally laid on the table until the next annual meeting.

The following officers were elected for the coming year: President, D. A. J. Baker; vice presidents, James McMullen and E. W. Durant; secretary, A. L. Larpenteur; treasurer, J. D. Ludden.

Gymnastic Honors.

Dr. L. J. Cooke, gymnastic director of the University of Minnesita, received a letter from Professor D. A. Sargent, gymnastic director at Havard, and head of the national association of gymnasium directors, saying that Minnesota took first place in the intercollegiate strength contest by a big margin. Minnesotas' total this year was 77,722.2, 3,126 points better than the best privious record, made by Harvard a year ago. This year the crimson failed to come up to last year's figures. Columbus, which took second last year, increased her total, but was still 4,130 below Minnesota.

State Capitol.

The construction of the new capitol at present is mostly in the shops where the parts are being made. The board of capitol commissioners has awarded contracts amounting to nearly a million dollars since the close of the last legislature, and thus far nearly everything is in the process of manufacture. The active work upon the building itself now consists of finishing the arches about the dome for the support of the floors, and the placing of conduits for the electric wiring.

Arrested for Robbery.

S. Joriski, supposed to be the man who held up and robbed the rural mail carrier near Morris, was arrested at Moorhead. Joriski drove into the city and had a mail sack under the blanket on the seat of his cart. He was arrested and the mail sack was turned over to Postmaster Bjorkquist. The sack had been cut open and some of the letters opened. Joriski is a Russian and speaks very little English. From his broken language he appears to claim that he found the mail sack along the roadside. Joriski will be held for the United States authorities.

News in Brief.

Charles Radke was badly injured at Rochester by falling from a moving handcar, which jumped the track. He lies in a serious condition.

"Toronto Jimmie," alias James Johnson, the last of the Dover bank robbers lodged in the Olmsted county jail last December, whose trial was set for the coming term of court in June, escaped from jail and is now at large. An accomplice drilled the locks to the window, gaining an entrance. He unbolted the door of the cell and with the prisoner's aid drilled through a large clamp supporting the lock on the heavy jail door.

Harry Braden, a laborer working in the Eden Valley flour mill, lost his balance and fell in a bran bin and was smothered to death.

Saved His Life.

Whitehall, Ill., June 8th.—Mr. Lon Manley had Bright's Disease and after his home doctor had treated him for sometime he finally told him that he could do nothing more for him, and that he would surely die.

A friend who had heard of what Dodd's Kidney Pills had done in cases of Kidney Trouble, advised Mr. Manley to try a treatment of this remedy.

He did so and everyone was surprised and delighted to see an improvement in a very short time. This improvement gradually kept on as the treatment proceeded, till now Mr. Manley is well. He says:

"The doctor said he had done all he could for me. He gave me up. A friend advised me to take Dodd's Kidney Pills, and in a few weeks I was nearly all right again.

"I am not dead, and can truthfully say that I feel better today than I have for years. Dodd's Kidney Pills are a wonderful remedy and I will always praise them and recommend them to everyone suffering as I did."

Mr. Manley's recovery has caused a profound sensation, as no one ever thought he would recover.

Mrs. Laura L. Barnes, Washington, D. C., Ladies Auxiliary to Burnside Post, No. 4, G. A. R., recommends Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"In diseases that come to women only, as a rule, the doctor is called in, sometimes several doctors, but still matters go from bad to worse; but I have never known of a case of female weakness which was not helped when Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was used faithfully. For young women who are subject to headaches, backache, irregular or painful periods, and nervous attacks due to the severe strain on the system by some organic trouble, and for women of advanced years in the most trying time of life, it serves to correct every trouble and restore a healthy action of all organs of the body.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a household reliance in my home, and I would not be without it. In all my experience with this medicine, which covers years, I have found nothing to equal it and always recommend it."—MRS. LAURA L. BARNES, 607 Second St., N. E., Washington, D. MAIL ORDER FRAUDS.

Clever Schemes for Bleeding Gullible Newspaper Readers.

Post Office Bureau of Inspection Kept Busy Investigating All Sorts of Dishonest and Alluring "Ads."

[Special Chicago Letter.]

THE alleged frauds in the post office department now being aired at Washington are supposed to involve hundreds of thousands of dollars. The whole country was surprised when the enormous sum—$10,000 here, $50,000 there—were mentioned as fractions in the supposed corruption fund. Yet this is but a bagatelle compared with the simply gigantic frauds investigated every year by the inspection of Uncle Sam's mail.

Swindles aggregating $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 are unearthed every year by the post office inspectors, and proven in court. Thefts by letter carriers or post office clerks constitute only a small portion of this. The greater part of the frauds is perpetrated by so-called business men, who use the mails for schemes that draw the dollars out of the pockets of gullible folks month after month, year after year, by the same old schemes.

A corps of 200 inspectors, as species of special detectives, is employed all over the country hunting down these swindlers.

The post office bureau of inspection has 15 divisions. By far the largest of these has its headquarters at Chicago. Col. Stuart, inspector general here, has 23 inspectors under him and investigated last year 19,000 cases of alleged frauds. New York city, the second largest, had 10,000 cases, handled by 16 inspectors. The enormous work of the Chicago department is due partly to the fact that the city handles more mail than any other.

"We closed up the business of thousands of swindlers right around Chicago last year," said Chief Clerk R. J. Holmes, of the Chicago department. "It is no exaggeration to say that the swindlers got several million dollars out of the pockets of the people."

It is also no exaggeration to say that the swindles are going on at this very minute to the amount of hundreds of thousands of dollars. "Fake" oil companies, investment schemes, "sure ten per cent." propositions, etc., etc., are being advertised in the papers and are flourishing more than ever. The post office inspector gets some of them into court and prosecutes. Occasionally the federal court sends a culprit to the penitentiary, but the majority of them escape in the fines that do not represent ten per cent. of the money they have made in their schemes.

Here's an advertisement:

YOUR LIFE'S FATE in love, business and marriage. Photo of future husband or wife. Birthstone pin and life's chart for 10 cents and birth date.

This is the advertisement, with the name omitted, as it appeared this week in many of the mail order papers. I showed the clipping to an employe of the Chicago bureau of post office inspection.

"Is this a fraud or isn't it?" I asked.

"That remains to be proven," was the calm reply. "The way to do is to send the ten cents in reply to the ad and then file your complaint here if you think you have been defrauded."

COL. JAMES E. STUART.

"Will you prosecute them?"

The explanation was that it required five such complaints to establish one cause for an investigation. And finally the official came out with the bold statement:

"These ten-cent schemes don't amount to much," he said. "We are tremendously busy here on big cases, trying to put a stop to thousand-dollar swindles. Better save your ten cents by not writing for the photo of your future wife."

The task of the post office inspecters is indeed a very difficult one and the path to prosecution is more than devious. A strict law prevents the opening of any private mail by inspectors or others. No matter how certain the government may be that a firm is swindling, letters are not tampered with under any circumstances. So the inspectors must resort to many tricks to get proof. Sometimes they go out into the country, and send in their money to the fraudulent firms until they have enough letters to establish positive proof. If the swindlers get an inkling that a post office inspector is trying to "lead them on" they may hide their schemes and throw the inspector off the track. Girls are often used in the guise of stenographers to get evidence. Sometimes the detectives themselves get positions in a firm suspected of frauds. Many other methods, I know, are used, but the post office department is very secretive. Their inspectors work more quietly than any other detectives and when they finish their case, they quietly pack up and go—no one ever knew that the person with whom he dealt was the post office inspector himself.

"The police of the cities spoil many a good case," said Chief Clerk Holmes. "We were working up some good proofs of fraud against the horse-racing concerns recently, when the police started raids on a number of places, made a great noise and scared all the schemers under cover. Our inspectors, who had been very, very quietly working up the evidence, had to drop the cases.

THE "LUCKY BOX" FACTORY.

"The biggest frauds by all odds have been in the get-rich-quick lines. It is such an old scheme, but it is always being worked again. The plan is very simple—the same as in the case of the notorious Franklin syndicate in the east. Some 'con-man' starts to advertise that he will pay enormous profits on investments—two, three, five or ten per cent. a week. When the 'suckers' begin to send their money, he actually pays out the dividends. A man may send $100 and before long he has $200 back. He tells his friends, and they tell others. Pretty soon the money rolls into the coffers of the 'financier' by the thousands. Of course he pays the interest out of the capital. When he has accumulated enough the crash comes. The financier disappears, the money is gone.

"Fully $500,000 was sent to Chicago in the last 12 months in get-rich-quick schemes of this character. The victims have been of all classes, city people no less than villagers and farmers, women as well as men, rich and poor alike.

"Land and improvement swindles are being worked to-day on an enormous scale. Do you remember the U. S. Land Co.? We hunted that scheme down and punished it. This company owned some practically worthless land in Tennessee, way up in the mountains, where we could hardly get at it. The fake oil, rubber and gold-mining companies have secured millions—yes, millions of dollars—for land not worth a dollar an acre.

"Lottery and gambling schemes are brought to our notice month after month. There are hundreds of thousands of people ready to give up their cash again and again when a lottery of some kind is advertised, and we can't always nip these 'fakes' in the bud."

In the last year something has been done to put a stop to "divine healing," absent treatment by mail and one of the most successful quacks in the lot—Francis Truth, of Boston,—who it was said was doing a business of $30,000 a week, was stopped by the law. Meanwhile others who do only $3,000 a month continue to flourish, and by a court decision recently made, nothing can be done to prevent people sending their money by mail to be cured by any process they choose.

Have you seen in recent issues of a Chicago mail order paper an advertisement of a magic gold dip needle that finds hidden treasures for ten cents? Possibly this reminds one of the "lucky box" scheme of Lynn, Mass. Francis Parker manufactured a little wooden box with a brass ring in which were stamped three stars. It cost him from one to five cents, and he sold it for 99 cents. Everybody who bought the box became lucky, said Parker's advertisements; "one broker made $17,000 in one hour after buying the lucky box; a spinster won a lover; a woman was cured of rheumatism; a gentleman hobbled in on crutches; got a box; walked off with crutches under his arm." The advertisements ran in glaring headlines, and nobody interfered with Parker's business until the authorities noticed his enormous mail. When the post office inspector appeared at the lucky box factory Parker fled. Twenty-seven thousand letters were waiting for him at the Boston post office with 7,000 money orders that day.

Ventilation In the Hat.

"Some customers hove nonsensical notions about the proper way to ventilate a hat," said a fashionable hatter. "In fact, they are so whimsical about it that we make the hats without a ventilator and try to suit the wishes of the customer after he has handed his money to the salesman. Many customers will not have a hat ventilated at all. Well, they miss a great deal of comfort and take long chances for baldness in old age. The English style, and the only one that some buyers will adopt, is a ring of perforoted holes in the crown of the hat. In my opinion it is just as well to have no ventilator at all as to put it there. The best way is to have two holes, one on each side of the hat, just above the band. Then you get good circulation all the time. There are ways of punching the holes artistically so that they do not detract from the appearance of the hat. But you would be surprised ot the number of men who will not hava them, some because it is not foshionable ond others because they think the hat will not wear so well."—New York Times.

A Famous Pudding.

There is no other pudding on earth to which so much honor is paid as the huge beefsteak pudding served up daily at the most famous tavern in London, Ye Olde Cheshire Cheese, in Fleet street.

This pudding has been served up every day without break for nearly 200 years. Garrick, Goldsmith and Dr. Johnson used to enjoy it. Every great writer in England makes a point of eating it today. It is inseparably associated with English literature.

Evary evening after the pudding is cooked there is a solemn procession. The proprietor of the tavern, bearing the pudding on a big dish, goes first, followed by the cooks, the waiters and the antire staff. They bear the pudding all around the tavern, the customers doing homage to it. Then and not till then it may be cut up and eaten.

Why Gold Is Rare.

Why is gold so rare? Simply because it is heavy. There are only two metals that are heavier—namely, platinum and iridium. Remember that at the beginning the earth was a body of gas. By gradual condensation it became liquid, while now the whole of its mass save only an outer crust much thinner in proportion to the whole bulk than is the shell of an egg would be a fluid but for the fact that it is held together by tremendous pressure. Naturally in the course of its formation about a center of attraction the weightier particles composing the globe gathered about that center. Accordingly we find that the earth as a whole weighs five times as much as water, while the rocks forming the crust are only about two and a half times as heavy as water.

The Four Lettered Name of God.

Is it not passingly singular at least that the name of God should be spelled with four letters in almost every known language? In Latin it is Deus; Greek, Zeus; Hebrew, Adon; Syrian, Adad; Arabian, Alla; Persian, Syra; Tartarian, Idga; Egyptian, Aumu or Zent; East Indian, Esgi or Zenl; Japanese, Zain; Turkish, Addi; Scandinavian, Odin; Wallachian, Zeuc; Croatian, Doga; Dalmatian, Rogt; Tyrrhenian, Eher; Etrurian, Chur; Margarian, Oese; Swedish, Codd; Irish, Dich; German, Gott; French, Dian; Spanish, Dios; Peruvian, Lian.

A Sealskin Church.

The Eskimos possessed the most remarkable place of worship in the world. It was a sealskin church. Forty sealskins ware stretched over a light framework, and in this tent, 18 by 12 feet, services were held every Sunday. But the church came to an untimely end. One hard winter the Eskimos' dogs, being half famished, dined on the sealskins, and only the frame was left. The Eskimos have now erected a dog proof tabernacle.

Public Offices For Sale.

In England in the time of George II. if you wanted a place under the government you could buy one. The sum of £500 would get you a comfortable berth in the victualing office, for instance, where the perquisites, pickings and bribes for contracts made the service worth having. Members of parliament, who had the privilege of franking letters, sometimes sold the right for £300 a year.

DISGUISES OF NATURE.

The Quality of Defense Is Found In Every Animal.

By a decree of nature one-half the world flourishes at the expense of the other half. The sparrow chases the butterfly, but the hawk chases the sparrow. For the problem of life is twofold. It is not enough merely to eat. It is necessary to avoid being eaten. Yet nature detests killing for killing's sake. Massacre forms no part of her great plan. So we see that every creature is provided with some more or less effective quality of defense by means of which the attacks of its natural enemies are rendered less frequent or less deadly.

Thus the antelope by means of its superior speed at times escapes from the lion. The armadillo, rolled in its wondrous coat of mail, lies secure among a score of hungry, gnowing foes, while the white hare, scarcely distinguishable from the snow on which it crouches, is often overlooked by his foe, the fox. But of all creatures none has received more ample protection than the insects. Some of them possess stings, others bite, and a few puff out clouds of poisonous vapor to stupefy or blind their pursuers. Again, there are insects clothed in impenetrable armor, insects covared with sharp spines and prickles and others whose means of defense consist in nothing but a likeness to the objects which surround them.—Royal Magazine.

To say silly things is about as bad as to do them.—Punxsutawney Spirit.

Child Study.

The study of child psychology is attracting ever increasing interest and enthusiasm. Problems in crime and insanity are becoming solvable. The right of the child to proper treatment, bodily and mental, is making a stronger appeal. It is coming to be better known just what treatment fosters a balanced development and just what physical conditions preclude the possibility of such development. Parents will know that the nervous, fractious child needs the services of a brain expert, possibly afterward of a skilled surgeon. It will be understood that stubbornness can be cured if rationally dealt with or made a nucleus of crime if murderously mismanaged. May every educated parent aid in this beneficent work by studying his own child fairly and impartially and collecting materials from his neighborhood that will give the students a brooder outlook! Fair, honest statements from varying environments are of value. Read, study along this line and see what wonderful avenues of thought open up.—Health.

Blood Corpuscles.

The war between the white corpuscles of the blood ond the microbes of disease was first described by the Russian pathologist, Metchnikoff. While devoting himself to the study of inflammations he in each case noted the presence of white cells in the blood currents in abnormal numbers. Inside these white cells he invariably found the specific microbe of the disease under consideration. It seemed that the big corpuscles were devouring the poisonous microbes. Sometimes the number taken up by a corpuscle was too great, and it died as a result. If this overcoming of the white corpuscles by the microbes was general the patient died.

She Could Spell Too.

While waiting in the reception room for their hostess some visitors were entertained by that lady's four-year-old daughter. One of the callers remarked to the other:

"She is not very p-r-e-t-t-y."

"No," instantly replied the child; "I am not very p-r-e-t-t-y, but I am very s-m-a-r-t."—New York Times.

Sticky Onion Juice.

A very convenient mucilage can be made out of onion juice by any one who wishes to use it. A good sized Spanish onion, after being boiled a short time, will yield on being pressed quite a large quantity of very adhesive fluid. This is used quite extensively in various trades for pasting paper on to tin or zinc or even glass, and the tenacity with which it holds would surprise any one on making the first attempt. It is the cheapest and best mucilage for such purposes and answers just as well as many of the more costly and patent cements. Some of the cements sold by street fakirs at 10 cents a bottle consist of nothing but onion juice and water, and the bottle ond cork cost a great deal more than the contents.

One night when Floyd, another poor author, was wandering about the streets he found Derrick asleep upon a bulk. Upon being suddenly awakened Derrick started up. "My dear Floyd," said he, "I am sorry to see you in this destitute state. Will you go home with me to my lodgings?" And they turned in on the bulk together like the good fellows they were.

How Sleigh Bells Are Made.

"The making of sleigh bells is quite an art," says an iron founder. "The little iron ball is too big to be put in through the holes in the bell, ond yet it is inside. How did it get there? The little iron ball is called 'the jinglet.' When you shake the sleigh bell it jingles. In making the bell tha jinglet is put inside a little ball of mud, just the shape of the inside of the bell. Then a mold is made, just the shape of the outside of the bell. This mud ball with the jinglet inside is placed in the mold of the outside, and the metal is poured in, which fills up the space between the ball and the mold.

"When the mold is taken off, you see a sleigh bell, but it will not ring, as it is full of dirt. The hot metal that the bell is made of dries the dirt so that it can be shaken out. After the dirt is all shaken out of the holes in the bell the little iron jinglet will still be in the bell and will ring. It took a good many years to think out how to make a sleigh bell."

THE OLD FIRE HORSE.

Pathetic Ending to His Brilliant and Glorious Career.

The story of a veteran fire horse that was disabled and found his way into the street cleaning department is told by Sewell Ford in "Horses Nine." The author says:

There was no delay about his initiation. Into his fore hoofs they branded this shameful inscription, "D. S. C. 937." On his back they flung a forty pound single harness with a dirty piece of canvas as a blanket. They hooked him to an iron dump cart, and than with a heavy lashed whip they haled him forth ot 5:30 a. m. to begin the inglorious work of removing refuse from the city streets.

Perhaps you think Old Silver could not feel the disgrace, tha ignominy of it all. Could you have seen the lowered head, tha limp hung tail, the dulled eyes and the dispirited sag of his quarters you would have thought differently.

It is one thing to jump a hook and ladder truck up Broadway to tha relief of a fire threatened block and quite another to plod humbly along the curb from ash can to ash can. How Silver did hate those cans! Each one should have been for him a signal to stop. But it was not. In consequence he was yanked to a halt avery two minutes.

Sometimes he would crane his neck and look mournfully around at the unsightly leg which he had come to understand was the cause of all his misery. There would come into his great eyes a look of such pitiful melancholy that one might almost fancy tears rolling out. Then he would be roused by an exasperated driver, who jerked cruelly on the lines and used his whip as if it had been a flail.

To another horse, unused to anything better, the life would not hava seemed hard. But to Silver, accustomed to such little amenities as friendly pats from men, and the comradeship of his fellow workers, it was like a bad dream. Had he not lost his caste? Express and dray horses, the very ones that had once scurried into side streets at sound of his hoofs, now insolently crowded him to the curb. When he had been on the fire truck Silver had yielded the right of way to none, he had held his head high; now he dodged and waited, he wore a blind bridle, and he wished neither to sea nor to be seen.

What Ailed the Clock.

Mrs. Benson's clock, after having kept excellent time for several years, suddenly stopped. After trying for some time to make it go she removed it from its shelf and sent it to a clock repairer.

"Madam," he said after inspecting, "is this clock kept in a damp room?"

"No," she replied. "Wa keep it in the driest room in the house."

"Has it ever had a fall into a tub of water or anything of that sort?"

"Never."

"Well, I can't understand it. Its works are as rusty as if it had been left unused in a cellar for a year."

"I can't see how that can be," said Mrs. Benson. "We are so careful of that clock that we always keep our vials of muriatic and sulphuric acid inside of it, where we know they will never be touched."

Then the jeweler understood.—Youth's Companion.

Sixteenth Century London.

It is a mistake to imagine that the streets of London in tha sixteenth century presented a much more lively appearance than they do at present. The everyday dress of the people, even of the highest rank, was almost invariably mada of broadcloth of a sober color, occasionally enlivened with valvet and smart ribbons. It was only on state occasions or festivities, parties, balls and public entertainments that the gay silks ond velvets and the cloth of gold were exhibited, and it must be remembered that so costly were the materials which could then be employed in male or female dress that not infrequently parents left their best clothes by will to their favorite children os a much valued legacy.

Old Comical Pictures.

There is in the museum of Turin, Italy, a papyrus roll which displays a whole series of comical scenes. In the first place, a lion, a crocodile and an ape are giving a vocal and instrumental concert. Next comes an ass, dressed, armed and sceptered lika a pharaoh. With majestic swagger he receives the gifts presented to him by a cat of high degree, to whom a bull acts as proud conductor. A lion and gazelle are playing at checkers, a hippopotamus is perched in a high tree and a horse has climbed into the tree and is trying to dislodge him.

The Mean Height of Land.

The mean height of land above sea level, according to the most scientific geographers, is 2,250 feet. The mean depth of the ocean is 12,480 feet. Only 2 per cent of the sea (oceans in general) is included inside a depth of 500 fathoms, while 77 par cent lies between 500 and 3,000 fathoms. If the land were filled into the hollows of the seas, water would roll over the earth's crust to a uniform depth of two miles.

Envelopes In the Eighteenth Century.

Envelopes are supposed to be modern, but in the Birch manuscripts in the British museum, No. 4433-105, there is a letter from Martin Triewald to Sir Hans Sloane, dated Stockholm, April 24, 1755, inclosed in an ordinary envelope, which is opened out and mounted at the end of the letter.—Notes and Queries.

STARTLING EVIDENCE.

Fresh testimoney in great quantity is constantly coming in, declaring Dr, King's New Discovery for Consumption Coughs and Colds to be unequled. A recent expression from T.J.McFarlaud Bentorville, Va. serves as example. He writes: "I had Bronchitis for three years and doctored all the time witbont being benefited. Then I began takeing Dr King's New Discovery and a few bottels whooly cured me. "Eqully effective in curing all Lung and Throat troubles, Consumption, Pneumonia and Grip. Gurenteed by Kronschnabel & Bolstad. Trial bottles free, regular size 50c and $1.00.

They Moved.

A Boston trolley car was taking on a load of women, and the conductor frantically urged his gentle passengers to "move up;" but, as usual, his behests were not obeyed. "Now, move up, ladies; please do move up!" he cried. No one stirred an inch. "I say, ladies, move up! The motorman is a great deal better looking man than I am!" The ladies swept forward en masse.

The Untamable Tiger.

Of all wild animals trained for menagerie and show purposes not one is as hard to conquer as the tiger. Compared to tha training of lions and elephants the training of a tiger is as the breaking in of a vicious boarhound to the first lessons in etiquette of a chubby Newfoundland puppy. Even the most expert wild animal trainers balk at an assignment to "break" n tiger. Not more than one in ten professional lion trainers has the nerve to try his hand at the great, ferocious, striped cats.

As a matter of fact, there is no such thing as a "tamed tiger." Few and far between there are instances where the animals are shown as trained and broken in, hut the friendship of the animal for the trainer who may hava befriended it. for years hangs at the end of the man's black snake whip. From the day the acquaintance is mode to the day man and beast are separated there is a stealthy warfare between them, the catlike slyness of the ponderous brute directed toword the one aim of killing the man and the vigilance of the mastar ever alort to frustrate that plan.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

The Harm Slang Does.

The use of slang tends to limit the vocabulary of him who uses it. Now, a limited vocabulary is almost as inconvenient at times as a limited purse, and it is far more inelegant. If there was practically limitless wealth within the reach of him who was minded to take it, it would argue a certain stupidity in any one who declined to avail himself of tha supply. The same assertion holds true with regard to him who is willing to limit his choice of words. There is even more to he said than that. There is a limitless wealth of words at our disposal, but the most of us are too stupid to make use of them.

There are about 200,000 words in the English language. The average educated person is able in reading to understand perhaps 25,000 words, hut most of us who write and speak limit ourselves to about 500 or 600. Indeed, there is a vast number of fairly intelligent people, or people who pass as fairly intelligent, whose working vocabularies do not comprise more than 300 or 400 words each.—Household.

Dishonest Croupiers.

Each roulette table in Monta Carlo has a chief, an underchief and seven croupiers. The roulette croupiers are ordered to keep their hands spread out open upon the table between the turns. This is designed not only to give confidence to the players, hut to protect the bank against its own employees. Once it was found that a croupier who seemed inordinately fond of snuff had a spring bottom snuffbox. Every now and then he would set it down on a gold piece, and when he took it up the gold piece was inside. Another croupier was discovered to have a sort of funnel under his collar, which ran down to a money belt. Every now and then he would scratch his neck, and every time he did so the bank lost 20 francs.—Argonaut.

The Independent Boy.

The nonchalance of hoys who are sure of a dinner, and would disdain as much as a lord to do or say aught to conciliate one, is the healthy attitude of human nature. How is a hoy the master of society! Independent, irresponsible, looking out from his corner on such people and facts as pass hy, he tries and sentences them on their merits, in the swift summary ways of boys, as good, bad, interesting, silly, eloquent, troublesome. He cumbers himself never about consequences, about interests; he gives an independent, genuine verdict. You must court him; he does not court you.—Emerson.

A Scotchman Who Smoked In Church.

Sir Walter Scott in his "Heart of Midlothian" refers to one Duncan of Knockdunder, an important personage, who smoked during the whole of the sermon from an iron pipe tobacco borrowed from other worshipers. We are told that at the end of the discourse he knocked the ashes out of his pipe, replaced it in his sporran, returned the tobacco pouch to its owner and joined in the prayer with decency and attention.

Bottles and Souls.

"Blow into an empty bottle," says the oriental proverb, "and you shall gat a great response swiftly. It is not so with a full bottle, which answereth not, being too heavy with wine. Therein is the soul lika these, and from the full soul cometh no echo to words idly chanted, but the empty soul repeateth hack each noise aloud."

Geology of the Heart.

"No," said Maude pensively; "neither Henry nor Charles for me. That's clear. I will not let Henry propose because he hasn't got the 'dust,' and I can't get Charles to declare himself because he hasn't got the 'sand.' However, there's old Mr. Richfellow. I'll keep my eye on him. He's got the 'rocks.'"

The Grotesque.

Canon Ainger, biographer and editor of Charles Lamb, once uttered this pithy saying: "You may preach like an angel, but if you can whistle on a stick people ignore your preaching and speak of you as the man who can whistle on a stick."

What He Married On.

"Tom Higginside married, you say, on $10 a week? That took nerve anyhow. What was he working at?"

"Nothing. It was the girl that was earning the $10."

If it troubles you to pick up anything from the floor and you are under sixty, that means you are eating too much.—Atchison Globe.

A Bird That is Feared.

The elster (Pica caudata) is a bird that is respected and feared throughout south Germany. It belongs to the raven tribe and is about the size of a dove, with black and white feathers and long, pointed tail. It builds its nest in orchards, and its life is sacred. If it is seen three times in succession on the same house top in a place remote from its home it is believed to be a sure sign of death in that house. If it flies over a house where any one is ill and gives its peculiar cry the sick person is sure to die, but if it does not scream the patient may recover. It is better for the sick person if the bird does not come near.

No one could be hired to bother these birds for fear they might seek revenge, and if by chance one of them should die it is a sign of bad luck to the owner of the property where it was found. The bird is a valuable insect destroyer and in this way probably more than compensates for the fear it occasions among the farmers.

To Induce Humility In a Peacock.

If you wish to take the conceit out of a peacock pull out his tail feathers, and as soon as he finds the glory of his plumage gone he becomes the humblest, most subdued and ashamed looking bird that ever walked the earth. A peacock in full feather is so vain and conceited as sometimes to be really troublesome. Not satisfied with squalling at the top of his discordant voice and with parading up and down the walks with expanded plumage, he will attack cats, dogs and even children and has been known to seriously injure small boys or girls that were incautious enough to venture within his reach.

Plucking his tail feathers, however, causes all his courage to disappear. He will sneak around the yard like a whipped spaniel, will keep out of sight as much as possible, and you will hear nothing of him until his plumage has again grown.

The Tale of a Tail.

A writer in tracing the ancestry of the dog to wolf and jackal notices typical differences in the case of their eyes, their body colors and markings, the habit of turning around before lying down and other interesting peculiarities, but he does not mention the most striking and infallible way of distinguishing them—namely, by the fashion in which they carry their tails.

Wolves and coyotes have a sneaking way of carrying their tails low, almost dragging on the ground, while dogs carry their tails up, and the further removed they are from the feral type the higher they carry them. Shepherds and collies, which retain many of their racial characteristics, carry their tails lowest of all; setters and pointers a degree or two higher, stiffening out straight when drawing on game; terriers and hounds elevate their tails to the spinal line; St. Bernards and Newfoundlands affect a curve over the back, while pugs actually come to a full twist. An old plainsman could tell a wolf or coyote as far as he could see him, and in buffalo days this was a most useful indication of buffalo herds being not far away. These predatory creatures always followed a moving herd.—Forest and Stream.

Paper of the Ancients.

The interior bark of trees was formerly used to write upon, and its Latin name (liber, a bark) seems to intimate that its use was as ancient as the art of writing itself. In one respect the bark was superior to the leaf. It could be rolled into a volume, while the leaf would crack if subjected to such a process.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

A prominent club woman, Mrs. Danforth, of St. Joseph, Mich., tells how she was cured of falling of the womb and its accompanying pains.

"Life looks dark indeed when a woman feels that her strength is sapping away and she has no hopes of ever being restored. Such was my feeling a few months ago when I was advised that my poor health was caused by prolapsus or falling of the womb. The words sounded like a knell to me, I felt that my sun had set; but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound came to me as an elixir of life; it restored the lost forces and built me up until my good health returned to me. For four months I took the medicine daily and each dose added health and strength. I am so thankful for the help I obtained through its use."—MRS. FLORENCE DANFORTH, 1007 Miles Ave., St. Joseph, Mich.—$5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

The record of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cannot be equalled by any other medicine in the world.

BABY'S FUTURE

Something for Mothers to Think About

Lives of Suffering and Sorrow Averted

And Happiness and Prosperity Assured by

Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills When All Else Fails.

Every child born into the world with an inherited or early developed tendency to distressing, disfiguring humours of the skin, scalp and blood, becomes an object of the most tender solicitude, not only because of its suffering, but because of the dreadful fear that the disfiguration is to be lifelong and mar its future happiness and prosperity. Hence, it becomes the duty of mothers of such afflicted children to acquaint themselves with the best, the purest and most effective treatment available, viz., The Cuticura Treatment.

Warm baths with Cuticura Soap, to cleanse the skin and scalp of crusts and scales, gentle applications of Cuticura Ointment, to allay itching, irritation and inflammation, and soothe and heal, and mild doses of Cuticura Resolvent, to cool the blood in the severer cases, are all that can be desired for the speedy relief and permanent cure of skin tortured infants and children, and the comfort of worn-out parents.

Millions of women use Cuticura Soap, assisted by Cuticura Ointment, for preserving, purifying and beautifying the skin, scalp, hair and hands, for annoying irritations and weaknesses, and for many sanative, antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves.

Upper Cross Roads, Md., June 15th.—Never in the history of medicine in this state has anything created such a sensation by its marvelous cures of the most extreme cases as Dodd's Kidney Pills.

This wonderful medicine seems to know no limit in its wonder working power. Long-standing cases that have defied the most expert medical treatment seem to yield easily to this new conqueror of disease.

Hundreds have testified to the virtue of Dodd's Kidney Pills. They tell of severe cases of Rheumatism, Lumbago, Backache, Female Trouble, Nervous Diseases and even Dropsy, Diabetes and Bright's Disease cured by this medicine.

Among those who have been benefited may be mentioned Mrs. John Cooney of this place.

Mrs. Cooney says:

"I believe Dodd's Kidney Pills the best remedy ever known for Kidney Trouble and weak back.

"They are without exception the best medicine I have ever used.

"I will always praise them highly, for I know that they are good."

Mrs. Cooney is only one of many who say of Dodd's Kidney Pills:

"The most wonderful remedy we ever heard of."

Why He Did It.

"I want you to realize, sir," said the police magistrate, as he soaked the brutal husband for 200 plunks and costs, "that wife-beating is an expensive pastime."

THROBS.

There's a yard of sky above me, in a frame of tower and dome,
And the smoke makes purple patches on its gloomy monochrome.
There are soot-bedraggled pigeons upward sailing to the sky
Through the canyons, gloomy, narrow, hedged by buildings black and high.
There are sparrows idly flitting—sparking,
 spooning, fighting blades—
One might give undue importance to their voluble tirades;
For Messrs. Fuss and Feathers are convinced of this one fact:
A most afflicted world 'twould be if it their presence lacked.
I may sit and dream of sailing on a sunny,
 smiling sea;
Of fishing in a quiet brook, a good book
 on my knee;
Of walking through the silent woods, or through the meadows sweet—
But the great old heart of Nature throbs in noises of the street!

A mistaken country poet had a thought and wrote it down:
'Twas that God had made the country, but that Man had made the town.
But the product of the city is the Man that God has made—
Has created in His image, strong, erect and unafraid.
And although I love the country, where the dicky-birdie sings,
I'm confessing in my heart of hearts his songs are trifling things
As compared to lilting melodies—folks
 tramping up and down,
The street car gongs, the whirr of wheels,
 the noises of the town!
I may dream of sweet-voiced nightingales
 —their notes are all "tip-top"—
But I want life's grander organ played with Vox Humana's stop.
Though she smiles upon the country, and her smile is good and sweet—
 noises of the street!

One Athlete's Downfall

By EDWIN J. WEBSTER

TOM ATWOOD was an athlete, and a good one. He had played left guard on the 'varsity in a year when that meant a good deal; he was the best boxer in college; altogether, he would have been picked out as a man eminently able to take care of himself. Yet he fell. And his fall was partly due to the pride which notoriously precedes a fall, and partly to the fact that Tom had read too many tales about the manner in which the husky young tenderfoot from the east treats the western bad man when the latter attempts to impose on him.

In stories the plucky and virtuous tenderfoot is asked to drink, refuses to take anything stronger than mineral water, the bad man is enraged, and starts to draw his gun, but before he can use his weapon the tenderfoot lands on his jaw, and follows this up by giving the floor a general polishing with the aforesaid bad man. Of course this procedure is the rule. But there are exceptions to every rule.

After leaving college Tom took a job of mining engineering in the Black Hills. For about a month things ran on with the even tenor of the east. The nearest saloon was miles away, so no one even asked Tom to drink, let alone forcing him at the point of a pistol to imbibe red eye against his wishes. Tom wasn't exactly looking for trouble, but he began to think things might be too much the other way.

At the end of the first month it was necessary to go to the nearest town for supplies. Arriving in town after a long, dusty ride, Tom sought a place where he might obtain something to eat, and at the same time wash down some of the western dust which had accumulated in his throat during the long morning's ride. There wasn't any trouble finding such a place. In fact, the main street of the town on both sides was crowded with them. After his month's experience in thirsty places Tom struck for the nearest. It was here that he put to the test the truth of the current "Tenderfoot versus Bad Man" tales, which he had read from his youth up. The test proved a thorough, if not a satisfactory, one.

Standing in front of the bar when Tom entered was a gentleman who seemed the perfect type of the "bad man" dear to readers of western stories. He had the broad-brimmed sombrero, the leggings, the revolver, which are supposed to go with the typical killer. Lots of men who have never killed anything fiercer than a cow wear this outfit. But it happened that Mr. Ike Williams, the gentleman in question, really was a man with a bad record in the use of his shooting irons. At that he was a pleasant, affable sort of man, until some one else seemed inclined to look for trouble. In that case Mr. Ike Williams made no attempt to sidestep the trouble. He was more likely to go toward it on the gallop.

Mr. Williams was just ordering a drink as Tom entered the barroom. Western etiquette is decidedly against a man drinking alone.

"Step up, stranger," said Ike, affably, "and have something with me."

"I'll have ginger ale," replied Tom, in an unnecessarily aggressive tone.

Ike Williams made no reply to this. He ordered whisky for himself. The bartender started to prepare the drinks. Tom Atwood didn't understand. In all the stories he had read the demand of a tenderfoot for a soft drink always met with the most decided remonstrance.

"I said I'd take ginger ale," he repeated, somewhat in the tone of a man who was looking for trouble. "No whisky for me."

Mr. Ike Williams glanced up in surprise at the tone. As long as he got his own whisky, it was a matter of indifference to him whether Tom drank ginger ale or coal oil. But he didn't approve of the tone in which the order was given. He jerked his head toward the bartender, as if to indicate that he was the man taking the order. But he said nothing, and in Tom Atwood's short career he never had a better opportunity to mind his own business. He didn't appreciate this fact.

"It's soft drinks for me," he reiterated. "No living man can make me drink whisky."

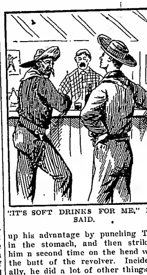
Ordinarily Ike Williams was one of the last men in the world to waste good liquor by forcing it down the throat of an unwilling imbiber. In Tom's last words, however, there was a distinct challenge. Mr. Williams was not the man to pass a challenge unheeded.

"Oh, I don't know about that," he replied, in a soft drawl. If Tom Atwood had been more experienced, he would have recognized a danger signal in that drawl. "I guess, after all, you had better take whisky. Drink it!" he shouted, his voice rising, as the bartender placed the bottle on the bar. "Drink it, or it'll be the worse for you."

As he said this Ike's hand slipped to the revolver in his belt. But now Tom Atwood felt at ease. Everything was going according to programme. The next move would be for the "bad man" to draw his gun. Then, before he could get the drop, Tom would knock the revolver out of his hand, lead for his jaw, and proceed to pummel him in the good old way.

But this time things didn't go according to the well-worn programme. Ike Williams did draw his revolver. But he did not make the slightest effort to get the drop on Tom. Ike never would have been a successful candidate for Sunday-school superintendent, but he had a well-defined creed of right and wrong, and stuck to it. One of the principles of this creed was that it was not th "square thing" to shoot at an unarmed man. At the same time, Mr. Williams did not propose to let himself be knocked about by an impudent, but brawny young athlete from the east. So he shifted his revolver from his right to his left hand, and aimed a blow at Tom's head with the butt. The blow was delivered with a quickness which no stranger would have supposed the affable Mr. Williams capable of.

Tom was speedy with his hands, and a good boxer, but he wasn't looking for any move of this sort. The result was that instead of landing on Ike Williams' jaw with his right, the butt of the revolver landed on Tom's head with stunning force. Then Mr. Williams followed up his advantage by punching Tom in the stomach, and then striking him a second time on the head with the butt of the revolver. Incidentally, he did a lot of other things to him, but they did not interest Tom after he received the second blow on the head.



"IT'S SOFT DRINKS FOR ME," HE SAID.

When Tom opened his eyes the bartender was bending over him, bathing his head with cold water. Tom gave a sigh. He had expected that experience would change some of his ideas of western life, but the change had been too sudden to be pleasant. Then he looked at the bright side of it.

"Anyhow, he didn't make me drink the whisky," he murmured to the bartender.

"He didn't want to," answered that worthy, gruffly. "Ike just mixed it up with you because he thought you were looking for trouble. He's always accommodating about helping a man in a search of that kind. But he wouldn't waste good stuff by forcing it on a man who didn't want it. After he had polished you up he drank your whisky, and went off as quiet and peaceable as a lamb."

This was the unkindest cut of all. As Tom Atwood rose wearily to his feet and felt doubtfully of his head, to see if it was all there, he said, with a little groan:

"If I could get hold of some of those people who tell tales about the way the tenderfoot wipes up the bad man, I'll 'polish them up' worse than Ike Williams did me."—N. Y. Times.

GRATEFUL, HAPPY WOMEN

Miss Muriel Armitage.

Thank Pe-ru-na for Their Recovery After Years of Suffering.

Miss Muriel Armitage, 86 Greenwood Ave., Detroit, Mich., District Organizer of the Royal Templars of Temperance, in a recent letter, says:

"I think that a woman naturally shrinks from making her troubles public, but restored health has meant so much to me that I feel for the sake of other suffering women it is my duty to tell what Peruna has done for me.

"I suffered for five years with uterine irregularities, which brought on hysteria and made me a physical wreck. I tried doctors from the different schools of medicine, but without any perceptible change in my condition. In my despair I called on an old nurse, who advised me to try Peruna, and promised good results if I would persist and take it regularly. I thought this was the least I could do and procured a bottle. I knew as soon as I began taking it that it was affecting me differently from anything I had used before, and so I kept on taking it. I kept this up for six months, and steadily gained strength and health, and when I had used fifteen bottles I considered myself entirely cured. I am a grateful, happy woman to-day."—Miss Muriel Armitage.

Female Weakness is Pelvic Catarrh.

Always Half Sick are the Women Who Have Pelvic Catarrh.

Catarrh of any organ, if allowed to progress, will affect the whole body. Catarrh without nervousness is very rare, but pelvic catarrh and nervousness go hand in hand.

What is so distressing a sight as a poor half-sick, nervous woman, suffering from the many almost unbearable symptoms of pelvic catarrh? She does not consider herself ill enough to go to bed, but she is far from being able to do her work without the greatest exhaustion. This is a very common sight and is almost always due to pelvic catarrh.

It is worse than foolish for so many women to suffer year after year with a disease that can be permanently cured.

Peruna cures catarrh permanently. It cures old chronic cases as well as a slight attack, the only difference being in the length of time that it should be taken to effect a cure.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

THIEVES AND THUGS.

They Form a Community of Their Own in New York.

Head of Detective Bureau Says That "Get-Rich-Quick" Men Are the Most Dangerous of Confidence Men.

[Special New York Letter.]

WHEN Inspector McClusky, head of the detective bureau of New York, issued his warning to 400 thieves the other day to leave the city the question naturally arose: "Where will they go?" The police dragnets were spread and the men were arrested and arraigned in the police courts. They were told that the only condition of their freedom was that they were to leave the town. Every man arrested promised to do so and all were released.

A GREEN GOODS MAN.

The average citizen of New York who read this announcement in his newspaper the next morning, together with an interview with Inspector McClusky, said: "Well, that is a good thing." But the average citizen thinks no further of the incident. As a matter of fact the thieves than leave New York under such orders are comparatively few. It is likely that out of the 400 told to get out 25 or 30 will actually do so, but it will be only to move to some other large city. The professional thief, whether he be a pickpocket, a "strong-arm man," a porch climber, a forger, or one of the many other varieties, can only exist in the cities. He finds there is nothing for him to do in the country or the villages. As for the thieves who apparently obeyed the orders of the chief of detectives, they were undoubtedly intending to leave town anyway, as their business—if we may call it that—necessitates a rambling life. As for the rest, one who knows this class of "gentry" may take a stroll any pleasant afternoon down the Thieves' highway, known in the city directory as the Bowery, and there he will see nearly all the old-time faces that have decorated the "rogue's gallery,"—designated in the vernacular as "the Hall of Fame"—for many years.

If I wanted to find any particular New York thief, for instance, I know a certain person whom I could locate in a Pell street saloon and he would reach my man for me in short order. Thieves are classed according to the work they do, like tradesmen. A man who makes his living entering houses by means of porches would be as unable to get a dollar by picking pockets as he would by silk weaving. On the other hand a pickpocket could not keep from starving to death if he had to go to sandbagging. Not only do they do their work in classes, but they live in classes. So if the thief I wanted to find were a "strong-arm gun" or highwayman, my man in Pell street would look for him at once in the Cherry Hill district. If he were a burglar he would live in Chrystie street, and so it would be with all the different grades.

But Inspector McClusky's order, while it has not had the effect of driving the thieves out of New York, has served to bring more prominently before the public the fact that this city is overrun with the worst types of criminals in the United States, and it is natural that they should all flock to the metropolis. Of course, when the "front office" (as the thieves call police headquarters) begins to agitate the question of cleaning up the city, it is policy on their part to remain quiet for a time, but they only do so for a few weeks and then the burglaries and robberies are as flagrant as ever.

Inspector McClusky, while recently appointed to his position, is an old-time thief catcher, and knows many of the criminals well. In talking with me he expressed the belief that the "crook" of to-day was rapidly degenerating and that the profits in a criminal career were reduced to such small figures that it hardly paid men with brains to remain in the "profession." The revolution, he said, was caused by the advancement of modern police methods. The very individualities of specialties to which attention has already been called, like one man being an expert pickpocket, another a sandbagger, another a housebreaker, and so on, leads to the detection of crime. The inspector explains it in this wise:

"If a clever piece of forgery has been done we know a pickpocket didn't do it; so the first thing we inquire is: 'Who are the expert forgers out of the penitentiaries?' There are only a few of them in the country, and we easily locate those that were near the scene of the crime at the time it was committed. Then we fit in the clues. So it is with other kinds of crime. You see police methods have become a science and we are now in such close touch with the police forces of other cities that all the rogues are known, and it is pretty hard for them to escape. For instance, every counterfeiter has his own peculiar style of execution, just as an artist has, and the moment a bogus note gets into circulation the experts know who made it.

"If you will look over the criminal records you will find not only every crook's picture, but you will see a full report of his specialty and his methods of work. We know them all like books, and generally can put our hands on them when we want them. So, you see, under the circumstances it does not pay for good men to remain in the business. The kinds of crooks, however, who have not degenerated, are the wire tappers—that is, the men who tap the wires and get race information, so as to beat the poolrooms—and the steerer' to the 'brace' faro games. This crook is of a higher type than the old style confidence man. He must dress well and hang about the hotels so as to create the impression that he is a gentleman of leisure in order to ensnare the real gentlemen into a little 'private game.' But even he finds it necessary to keep on the move, for every large hotel keeps its own detective who soon knows all about the alleged gentleman.

"I will tell you of one class of swindler, though, that is on the increase and who is very difficult to dislodge, and that is the 'get-rich-quick' man. He establishes himself in fine offices in the business part of the city, either on lower Broadway or Wall street, and does a land-office business. His methods are so apparently business-like that the police are practically powerless. This class of criminals is more to be feared than the burglar or pickpocket because of his security."

One of the oldest crooks in New York (he is an "ex-gun" now—that is a retired thief) was reached by me through the man in Pell street. This man formerly earned his living as a "strong-arm" (highwayman or hold-up man) and did not agree with Inspector McClusky that the criminal types were degenerating.

"Of course, the business is changing," said he. "Take the green-goods man (one who pretends to deal in counterfeit money and gives sawdust in exchange for the real money to the dupe who deals with him) as an example. That is a type that has almost entirely disappeared. He has developed into the man who pretends to have the inside on Wall street, and gets money from out of town. The bank burglar in the cities has disappeared altogether for the reason that it is useless to fight against the safes they make nowadays; but the gold-brick man is simply the old type of the present 'get-rich-quick' individual who sells bogus mining stock and worthless securities to the confiding and greedy.

GOLD BRICK NEGOTIATIONS.

"They say there is no 'graft' among the policemen of New York at present. I am not in the business now and know nothing about it, but in the old days I know it was not an unusual thing to see the safe-blower and the policeman taking a social glass together at the denly be a lot of pickpockets who were not working under the friendship of a wise guy (politician). But I don't know how it is worked now. I am out of the business."

In the meantime, Inspector McClusky's order has given us an opportunity to look a little into that interesting sociological study, the Order of Thieves.

Pranks of Students.

A book by Captain Markham of the British army tells of experiences in Westminster school, London, something over half a century ago. He describes the "handings" of those days. The back of the hand was extended, while the master, standing behind, smote it with a rod, which "curled over a little" and left a cut, and the culprit, facing the school, observed the etiquette of the occasion by wearing an expression of "scornful amusement." Captain Markham also describes "tanning," which was administered with the butt end of a rod upon the backs of the boys' legs. He recalls the code of honor, which was merciless to the boy who broke his word or allowed another to suffer for his offense, but permitted "any amount of humbugging of a master." When disinclined for school you said, "I don't feel very well, sir," and before the master inspected your tongue you gave "the upper surface a hard pressure with your upper teeth, and out came a tongue white enough to satisfy any doctor."

Underground Waters.

The earth contains an abundance of water, even in places like some of our great western plateaus where the surface is comparatively arid. The greatest depth at which underground water can exist is estimated to be about six miles. Below that, it is believed, the cavities and pores of the rock are completely closed. The amount of water in the earth's crust is reckoned at nearly a third of that contained in the oceans, so that it would cover the whole surface of the globe to a depth of from 3,000 to 3,500 feet. The waters underground flow horizontally after sinking below the unsaturated zone of the rocks, but in the sands of the Dakota formation, which supply remarkable artesian wells, the motion does not exceed one or two miles a year. The underflow toward the sea beneath the great plains may sometimes take the form of broad streams or moving sheets of water, but the movement is excessively slow.—Youth's Companion.

Indians Have Hard Teeth.

"I don't care for Indians as patients," said a dentist the other day. "No; it isn't that they are objectionable personally; it is just because there is no money to be made out of them at regular rates. The hardness of an Indian's tooth is something to marvel at, and if I had many of them to treat I should be forced to have instruments of unusual strength made to order. The ordinary kind won't stand the pressure. I filled one cavity in a red man's tooth the other day, and before I got through I had turned the edges of no less than twenty drills. There isn't much money in that sort of work, is there? And talk about the Indian's vaunted stoicism and imperviousness to pain! Why, that fellow yelled every time I touched him! I've had six-year-old children behave better in the chair."—Philadelphia Record.

Sentiment Versus Fact.

That the advance preparation of speeches will not always conform to circumstances was made evident during a flag raising at a public school. The young orator had been speaking for several minutes when he advanced to the front of the platform, raised his hand with a dramatic gesture to the flag on the staff above him and shouted:

"See you flag throwing its protecting folds to the breeze of freedom!"

It was a pretty sentiment, but the "breeze" didn't bear out the picture. The flag, to which all eyes were immediately turned, hung as limp as if it had been dipped in water.

Grievances.

Every day in the year the average man has a grievance. On the last day in the year he has probably forgotten the other 364.

Three hundred and sixty-five days in the year he has poured his particular grievance into the ears of some poor devil who has troubles of his own.

Child Study.

The study of child psychology is attracting ever increasing interest and enthusiasm. Problems in crime and insanity are becoming solvable. The right of the child to proper treatment, bodily and mental, is making a stronger appeal. It is coming to be better known just what treatment fosters a balanced development and just what physical conditions preclude the possibility of such development. Parents will know that the nervous, fractious child needs the services of a brain expert, possibly afterward of a skilled surgeon. It will be understood that stubbornness can be cured if rationally dealt with or made a nucleus of crime if murderously mismanaged. May every educated parent aid in this beneficent work by studying his own child fairly and impartially and collecting materials from his neighborhood that will give the students a broader outlook! Fair, honest statements from varying environments are of value. Read, study along this line and see what wonderful avenues of thought open up.—Health.

Blood Corpuscles.

The war between the white corpuscles of the blood and the microbes of disease was first described by the Russian pathologist, Metchnikoff. While devoting himself to the study of inflammations he in each case noted the presence of white cells in the blood currents in abnormal numbers. Inside these white cells he invariably found the specific microbe of the disease under consideration. It seemed that the big corpuscles were devouring the poisonous microbes. Sometimes the number taken up by a corpuscle was too great, and it died as a result. If this overcoming of the white corpuscles by the microbes was general the patient died.

She Could Spell Too.

While waiting in the reception room for their hostess some visitors were entertained by that lady's four-year-old daughter. One of the callers remarked to the other:

"She is not very p-r-e-t-t-y."

"No," instantly replied the child; "I am not very p-r-e-t-t-y, but I am very s-m-a-r-t."—New York Times.

A STARTLING TEST.

To save a life, Dr. T. G. Merritt, of No. Mehoopany, Pa., made a startling test resulting in a wonderful cure. He writes "a patient was attacked with violent hemorrhages caused by ulceration of the stomach. I had often found Electric Bitters excellent for acute stomach and liver troubles so I prescribed them. The patient gained from the first, and has not had an attact in 14 months." Electrict Bitters are are positively guarenteed for Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Constipation and kidney troubles. Try them. Only 50c at Kronschurbel & Bolstad.

Sticky Onion Juice.

A very convenient mucilage can be made out of onion juice by any one who wishes to use it. A good sized Spanish onion, after being boiled a short time, will yield on being pressed quite a large quantity of very adhesive fluid. This is used quite extensively in various trades for pasting paper on to tin or zinc or even glass, and the tenacity with which it holds would surprise any one on making the first attempt. It is the cheapest and best mucilage for such purposes and answers just as well as many of the more costly and patent cements. Some of the cements sold by street fakirs at 10 cents a bottle consist of nothing but onion juice and water, and the bottle and cork cost a great deal more than the contents.

Sharing His Bed.

A Grub street friend of Dr. Johnson's was Derrick, of whom he wrote, "I honor Derrick for his strength of mind." One night when Floyd, another poor author, was wandering about the streets he found Derrick asleep upon a bulk. Upon being suddenly awakened Derrick started up. "My dear Floyd," said he, "I am sorry to see you in this destitute state. Will you go home with me to my lodgings?" And they turned in on the bulk together like the good fellows they were.

Why Harry Wasn't Proud.

Little Harry's oldest sister has just presented her husband with a new baby.

"Well, Harry," said his father, "do you feel proud of being an uncle?"

"No," replied the urchin.

"Why not?" asked his father.

"'Cause I ain't no uncle; I'm an aunt. The new baby's a girl!"—New York Press.

Sadiron and Tailor's Goose.

A "sadiron" is the style in which the common flatiron is spoken of in print, says the Syracuse Herald. "Sad" is an old English synonym for heavy, and Spenser wrote, "More sad than lump of lead." A "sadiron" was a heavy iron and long ago was applied to the flatiron now in common domestic use. The tailor's "goose" was so called because the handle bears a fanciful resemblance to the neck of a goose. This name became it had a reason for being still survives.

Men and Salutes.

A recent writer says: "The Chinaman bends to the very ground when he salutes; the Russian, farther west, takes off his hat and scrapes with it his very path; in Prussian Konigsberg, always farther west, the passersby salute each other by taking off their hats or caps very low; in Berlin the head covering is raised but little; in Paris still less, in London not at all or with a difference. The American keeps his hat on immovably and never bends, but all civilized nations, of course, take off their hats to the ladies."

Those outside of a palace may feel Shakespeare's sentiment, "There's such divinity doth hedge a king," but it is hardly possible to those inside. One of the Scotch commissioners to negotiate a union between Scotland and England, Sir John Clerk, could not have felt it during an official interview with Queen Anne, of whom he gives this realistic picture:

"Her majesty was laboring under a fit of the gout and in extream pain and agony, and on this occasion everything about her was much in the same disorder as about the meanest of her subjects. Her face, which was red and spotted, was rendered something frightful by her negligent dress, and the foot affected was tied up with a pultis and some nasty bandages.

"I was much affected at this sight, and the more when she had occasion to mention her people of Scotland, which she did frequently to the duke. What are you, poor, meanlike Mortal, thought I, who talks in the style of a Soveraign?

"Nature seems to be inverted when a poor, infirm Woman becomes one of the Rulers of the world, but as Tacitus observes it is not the first time that Women have governed in Britain, and indeed they have sometimes done this to better purpose than the Men."

Six Follies of Science.

The six follies of science are: (1) The squaring of the circle, (2) perpetual motion, (3) the philosopher's stone, (4) the elixir of life, (5) magic and (6) astrology.

In all ages men of undoubted ability have toiled early and late to unravel the mysteries supposed to be connected with these fascinating problems. It is not always remembered that such intellectual giants as Bacon, Sir Robert Boyle and Sir Isaac Newton sought the philosopher's stone, which, strange to say, receives some countenance from the modern theory of allotropy. In the study of astrology Lilly was for a time even pensioned by parliament.

Most of these "follies" conferred indirect benefits upon science, for in seeking one thing their devotees discovered many another. The craze for the secret or unknown, has still its hold upon men and is seen in palmistry and kindred cults.—London Standard.

A Joke O'Rell Didn't Appreciate.

Max O'Rell was booked to lecture in Hartman's hall in Grand Rapids a number of years ago. Carroll Hartman was having a serious time in inducing the people of the valley city to see the merits of lecturers.

There was a big sale for the O'Rell lecture and Hartman wandered over to the Morton House. In the afternoon to call on the French wit; also to pay him his fee of $100.

"But I have not delivered the lecture yet. Suppose I should die before tonight," said O'Rell, who could not understand why a manager should pay for something not yet delivered.

"Oh, that's all right. I'd exhibit your corpse," replied Hartman. The witty Frenchman never recovered from the shock of Hartman's remark. At any rate, he refused to lecture in Grand Rapids again.—Detroit Free Press.

The Simple Coast Folk.

The Newfoundland coast folk are "wreckers" as well as fishermen—not wreckers in the criminal sense, but expert workmen in stripping and unloading the hulls that are tossed up against the frowning cliffs. Every fisherman can turn his hand to this labor, which frequently pays better than his regular vocation, and salvage schooners find permanent employment there with divers and hoists, recovering from the oozy depths the treasures of the submarine curiosity shop.

The Newfoundlander of the southern shore counts on "a few wrecks" every year to help him maintain his family.—McClure's.

What's in a Name.

Canvasser—Are you single?

Man at the Door—Yes.

"Why, the folks next door told me you were married."

"So I am."

"Yet you told me just now you were single."

"Yes; so I did."

"Well, what is the matter with you?"

"Nothing, sir. My name is Single, and I'm married. Good day, sir."

The Value of Solitude.

Solitude, the safeguard of mediocrity, is to genius the stern friend, the old, obscure shelter, where molt the wings which will bear it farther than sun and stars. He who would inspire and lead his race must be defended from traveling with the souls of other men, from living, breathing, reading and writing in the daily time worn yoke of their opinion.—Emerson.

Better Than Art.

"Yes," said D'Auber, the artist, patronizingly. "I'm selling my canvases now at my own prices."

"You don't say?" replied Sharpley, whose works had not yet caught on.

"Yes, indeed. I suppose you'd give a good deal to be a great artist."

"No, indeed. I'd rather be you."—Exchange.

Quite a Different Thing.

Naggsby—Would you regard it as immodesty in a man to speak of his own good looks?

Waggsby—Well, it depends. If it were you I should call it plain lying.—Exchange.

Painfully Matter of Fact.

"If a fairy should appear to you and offer you three wishes," said the imaginative young women, "what would you do?"

"I'd sign the pledge," answered the matter of fact man.—Washington Star.

STARTLING EVIDENCE.

Fresh testimoney in great quantity is constantly coming in, declaring Dr, King's New Discovery for Consumption Coughs and Colds to be unequled. A recent expression from T. J. McFarland Bentorville, Va. serves as example. He writes: "I had Bronchitis for three years and doctored all the time without being benefited. Then I began takeing Dr King's New Discovery and a few bottels whooly cured me. "Eqully effective in curing all Lung and Throat troubles, Consumption, Pneumonia and Grip. Gurenteed by Kronschnabel & Bolstad. Trial bottles free, regular size 50c and $1.00.

Survival of a Custom.

On gateposts you will frequently find a stone ball. Who would ever suppose that the balls on the gateposts were the heads of family enemies? It was once the custom to stick your enemy's gory head as a trophy on the gatepost. On the gates of towns were stuck the heads of traitorous persons. In old London, for instance, the bridge gate and Temple Bar were always decorated with ghastly relics of the kind, and the memory of the custom survives on the gateposts of modern suburban villas.

The Cost of Neglect.

"I need a vacation badly, but I can't take it now," said Dr. Price-Price. "Many of my patients are in such condition that I can't afford to leave them. They need constant nursing."

"Ah, yes," replied the man who knew. "I guess there are certain patients who, if you quit them, get well the first thing you know."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Reasoning Power in Animals.

Animal intelligence, though not necessarily higher in degree when they are acting as our servants and not for their own ends, is then very much more easily approached and understood by us. The "point" is a curious example of an action in which instinct and reason meet. The stopping of the dog, however it began, has by training and heredity become instinctive. The dog, even when quite a puppy, stops when it smells the game and remains almost paralyzed, its impulse to rush in and seize it being checked by a strong instinct to stand still. Yet the dog, after he had accompanied his master and had game shot over him, is quite aware that he is a half controlled "medium," and while still under the dominating "pointing" instinct will look round imploringly to his master to urge him to hurry up if the scent tells him that the birds are moving. A border line action of a different kind is the squatting of young birds. It is a perfectly reasonable precaution. Keeping still and lying low are not characteristics peculiar only to Br'er Rabbit, but it is most remarkable to see the way in which tiny peewits or little teal, hardly bigger than a fluffy bee, lie down, put their little chins flat on the ground and remain motionless for minutes to avoid being seen.

An Effective Telegram.

When Senator Depew was president of the New York Central Railroad company he received a telegram which he preserved for a number of years and now and then showed to his friends, says a reminiscent writer for the Washington Star. This telegram reached him one fine morning a short time before Senator Platt was elected to the United States senate for the second time. It was sent from one of the stations of the New York Central and read:

Please stop the noon express here to take on Mrs. Platt and ME TOO.

It was a very unusual thing for that train to stop at that particular station, but Mr. Depew at once gave an order to have it done.

This telegram was referred to in the presence of Senator Platt on one occasion.

"You see," said the senator, "I wanted that train to stop without the least question of doubt. I knew that the way to reach Depew's heart was with a joke, and so I sent that telegram."

A Persistent Office Seeker.

Governor Stanley of Kansas was once so pestered by office seekers, relates the Saturday Evening Post, that he found it necessary publicly to make the statement that in view of the exceedingly numerous applications for office he had received through the mails he should be unable to give any attention to them, much less afford any hope of success to the various applicants.

In the course of a few days after making the statement in question the governor received the following note:

"My Dear Governor—I understand that you have said that you were going to take a week off to destroy the pile of letters asking for jobs. If everything else is gone, then, my dear governor, I should like the job of tearing up the letters."

Gunpowder and Artillery.

There is abundant evidence that the origin of gunpowder and artillery goes far back in the dim ages of the past. The Hindoo code, compiled long before the Christian era, prohibited the making of war with cannon and guns or any kind of firearms. Quintus Curtius informs us that Alexander the Great met with fire weapons in Asia and Philostratus says that Alexander's conquests were arrested by the use of gunpowder. It is also written that those wise men who lived in the cities of the Ganges "overthrew their enemies with tempests and thunderbolts shot from the walls."—Cassell's Magazine.

The Mexican Carrier.

The cargador, or carrier, of Mexico is a remarkable individual. Nothing seems too bulky, nothing too heavy for him to carry, and it is quite wonderful how he manages not only to lift but to balance his cumbersome load. It is nothing for a man to carry a load weighing 400 pounds, this being borne either on the top of the head or on the shoulders and kept in place by a flat band passing across the forehead.

Colonies of the World.

The colonies, so called, of the world occupy two-fifths of the land surface of the globe and contain one-third of the world's population, or about 500,000,000 people. Of this colonial population of 500,000,000 only three small groups, numbering less than 15,000,000 population, or 3 per cent of the whole, are composed in any considerable degree of the people of the governing country or their descendants.

An Upstart.

Johnny—An upstart.

Teacher—Give me a sentence in which the word is used.

Bleeding.

When I was young it was the fashion to bleed folks for different complaints, but they say now that it was a big mistake; the doctors still bleed, but they lance the pocket instead o' the veins.—"The Substitute."

Where the Worry Comes.

"Are you not worried by your wife's absence?"

"No; it's her return that always worries me."—Smart Set.

He Looked It.

A ridiculous but amusing story used to be told of Charles Reade's dramatization of Tennyson's poem, "Dora." We do not, however, vouch for the truth of the anecdote. "Dora" was being performed one night years ago, and when Mary Morrison made her exit to bring on her little Willie, aged about four, she was shocked to find a lubberly boy of at least fourteen, and, as he was the only Willie at hand, on he had to go, though he was well nigh as big as his mother. The Former Allen of the play, being equal to the emergency, instead of inquiring "How old are you, my little man?" endeavored to remedy the matter by saying "How old are you, my strapping boy?" But it was a failure, for the boy, who was instructed to say from "four to five," said it in such a hoarse, sepulchral tone as to drive the good natured grandfather to exclaim, "Forty-five! You look it, my boy; you look it."—Golden Penny.

Cheerfulness.

Cheerfulness is a duty one owes to oneself as well as to one's neighbors, for nothing so unfits one for the ordinary duties of life or so quickly brings on premature old age as a morose temper, says the Brooklyn Eagle. There are plenty of artificial aids to cheerfulness within the reach of every one who has real or imaginary cause for ill humor or a congenital tendency to surliness. When things don't go right or your liver is guilty of neglect of duty strive systematically to achieve good humor by repeating over and over the best funny stories or bits of humorous poetry you know. If conscientiously administered this prescription is an infallible remedy for the most acute fit of blue devils. If you doubt it just try the [illegible].

Not only was he in social intercourse one of the most courteous and sweetest of friends, but he was in manner one of the most fascinating and impressive beings whom I ever met. I have talked with Carlyle and Tennyson, with Victor Hugo and Mazzini, with Garibaldi and Gambetta; with John Bright and Robert Browning, but no one of these ever impressed me more vividly with a sense of intense personality, with the inexplicable light of genius that seemed to well up spontaneously from heart and brain. It remains a psychological puzzle how one who could write with passion and scorn such as Carlyle and Byron never reached, who in print was so often Athenasius contra mundum, who opened every written assertion with "I know," was in private life one of the gentlest, gayest, humblest of men.

How a Rat Stole Bulbs.

M. de Parville, a well known French naturalist, told a remarkable story about a rat in the Journal des Debats. A gardener planted one afternoon 250 tulip bulbs on a terrace, and next morning he noticed that the ground had been disturbed and that they had all been taken away. He was confident that rats had done the work, and, taking a spade, he began to dig in the hope of discovering their nest. Soon he unearthed a large female rat, which he killed, and after digging a few more minutes he discovered an underground chamber lined with hay and leaves and connected by a corridor with two holes, which were evidently used as storehouses, for in them he found the 250 tulip bulbs. This was remarkable, but more remarkable was the fact that they were neatly arranged in two rows and that not one of them had been gnawed or otherwise injured.

The Tale of a Tail.

A writer in tracing the ancestry of the dog to wolf and jackal notices typical differences in the case of their eyes, their body colors and markings, the habit of turning around before lying down and other interesting peculiarities, but he does not mention the most striking and infallible way of distinguishing them—namely, by the fashion in which they carry their tails.

Wolves and coyotes have a sneaking way of carrying their tails low, almost dragging on the ground, while dogs carry their tails up, and the farther removed they are from the feral type the higher they carry them. Shepherds and collies, which retain many of their racial characteristics, carry their tails lowest of all; setters and pointers a degree or two higher, stiffening out straight when drawing on game; terriers and hounds elevate their tails to the spinal line; St. Bernards and Newfoundlands affect a curve over the back; while pugs actually come to a full twist. An old plainsman could tell a wolf or coyote as far as he could see him, and in buffalo days this was a most useful indication of buffalo herds being not far away. These predatory creatures always followed a moving herd.—Forest and Stream.

The Fire God's Wrath.

A curious story comes to us from the suburbs. A resident in the near neighborhood of London has a museum in his house in which the principal curiosity is a fire god which has been worshiped for many centuries in an Indian temple. Once when the owner of the house took a party of people to look at the museum he proposed in fun that they should all kotow to the image. This they all laughingly consented to do, all except two ladies, who declared it was wicked. The fire god was revenged within two months. One of the ladies had her house burned to the ground the week after, and the other one on a later date fell backward into the fire and sustained some terrible burns. We give the tale without comment.—London Chronicle.

A Cure for Dropsy.

Sedgwick, Ark., June 22d.—Mr. W. S. Taylor of this place says:

"My little boy had Dropsy. Two doctors—the best in this part of the country—told me he would never get better, and to have seen him anyone else would have said they were right. His feet and limbs were swollen so that he could not walk nor put on his shoes.

"When the doctors told me he would surely die, I stopped giving him their medicine and began giving him Dodd's Kidney Pills. I gave him three pills a day and at the end of eight days the swelling was all gone, but as I wanted to be sure, I kept on with the pills for some time, gradually reducing the quantity, till finally I stopped altogether.

"Dodd's Kidney Pills certainly saved my child's life. Before using them he was a helpless invalid in his mother's arms from morning till night. Now he is a healthy, happy child, running and dancing and singing. I can never express our gratitude.

"Dodd's Kidney Pills entirely cured our boy after everybody, doctors and all, had given him up to die."

IN EVERY WALK OF LIFE.

People in every walk of life have bad backs — Kidneys go wrong and the back begins to ache. Cure sick kidneys and backache quickly disappears. Read this testimony and learn how it can be done.

A. A. Boyce, a farmer living three and a half miles from Trenton, Mo., says: "A severe cold settled in my kidneys and developed so quickly that I was obliged to lay off work on account of the aching in my back and sides. For a time I was unable to walk at all, and every makeshift I tried and all the medicine I took had not the slightest effect. My back continued to grow weaker until I was unfit for anything. Mrs. Boyce noticed Doan's Kidney Pills advertised as a sure-cure for just such conditions and one day when in Trenton she brought a box home from Chas. A. Foster's drug store. I followed the directions carefully when taking them and I must say I was more than surprised and much more gratified to notice the backache disappearing gradually until it finally stopped."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mr. Boyce will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists, price 50 cents per box.

BLOOD HUMOURS

Skin Humours, Scalp Humours, Hair Humours,

Whether Simple Scrofulous or Hereditary

Complete External and Internal Treatment, One Dollar.

In the treatment of torturing, disfiguring, itching, scaly, crusted, pimply, blotchy and scrofulous humours of the skin, scalp and blood, with loss of hair, Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills have been wonderfully successful. Even the most obstinate of constitutional humours, such as bad blood, scrofula, inherited and contagious humours, with loss of hair, glandular swellings, ulcerous patches in the throat and mouth, sore eyes, copper-coloured blotches, as well as boils, carbuncles, scurvy, sties, ulcers and sores arising from an impure or impoverished condition of the blood, yield to the Cuticura Treatment, when all other remedies fail.

And greater still, if possible, is the wonderful record of cures of torturing, disfiguring humours among infants and children. The suffering which Cuticura Remedies have alleviated among the young, and the comfort they have afforded worn-out and worried parents, have led to their adoption in countless homes as priceless curatives for the skin and blood. Infantile and birth humours, milk crust, scalled head, eczema, rashes and every form of itching, scaly, pimply skin and scalp humours, with loss of hair, of infancy and childhood, are speedily, permanently and economically cured when all other remedies suitable for children, and even the best physicians, fail.

A Unique Celebration

By F. H. LANCASTER.

AS LANCE crossed the lawn he was hailed by a chorus of anxious voices: "Come help us, Lance. Please come."

He shrugged his rather heavy shoulders, and came slowly toward the group under the cedars. "What's up?" he asked, lazily throwing himself upon a seat a little apart from the rest, and leaning forward to bend the grass down with his stiff-brimmed straw hat. He did not look at anyone as he put the question, but the young Creole replied: "It's Cedoni."

"I have nothing to do with it," corrected Cedoni, whose vivacity and fun had vanished when Lance approached.

"Ah, but you said it must be something different this year."

"Oh, it's your Fourth of July celebration, is it? The same old cry. You are tired of barbecues and regattas and fish fries and sunstrokes. You expect me to help you with such a conundrum?" Lance spoke with good-natured impatience, but he did not look up. "Why not ignore the Fourth? Not have any celebration at all? That would be quite a novelty for this hot-bed of patriotism." His last words were drowned in a clamor of indignant protests.

"We are going to read the Declaration," insisted the Creole, who was the orator of the town, "but how, and where?"

Lance dropped his hat into the grass and stared at it. He was thinking of a curious dream he had had the night before, and spoke aloud absently: "By torchlight, upon the water." Such being the words he had seen in his dream upon the magical leaf at the fountain of Castalia. The party of young folks received them with joyous acclamation.

HE WAS THINKING OF A CURIOUS DREAM HE HAD HAD.

"Go on, Lance, you have made a grand beginning. Now, when?"

Lance lifted his head and looked at Cedoni: "At midnight, when the clock strikes 12."

"The oracle has spoken," cried the young Creole. "Why look so mystified, my friends? We will have a floundering party on the night of July the third. At midnight we collect around the torches—read the Declaration, make speeches, sing songs—in short, celebrate the glorious Fourth. There will be no smell of burning meat, no din of cannon, no sunstroke. Only dewy coolness of early morn, dancing lights on gleaming waters, poetry, music—"

"Yes," interrupted a practical member, "and after we are through with all that, we can take our flounders on shore and have a fish fry."

"Yes, indeed! And then we could dance on the beach to the music of a fife."

"In our wet clothes. That would be a floundering party, sure enough."

"Nonsense! We would have tents."

"Oh, oh! We might as well have lemonade and peanuts."

"No! We'll use the bath houses—"

"But where will the flag come in?"

"Let's print the invitations on flags."

"We could have little flags fastened to our spear staffs."

"Oh, there'll be flags to burn."

And by dint of interjection, exclamation and explanation, the crude idea was developed, and invitations resolved upon to a unique celebration of the Glorious Fourth; one that was to be patriotic in the extreme, and yet avoid heat and sunstroke, dazzle and dust.

Through it all Lance sat staring at his hat in the grass, and thinking in his sober, sturdy way. Of course, it was only because he had been reading "Ben Hur" that he dreamt of the priest and the fountain and the magical leaf. But the answer to his question: "How and where would happiness come to him?" had been: "By torchlight, on the water." Why should those words, of all others, have appeared upon the dripping leaf? He grew nervous when Cedoni was urged to join the party, and when she consented he got up and walked away, feeling weak and unnerved through the whole of his big, brawny frame.

"I'll do it," he muttered, "if I live until the Fourth. At any rate," he added, after a pause, "I'll be done with this sickening uncertainty." By which it may be inferred that Lance was not in a very hopeful mood.

He was in a still less hopeful mood when he joined the flounderers upon the momentous night. Cedoni was flirting with the orator, who carried her basket, and threatened to grow sentimental. It was a large party, and a gay one; the long line of torches, the flashing waters and laughing voices, shouts of triumph, ejaculations of dismay. Over all the eternal stars brooding peacefully above the trivial toils of man.

CEDONI FELT A STRONG HAND UPON HER ARM.

Lance splashed along with dogged determination, spearing flounders, and saying nothing. He would say something presently—while the speeches were being made. After they went ashore the oracle would be void. He saw no hope of a word with Cedoni until the orator should be called to attend his public duties. Even then she would probably be invited inside the circle of light. But he would see that she did not go. Like all quiet men, when a deed was once determined upon, Lance expected to carry it through. He had not an idea what he would say—only that Cedoni should stay and listen. So it happened that when the grand stand—a bay of shallow water—was reached, and the torch bearers began to circle around the speakers, Cedoni felt a strong hand upon her arm.

"You wish something?" Her tone was distant, as it had been ever since he reproached her for that bit of idle gossip.

"I wanted to speak to you," Lance replied, quietly.

"Well?"

"After the speeches begin."

"You must excuse me. I am to sing the opening song."

"I can't excuse you."

"You must!" But he held her arm firmly and silently, while the circle closed and the song began.

"Do you consider this courteous?" she asked, indignantly.

"I wanted to speak to you," he repeated, quietly.

"Well, speak for—" The notes of "America" swelled out and drowned her words. Hundreds of voices singing under the stars, and the music floated far away over the silent water. It was soul-inspiring, yes, was more than that. Lance leaned over Cedoni.

"I love you, dear." His strong voice was a little husky. Did she hear? She stood by him until the orator's tones rang out, and then she moved.

AND SO THEY CELEBRATED THE FOURTH.

"Wait," he said. "Did you hear?"

"Yes," she answered, steadily.

When the second speaker came forward, Lance spoke again, quietly. He was not pleading, only stating a fact.

"This suspense is killing me."

Cedoni's spear fell into the water with a splash. She caught the big, unsteady hand in both her own, and kissed it.

Far away was cheering, and torchlight and song, but here upon a log half-sunk in the sand sat two lovers talking of—well, a dream, a fountain and a leaf. And so they celebrated the Fourth. Was the manner unique?—Minneapolis Housekeeper.

JULY 4, 1776.

The Dramatic Moment When the Declaration of Independence Was Signed.

In the Woman's Home Companion Mr. Landon Knight gives a graphic description of the dramatic moment when the Declaration of Independence was signed. He says: "The fourth day of July, 1776, arrives, and every member is in his seat. No, Caesar Rodney, of Delaware, does not answer the roll-call as his name is called. A week before he had gone home to get influence to bear on one of his colleagues who opposed the resolution. The night before Thomas Jefferson and Dr. Franklin had sent post-haste for Rodney to come, if he wished to save the resolution, for his vote would decide it. And now, as the friends of the measure looked upon his empty seat, there is uneasiness, almost consternation. The debate begins, and waxes warmer as the day grows; the noon recess is forgotten; the calm, telling logic of John Adams, the quaint, clear sentences of Dr. Franklin, the impassioned oratory of Henry, are still falling upon attentive ears. Never was such a scene witnessed as that now being enacted here. There is no confusion, no excitement, but the gravity of the occasion rests heavily upon all. Now the hour has arrived. The roll-call has begun. Delaware is reached. 'Ceasar Rodney, of Delaware!' calls the clerk. There is a clatter of hoofs, a clanging of spurs; the door is thrown open; a man travel-stained and flushed with excitement rushes into the chamber. 'Caesar Rodney, of Delaware!' again calls the clerk, and in ringing tones the reply comes: 'Caesar Rodney votes aye!' The roll-call continues; is finished. The Declaration of Independence is adopted, and the United States of America is born as a nation upon the earth!"

Before the Fourth.

Little Willie has ten fingers
On his hands to-day.
Ah, what apprehension lingers
When we should be gay.

For a question grim, uncanny,
Fills the soul with sorrow;
Can he hold up just as many
When we're through the morrow?

First Declaration of Independence.

Not every student of American history is aware that the Declaration of Independence signed at Philadelphia on July 4, 1776, glorious old document that it is, cannot claim to be the first expression by American people of revolt against British rule. The first Declaration of Independence was put forth more than a year before the immortal second, and its birthplace was the little town of Charlotte, Mecklenburg county, N. C. The two Carolinas were settled largely by strenuous folk—refugees from religious persecution in Scotland and France, followers of Knox and Calvin. Covenanter and Huguenot brought with them over sea the sturdy independence and the fearless adherence to principle which had led them to dispute the divine right of kings and uphold to the death the divine right of conscience. — Rheta Childe Door, in Woman's Home Companion.

Up Against the Fourth.

"No, I do not need any skin plaster," said Johnny's mother to the agent at the door, who was trying to sell her some.

"Say, is it any good if you blow your thumbs off?" asked Johnny, in a hoarse whisper.

"You bet it is, my little man," warbled the agent. "It'll make new ones grow on again in a jiffy."

"Then, ma," urged Johnny, "you'd better get some, 'cause I'm a-goin' to bump up against the Fourth of July awful hard this year."—Chicago Record-Herald.

His Thoughtful Wife.

"Did the Fourth pass off satisfactorily with you?"

"Oh, very."

"With so large a family of boys, I didn't know but you might—"

"Of course, of course. There was chance for serious trouble, but we learn by experience, and my wife is very thoughtful and far-seeing. She invited our family physician to dine with us, so all the burns were promptly dressed."—Chicago Evening Post.

A PROMINENT COLLEGE MAN.

One of Indiana's Useful Educators Says: "I Feel Like a New Man."

MR. JOHN W. MENG.

Mr. John W. Meng, 54 Jefferson Ave., Indianapolis, Ind., State Representative of Indianapolis Business College, writes:

"I firmly believe that I owe my fine health to Peruna. Constant travel and change of food and water wrought havoc with my stomach, and for months I suffered with indigestion and catarrh of the stomach. I felt that the only thing to do was to give up my occupation which I felt very reluctant to do. Seeing an ad. of Peruna as a specific for catarrh I decided to give it a trial, and used it faithfully for six weeks, when I found that my troubles had all disappeared and I seemed like a new man. I have a bottle of Peruna in my grip all the time, and occasionally take a few doses which keeps me in excellent health."—John W. Meng.

THE most common phases of summer catarrh are catarrh of the stomach and bowels. Peruna is a specific for summer catarrh.

Hon. Willis Brewer, Representative in Congress from Alabama, writes the following letter to Dr. Hartman:

Gentlemen—"I have used one bottle of Peruna for lassitude, and I take pleasure in recommending it to those who need a good remedy. As a tonic it is excellent. In the short time I have used it it has done me a great deal of good."—Willis Brewer.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

GERMS OF DISEASES.

They Are Now Being Harnessed by Medical Investigators.

How Bacilli Are Isolated, Tested and Propagated—Important Part Played by Horses and Guinea Pigs.

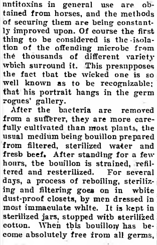
[Special New York Letter.]

THIS is essentially the age of antitoxins, extreme cases of the "hair of the dog" curing the bite. New discoveries are constantly being made, both of the specific germs causing certain diseases and methods of utilizing them for their own destruction. It is well known that if a person were shut up in a room for an extended length of time where no fresh air was allowed to enter death would ensue because the air in the room, breathed over and over, would become charged with poisons given out by the body, and there would soon be no fresh air to feed upon. In the case of a disease germ much the same condition prevails. It must have fresh material to feed upon, as the juices it throws off are a certain poison to itself. Hence, if to the blood of a person containing germs of a disease, a sufficient quantity of the effete material furnished by the germ itself be added, the small pest dies because it has no fresh food, free from its own specific poison, upon which to feed. In the case of many of our most common and virulent diseases the bacillus has been isolated and for their treatment an antitoxin has been secured.

TESTING ANTI-TOXIN HORSE.

Nearly everyone is aware that the antitoxins in general use are obtained from horses, and the methods of securing them are being constantly improved upon. Of course the first thing to be considered is the isolation of the offending microbe from the thousands of different variety which surround it. This presupposes the fact that the wicked one is so well known as to be recognizable; that his portrait hangs in the germ rogues' gallery.

After the bacteria are removed from a sufferer, they are more carefully cultivated than most plants, the usual medium being bouillon prepared from filtered, sterilized water and fresh beef. After standing for a few hours, the bouillon is strained, refiltered and resterilized. For several days, a process of reboiling, sterilizing and filtering goes on in white dust-proof closets, by men dressed in most immaculate white. It is kept in sterilized jars, stopped with sterilized cotton. When this bouillon has become absolutely free from all germs, it is inoculated by having the bacilli dropped in from the point of a needle of glass and platinum. The germs multiply as rapidly as in a human body, for the bouillon is kept in a warm incubator for about 72 hours, when it may be seen to be covered with a ghastly-looking, greenish crust, a toxin which is a hideous mass of the disease to be treated, consumption, diphtheria or whatever has been cultivated. It is then injected into guinea pigs which die and are opened and examined. If it is found that the toxin was pure, it is injected into an antitoxin horse. Before one of these horses is utilized for this purpose, he is tested to ascertain if he be free from all disease, by receiving an injection of mallein, a fluid which will arouse into activity any disease which may happen to lurk in his system. If he be healthy, the mallein will not affect him. Being proven healthy, the first injection of toxin, about one-half a thimbleful, or one cubic centimeter, is introduced into his blood from a syringe of glass and silver by a thoroughly sterilized, disinfected, white-clad, clean-shaven physician, in a white enameled stable. For three days, the horse is very ill, eating nothing. His bones are sore. He swells, then slowly recovers. In ten days, he is quite well again, when another injection is given, this time of three cubic centimeters. He becomes ill, but less so than in the first instance. Ten days later, 20 cubic centimeters are administered. The effect of this is hardly perceptible. By the end of two months, more than one pint or 500 cubic centimetors are given without producing any ill-effects. This dose would kill a large number of ordinary horses, but our friend has become immune, that is, his system is able to resist any number of live germs introduced, because it contains so much of their own poison, that they have nothing to feed upon and die from an overdose of themselves.



INOCULATING GUINEA PIG.

Now that this antitoxin quality has developed in the animal, each month eight quarts of blood are drawn from him, while every ten days he still receives an injection of 500 centimeters of toxin. Thus his antitoxic power is kept up. He suffers no inconvenience. His health is good, he exercises moderately and eats his sterilized grain with relish. If he goes to pasture for a month or two, his antitoxic power is impaired and he has to begin all over again with his first dose of one cubic centimeter of toxin which renders him ill as at first. After being drawn from the horse, the blood is sealed up and stands for several days, when the serum, or thin portion, is extracted by means of a force pump. This serum is used on guinea pigs and its strength thus ascertained. It is now filtered and purified, sealed in small vials and passes into the hand of physicians in general practice, who introduce it into the circulation of such patients as are suffering from the special disease from whose germ it was prepared. Their systems are thus reenforced by a poison to the germs whose demise rids them of the disease which was preying upon their tissues.

While some antitoxins have been obtained with comparative ease, experiments with typhoid germs have proven very unsatisfactory. In 1884 Koch discovered the bacilli of typhoid. They are rod-like and thick with the ends rounded, and sometimes joined in filaments. They possess little hair-like projections called flagella and move very rapidly. They are found in water, milk and meats and gain entrance into the system by various methods. Many experiments have been made to secure an antitoxin from bouillon, but to no great purpose. It has been nearly impossible to obtain the "juice between the cells" of typhoid bacteria without destroying the chemical action of germs themselves. No really satisfactory results had been obtained until, recently, Dr. Allan McFayden, of the Jenner institute of preventive medicine, one of the leading bacteriologists of Europe, after much research, has discovered a method of manufacturing antitoxin for typhoid which, it is generally believed, will soon be universally adopted. The microscopical cells of the typhoid bacilli are so small and pliable or elastic that no mechanical agent could destroy them. Freezing does not injure them.

FREEZING GERMS IN LIQUID AIR.

It occurred to Dr. McFayden to freeze the cells by means of liquid air until very brittle, then to crush thousands of them together in a mortar. This first and most difficult step has proved a great success. The mass now dead, so far as its power of communicating disease is concerned, is allowed to become warm again, and is still chemically alive as to its qualities from which antitoxin may be prepared. Repeated injections into animals have produced a serum, which, it is believed, will prove efficacious. It is too soon after its discovery for a large number of experiments to have demonstrated its successful use, but results so far obtained are very promising.

ROUND ABOUT THE STATE.

Mary C. Anderson was appointed postmistress at Thorpe, Kandiyohi county, vice C. Johnson removed.

Wearied of a life of dissipation Mrs. Peter Ducharm at Blackduck ended her earthly career by taking carbolic acid.

Miss Ida Hawker, of Mapleton, 17 years of age, was burned by an explosion from an incubator lamp and cannot live.

The St. Paul Railway Supply Manufacturing company filed application with the clerk of the district court for its dissolution.

Bert Atkinson, who was killed during the circus parade at Morris, was buried at the expense of the Campbell Bros. show.

Solemn and impressive services were held at St. Francis Catholic church, Brainerd, on Sunday, when a class of 130 children received first communion.

Harold B. Johnson was arrested at Lakeville, Minn., by Detectives Bohan and Galagher, charged with stealing 5,000 2-cent stamps from the International Stock Food company.

The body of William Weber, thirteen years old, who was drowned in the Mississippi river at Minneapolis a week ago, was found among the logs in the St. Paul boom.

The state game and fish commission prosecuted two men at Round lake on a charge of fishing illegally. They were fined $20 and costs, and in default of the fine were sent to the St. Cloud workhouse for fifteen days.

The Washburn trophy will be shot for again by the Northwestern Rifle association. Recently Adjt. Gen. Libbey of Minnesota issued a challenge to the other states to shoot again for the trophy and it has been accepted.

Gen. James H. Baker, chairman of a committee of the state historical society, has written the following letter to Channing Seabury, vice president of the state capitol commission, outlining the suggestion of the historical society to commemorate the treaty at Travers des Sioux in 1851 with a mural painting in the new state capitol.

Judge Lochren of the United State circuit court issued a temporary injunction restraining the Longshoremen's union of Duluth from threatening or in any way interfering with the non-union men in loading and unloading freight at the Northern Pacific docks.

Four representatives of a nursery have just finished canvassing Stevens county and they have taken orders to the amount of $3,000. People are just becoming aware of the fact that they can raise all kinds of fruits here.

The crew of the tug Excelsior here had a perilously close call for their lives at Duluth. Captain Frank Byers, who was in the pilot house saved himself by jumping overboard. The tug collided heavily with the dock, which caused a huge pile of lumber to slide out over the boat, the upper works of which were crushed.

Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Bristow has issued an order which is of local interest to merchants and others in the twin cities, that hereafter the rural free delivery bulletins which have heretofore been sent to those requesting them will be discontinued until further orders of the postoffice department.

Julius T. Frelin of Gaylord, who went with the first assignment of teachers to the Philippine islands in July, 1901, returned to his home after serving his full two years in the islands.

Insurance Commissioner E. D. Dearth, in his annual report, states that "wild cat" fire insurance companies have operated far less extensively in Minnesota in the last year than formerly.

The vacancy in the faculty of the Winona normal school caused by giving Professor J. S. Gaylord a year's leave of absence for study abroad, has been filled by the election of Professor J. F. Messenger, Ph. D., of Brooklyn as instructor in psychology and ethics.

Six pounds of dynamite were placed on the porch of the home of Father Pfeiffer, a priest at Pierz. The fuse died out before reaching the explosive. The explosion would, no doubt, have wrecked the house and killed the priest and four other inmates.

Stevens county is to have a teachers' summer training school under the direction of Miss Mary B. Flynn, county superintendent, Sauk Center. Superintendent George A. Stanton will be conductor and Miss Blanche Christie of Alexander, Mrs. Hannah G. McGee of St. Paul and Superintendent R. S. Kemple of Wheaton will assist in the work.

Dr. A. A. Forbes of Duluth, of Forbes Brothers, mining operators here, has brought suit against his brother, Robert Forbes, to recover $60,000 which he declares the latter has defrauded him of.

The agricultural students are up in arms in defense of their favorite professor, Principal F. D. Tucker, and of Prof. E. W. Mahood, both of whose resignations have been requested by the board of regents.

Negro lynching and burning is no longer news, and the publication of them incourages the black devils to commit crime to become famous.

We notice that some exchanges have commenced to nominate Minnesotas next Governor, which reminds us of a school boy that delights in picking a a row, but is not much gooo, after the fight starts.

The turning of the headwaters of Clearwater river into the Missippi would be of great bennefit to the low lands of Greenwood and Johnson Townships, as it would make the land that is now to low for farming puposes the best in this part of the country.

The business rush of the present age, would cause us to conclude that man becomes an ordinar machine the same as a hinder that does a certain amount of work before being laid up for repair. If you go into a business place to meet an aquaintence, during busines hours you are met with a cold stare and the question of, what can we do for you?, If you buy a small article the next inquiry is what else?, and if you answer that is all your friend goes to the next man and asks him the same questions that he has just been asking you, and so runs hours, weeks, month, and years, until the machine breaks down and has to be laid up for repairs, or replaced with a new one.

That Had Never Occurred to Him.

When Lafayette visited Loudoun county he was entertained with the other eminent guests by President Monroe at Oak Hill. Leesburg, too, the historic town nine miles from Monroe's country seat, accorded him honors on that occasion, and at a dinner at that town John Quincy Adams delivered a famous toast to the surviving patriots of the Revolution, who, he said, were like the sibylline leaves—the fewer they became the more precious they were.

On the return to Oak Hill another of Monroe's guests said to Mr. Adams:

"Excuse the impertinence, but would you not tell me what inspired the beautiful sentiment of your toast today?"

"Why," replied Mr. Adams, "it was suggested this morning by the picture of the sibyl that hangs in the hall of the Oak Hill mansion."

"How strange," remarked the less brilliant guest, "I have looked at that picture many times during the past years and that thought never occurred to me."—Leslie's Monthly.

Chewing Dry Rice.

"A strange way of testing the innocence of an accused person is employed in India," said a Philadelphia merchant who lately returned from Madras. "They haul the man up and give him a mouthful of dry rice to chew. I don't suppose you ever chewed dry rice? Well, it is hard work. It takes a deal of chewing to get it masticated into a glutinous mass like gum, and that is the condition that the accused is required to get it into within ten minutes. If you are calm and not afraid you succeed, but if you are nervous and scared you fail, for it seems that fear has a strong effect upon the salivary glands. It prevents them from secreting saliva. The mouth of a badly frightened person is always dry as a bone. It requires a tremendous flow of saliva to chew dry rice, and therefore the scared prisoner inevitably fails in this test. It isn't of course a test employed in the courts of the big towns. It belongs to the interior, less enlightened villages."

Reptiles That Walk Erect.

Lizards of several sorts can walk and run easily on their hind legs. The Australian water lizard, which is three or four feet in length, keeps quite erect when traversing long distances inland. It is found in the neighborhood of river banks, and passes much of its time in shallow water.

The frilled lizard of Queensland also travels on its hind legs on level ground, keeping the frill folded when running. When attacked it expands this fold of skin, which stands out like a ruff at right angles round the neck, giving it a most formidable aspect, so that dogs that attack and kill larger lizards will often retreat before a frilled lizard at bay.

There is also a tree lizard in Australia that moves in a similar way. All these species walk on all fours when merely moving about or going short distances.

Woman's Cruelty to Woman.

Another illustration of how mean a woman can be was given the other night when a young lady was calling on an elderly spinster who dresses and acts with unbecoming youthfulness. The spinster showed her visitor a beautiful handmade lace collar and said proudly: "This is over fifty years old."

"It is beautiful!" purred the girl. "Did you make it, dear?"—New York Press.

A Common Color.

The elder Dumas once was wearing the ribbon of a certain order, having recently been made a commandent, and an envious friend remarked upon it. "My dear fellow," he said, "that cordon is a wretched color! One would think it was your woolen vest that was showing!"

"Oh, no, my dear d'E——," replied Dumas with a smile. "You're mistaken. It's not a bad color; it is exactly the shade of the sour grapes in the fable."

Wig Wearing Very Old.

The ancient Egyptians all wore wigs, and the early Christians from A. D. 427 to A. D. 917 considered a false head covering a badge of distinction. This, too, in direct opposition to Tertullian, who in vain declared them devices and inventions of the devil, and Clement of Alexandria, who warned his hearers that when the sacred hands of the clergy were laid on their heads the blessing would not penetrate through the false hair.

Limited Opportunity.

"Did you call at Roxley's house?" inquired the young doctor's wife.

"Yes, and I wish he had sent for me sooner."

"Gracious! Is he seriously ill?"

"Quite the reverse. I'm afraid he'll be all right again before I get in a half dozen visits."—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Blood as a River.

The blood is a very river of human life, its pulmonary and systematic circulations constituting an intricate network of canals, making the body a sort of corporeal Amsterdam or human Venice, writes George Dana Boardman in "Ethics of the Body." Each corpuscle is a barge, moving with varying rates of speed in different parts of the body, toiling through the capillaries at the rate of two inches a minute, rushing through the arteries at the rate of from twelve to twenty feet a second, ceaselessly carrying on the organic functions of the body by perpetually exchanging freight, depositing at the depot of this and that tissue oxygen and taking up dioxide of carbon. What money is to society that blood is to the body. It is the means of exchange or the circulating medium.

Being Restored to Caste.

A Fysabad Hindoo was restored to his caste by the following process of "purification." He lost caste eating cooked food in a railway carriage, in which persons of another caste were traveling. He had to pay his own weight first in rice, the value reaching 180 rupees, and then in wheat. After being twice weighed in this way he was made to sit on a square stone while his body was covered with manure, the face only excepted. He was then taken up by two men and thrown into the river, and after a bath was received by the Brahmans, fully restored to caste fellowship.

Might Have Made a Difference.

"I say," said Berkeley to his wife yesterday at dinner, "you didn't say anything to any one about what I was telling you the night before last, did you? That's a secret."

"A secret! Why, I didn't know it was a secret," she replied regretfully.

"Well, did you tell it? I want to know."

"Why, no; I never thought of it since. I didn't know it was a secret."

Character.

"The only thing that walks back from the tomb with the mourners and refuses to be buried is character." That is true. What a man is survives him. It never can be buried. It stays about the home when his footsteps are heard there no more. It lives in the community where he was known; hence we should take care to build into our character only beautiful things.

Right at Home.

"Now," said Mrs. Biggleson's cousin at breakfast on the morning after her arrival, "don't make company of me. I want to be treated just as if I were one of the family."

"All right," replied Mr. Biggleson, helping himself to the tenderest part of the steak, "we'll try to make you feel right at home."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Distance Lent Enchantment.

Some anecdotist tells a story of Washington Irving, who was fond of the theater and who on one occasion went into transports over the acting of a famous woman star, yet when an accommodating friend volunteered to introduce him he instantly replied: "Please don't. It would destroy the illusion."

Thought She Knew.

A STARTLING TEST.

To save a life, Dr. T. G. Merritt, of No. Mehoopany, Pa., made a startling test resulting in a wonderful cure. He writes "a patient was attacked with violent hemorrhages caused by ulceration of the stomach. I had often found Electric Bitters excellent for acute stomach and liver troubles so I prescribed them. The patient gained from the first and has not had an attact in 14 months." Electric Bitters are are positively guarenteed for Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Constipation and kidney troubles. Try them. Only 50c at Kronschnrbel & Bolstad.

A Bird That Is Feared.

The elster (Pica caudata) is a bird that is respected and feared throughout south Germany. It belongs to the raven tribe and is about the size of a dove, with black and white feathers and long, pointed tail. It builds its nest in orchards, and its life is sacred. If it is seen three times in succession on the same house top in a place remote from its home it is believed to be a sure sign of death in that house. If it flies over a house where any one is ill and gives its peculiar cry the sick person is sure to die, but if it does not scream the patient may recover. It is better for the sick person if the bird does not come near.

No one could be hired to bother these birds for fear they might seek revenge, and if by chance one of them should die it is a sign of bad luck to the owner of the property where it was found. The bird is a valuable insect destroyer and in this way probably more than compensates for the fear it occasions among the farmers.

To Induce Humility in a Peacock.

If you wish to take the conceit out of a peacock pull out his tail feathers, and as soon as he finds the glory of his plumage gone he becomes the humblest, most subdued and ashamed looking bird that ever walked the earth. A peacock in full feather is so vain and conceited as sometimes to be really troublesome. Not satisfied with squalling at the top of his discordant voice and with parading up and down the walks with expanded plumage, he will attack cats, dogs and even children and has been known to seriously injure small boys or girls that were incautious enough to venture within his reach.

Plucking his tail feathers, however, causes all his courage to evaporate. He will sneak around the yard like a whipped spaniel, will keep out of sight as much as possible, and you will hear nothing of him until his plumage has again grown.

Tortillas.

Tortillas, the Mexican substitute for wheat bread, are made from selected corn. The kernels are boiled soft in limewater and after being thoroughly washed are rubbed between the hands to remove the outer husk. They are then ground while wet to a soft mass with stones or a peanut butter mill, patted into thin cakes, baked on a dry griddle and eaten while still hot.

She Could Spell Too.

While waiting in the reception room for their hostess some visitors were entertained by that lady's four-year-old daughter. One of the callers remarked to the other:

"She is not very p-r-e-t-t-y."

"No," instantly replied the child; "I am not very p-r-e-t-t-y, but I am very s-m-a-r-t."—New York Times.

Cutting.

Very tart was Douglas Jerrold's retort to a would be wit, who, having fired off all his stale jokes with no effect, exclaimed:

"Why, you never laugh when I say a good thing!"

"Don't I?" said Jerrold. "Only try me with one!"

Not Too Much So.

Uncle Reuben says: "I like a conscientious man, but I like him as I like him. In other words, I don't want him so conscientious as to admit dat he quarrels wid his wife, cuffs his children or starves his dawg to carry out sartin principles."—Detroit Free Press.

An Irish Verdict.

"My lord," said the foreman of an Irish jury when giving in his verdict, "we find the man who stole the mare not guilty."

Woolgathering.

"For one's wits to go woolgathering" is an allusion to a pitiful industry sometimes seen in older countries. In parts of France, Germany and Spain very old people are sometimes employed in gathering wool from bushes in sheep pastures where it has been plucked from the fleece as the animals pass too close to the branches.

HINDOO SUPERSTITIONS.

Sneezing Is a Bad Omen and Keeps Men From Business.

A resident of Dharmapuri, writing on the subject of Hindoo superstitions, says that a married woman, a dancing girl, a mirror and an ass—the most neglected of the Indian domestic animals—are also among the first objects of good omen which a Hindoo should meet as soon as he wakes from his sleep. A Hindoo does not stir out of his house on any errand, not only during the Rahukalam—an hour and a half a day—but also some time before it. Some do not do any work during Gulikakalum as well—another one hour and a half a day. The correspondent does not mention that in more advanced countries some people make Rakukalam and Gulikakalum last a great deal longer. Besides these there are Natchathirams (stars), of which there are twenty-six, each of which occurs every day. A particular Natchathiram on a particular day is either good or bad. At times an orthodox Hindoo will not have a "good" day even in a fortnight. Even sneezing is inauspicious. Instances are not rare in which men are prevented from attending their office by sham sneezing. The espying of a male and a female crow together means the approaching death of the observer. His fate may be averted by writing a letter to some of his relatives at a distance saying that he is dead. The appearance of a rat snake at the right hand side of a journey is considered most lucky. A Hindoo will never feed a guest for the first time on Sundays, Tuesdays or Thursdays—these days are supposed to bring enmity between the host and the guest. A Hindoo doctor will never administer medicines to his patient, even if he is very dangerously ill, for the first time on any day other than Sunday or Thursday. It is also laid down that a Hindoo should never sleep with his head toward the south—the direction in which Yama, the god of death, is supposed to live. East and west are always preferred.—Madras Mail.

A CROWDED CITY.

To Walk in Constantinople Is Like a Fierce Struggle.

To walk in Constantinople is like a fierce and active struggle. One should look at once before, behind and underneath one's feet. Some danger or disgust is always threatening. I never walked up the steep road which leads from the bridge to Pera without the feeling that I was fighting my way through a hostile city. A horn blows furiously, and a black man runs up the hill, clearing the way before the dashing and struggling horses of the tram. At the same moment a cab drives at full speed down the hill, and the horses set their feet on the pavement. In front of you a man balances slices of offal on a long pole across his shoulder. They dangle before and behind. He swings cheerfully with his burden through the crowd. A Kurd, stooping under a weight higher than himself, follows, step by step, behind you. Your feet slip in slushy mud and catch on the cobbles or in the gaps of the road.

A dog with a red wound behind his ear and a long strip of mangy skin on his back lies asleep in the middle of the pavement. You step into the road to avoid the dogs and the hamals, and wheels and horses are upon you. You step back into the midst of the dogs and the hamals. As you stand aside for a moment a beggar with a handless arm rounded into a stump and a woman with her face eaten away in the cavity of the hood which she draws back before you appear suddenly, filling what had seemed the only alley of escape. The sun soaks down into the narrow street. The smell of the mud rises up into your nostrils, mingled with those unknown smells which in Constantinople seem to ooze upward out of the ground and steam outward from every door and window and pour out of every alley and rise like a cloud out of the breath and sweat and foulness of the people.—Arthur Symons in Harper's Magazine.

Algy Was Not Particular.

There was company at tea and little Algernon felt that it was an occasion upon which he might assert himself. "Ma," he remarked, holding up his bread and butter in scorn, "can't I have some jam on this?"

"What?" ejaculated his economical mamma. "Jam on butter? No, indeed! Certainly not!"

"Oh, I don't care about it being on the butter," said Algy calmly. "Put it on the other side."—London Answers.

Why Negroes Can Bear Heat.

The function of a negro's black skin is supposed to be the conversion of the sun's light into heat. The heat thus generated remains in the skin and does not penetrate to the deeper tissues. Being thus provided with a sun proof armor the negro can stand an amount of heat that would be fatal to a white man and run little or no risk of sunstroke.

The residence of Ole Lee in Chester Township narrowly escaped being distroyed by fire on Wednesday evening. The fire caught from a lamp that had been left burning by the children near the hedding and set it on fire. One of the children was so severely burned that it was necessar to call a physician.

STARTLING EVIDENCE.

Fresh testimoney in great quantity is constantly coming in, declaring Dr, King's New Discovery for Consumption Coughs and Colds to he unequled. A recent expression from T.J. McFarlaud Bentorville, Va. serves as example. He writes: "I had Bronchitis for three years and doctored all the time without being henefited. Then I began takeing Dr King's New Discovery and a few hottels whooly cured me. "Eqully effective in curing all Lung and Throat troubles, Consumption, Pneumonia and Grip. Gurenteed hy Kronschnabel & Bolstad, Trial hottles free, regular size 50c and $1.00.

Children Do Lie.

Do children lio? Yes; constantly, persistently and universally, says the Kindergarten Magazine. A child does not tell the truth because he could not. He does not know the truth, and his approximation to the truth is very much vaguer than ours. And there are certain qualities of his mind which make it inevitable that he should pervert the truth. In tha first place, truth is synonymous with knowledge. He does not know what truth is. In the second place (and it is the same with us), children gradually approximate the truth. They have their ideas of truth. In the third place, the child's imagination drives him often to tell what is not true.

Brain Work and Hair.

Everything physical being equal, it is established that the man who is engaged in professional work will grow gray sooner than will the man who earns his bread by the literal sweat of his brow. Thus by implication the man who has more and harder brain work than another—more worries, more troubles, more difficult thoughts, less vitality in proportion—this is the individual and the profession that soonest are marked by gray hai—

Jennie—And let the audience find it out for themselves?—Illustrated Bits.

Cacao is grown in Cuba in connection with the coffee plant, as the latter requires shade, which is furnished by the former, at tha same time yielding a profitable crop.

Literary Diseases.

Many occupations have diseases which are more or less incidental to them, and literature is not exempt. The two most prevalent literary maladies are writer's cramp and swelled head. The unfortunate thing about writer's cramp is that it is never cured. The unfortunate thing about swelled head is that it never kills.—Exchange.

In Mediæval Cities.

There can be no doubt that one reason why cities did not grow so rapidly in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries as in the nineteenth is the excessively high death rate that prevailed during the earlier period. The flood of immigration, mighty as it was, did little more than make good the places of those citizens who fell victims to grievous sanitary conditions. From the facts that can be obtained it seems to have been universally true that almost up to the beginning of the nineteenth century the death rate of large cities exceeded the birth rate. This was not because tha birth rate was abnormally low, but because the death rate was abnormally high. In the mediæval city both birth rate and death rate were far highar than at present. Infant mortality must have mounted to a grewsome height. The uncleanliness and overcrowding of city dwellers, now largely relegated to the slums of our great cities, was the normal state of nearly all classes of society in the London and Paris of Louis and Elizabeth.—Professor Edwin O. Jordan in Popular Science Monthly.

Consul King David.

This amusing anecdote of Lamartine is related by the Baroness Bonde in her volume of letters: Shortly after the revolution of February he wrote on the blank leaves of his pocketbook the names of his protegees and sent the list to he provided with places immediately. Previously, however, it seems, he had scribbled "David" on the page, and the head of the cabinet appointed the said David consul at Bremen; the postulant, however, never came forward, and though the poet did not like being disturbed, M. Hetzel was obliged to ask who was the David on his list.

"He who danced before the ark," was the answer.

"Oh, dear! I have gazetted him to Bremen!"

"How very singular! I meant him for a subject for meditation, not for nomination. But you can cancel it."

The moniteur registered the change, but few knew that the last consul appointed to Bremen was King David!

Wonderful Sense of Smell In Dogs.

It has often been proved that dogs are able to track their masters through crowded streets, where it would be impossible to attribute their accuracy to anything except the sense of smell alone. Mr. Romanes, the naturalist, once made some interesting experiments as to this wonderful power as exhibited in his own dog. In these tests the naturalist found that his dumb friend could easily follow in the tracks of his master, though he was far out of sight, and that, too, after no less than eleven persons had followed, stepping exactly in the tracks made by Mr. Romanes, it being the deliberate intention to confuse the senses of the poor dog if possible. Further experiment proved that the animal tracked the boots instead of the man, for when Mr. Romanes put on new footgear the dog failed entirely.

Dangerous Symptoms.

The story is told of a Scotch preacher who gave his people long, strong sermons and delivered them in a remarkably deliberate manner. One Sunday he asked a friend who was visiting him to occupy his pulpit in the morning.

"An' were you satisfied wi' my preaching?" asked his friend as they walked home from the kirk.

"Weel," said his host slowly, "it was a fair discoorse, Will'm; a fair discoorse, but it pained me at the last to see the folk looking so fresh and wide-awake. I mistrust 'twasna sae long nor sae sound as it should hae been."

European Tattooers.

Tattooing is not by any means confined to savage peoples. There are races in Europe which make it a regular practice, and men, women and children bear on their bodies ornamentations that are as ornate and queer, although not as extensive, as are markings on the bodies of the south sea savages.

These European tattooers are among the Albanians and Bosnians, who live in the famous and notorious Balkan peninsula.

Had Several Marks Coming.

"I hope that Willie got a good mark at school today," remarked Willie's fond mother.

"He did not, madam, I am sorry to say," replied the grim visaged pedagogue politely, "but I think I am safe in promising you that if Willie turns up at school tomorrow, which he did not do today, he will receive several." —Syracuse Herald.

Friends In Need.

"I don't put much faith in proverbs," said Brown to Jones. "For instance, look at the oft quoted one, 'A friend in need is a friend indeed.' Now, most of my experience with friends in need has been that they wanted to borrow. Give me the friends that are not in need."

Where Diplomacy Is Needful.

Praise is one of the most difficult of things to deal out satisfactorily. If you do not praise a man as liberally as he thinks he deserves, he hates you; if you overpraise him, he sets you down as a sharper or a fool.—Boston Transcript.

Nutritious Value of Oysters.

The popular belief that the oyster is a most nutritious article of diet does not rest upon any scientific basis. The oyster as a food could not satisfy the demands of the human body. While tha oyster, when not stewed, is very palatable, wholesome and easily assimilated by weak, impaired stomachs, it cannot be contended for a moment that it contains such elements and nutrition as may be found in beans, rice or potatoes. There is very little, if any, fatmaking or muscle building material in the oyster. Its composition is largely nitrogenous, and, being rich in phosphates, it is generally regarded as an excellent food for the brain, but a man reduced to an exclusive diet of oysters would soon find himself deficient in adipose tissue and in those elements that go to make up physical force and vitality in the human body.

Country Training the Best.

That town life is the worst possible training for young people is proved by history. Nearly all of the great men of the world have come from the farm. The reason is quite plain. The country boy, if he is the right kind of boy, spends his time building himself up mentally and physically. The city boy too often spends his days in idleness and his evenings at saloons and theaters. He is not prepared for the battle of life and is left behind by the country boy.—J. M. Terrell of Marshall, Mo., Before Stonewall Literary Society

Shakespeare's Genius.

"An Old Baconian" asks—very foolishly—"Where is the trace of genius in the youth, manhood or old age of the man William Shakespeare?" And a correspondent of Public Opinion answers pertinently enough:

"The same question might be asked with much more reason and answered with much more certainty of the man Oliver Goldsmith. To all his acquaintances he seemed little better than a fool, and yet he was undoubtedly a genius. The proof of his genius is to be found—like Shakespeare's is—in his works."

Contest Notice.

Department of the Interior.

United States Land Office Crookston Minnesota May 26th 1903.

A sufficent contest affidavit haveing been filed in this office by Neri O. Homme, contestant against Homestead entry No 2617, made July 6th 1899, for the S.W.¼ N. E. ¼ Sec. 25 Tp.150 N.R.39 W. by Hendrik Olson contestee in which it is alleged that the said Hendrik Olson has wholly abandoned the same fur more than six months last past and next prior to the date herein, and has wholly failed to settle upon and cultivate said land as required by law, and that said alleged absence from the said land was not due to his employment in the army navy or marine corps of the United States as a private soldier, officer, seman or marine during the war with Spain or during any other war in which the United States may be engaged.

Said parties are hereby notified to appear, respond and offer evidence touching said allegation at 10 o'clock a.m. on July 15th 1903, before Nels M. Bolstad Notary Public at Gully Polk county Minesota (and that final hearing will be held at 10 o'clock A.M. on July 22, 1903 before) the register and reciver at the United States Land Office in crookston Minnesota.

The said contestant haveing in a proper affidavit filed May 22, 1903 set forth facts which show that after due diligence a personal service of this notice can not be made. it is ordered and directed that such notice be given hy due and proper publication. †

Still Under the Spell.

Mrs. Powers—Hezekiah, if you were to live your life all over again and it came to the matter of choosing a wife do you think you would choose me?

All the actions and attitudes of children are graceful because they are the offspring of the moment, without affectation and free from all pretense.—Fusell.

Strange Ideas of Beauty.

Babies in Penjdeh have the back of the head flattened artificially by their mothers, and as another mark of beauty their noses are sharpened and a dimple formed on their chin. The head is flattened by making the child sleep with it on the hard soil or inside an earthenware pot. Each day the mother presses the nose with her fingers to make it long and pointed and indents the chin with a stem. In some cases the legs are straightened by means of bands. In America the Chinooks flatten tha forehead.

Fill the Place Well.

Where one man is called to be a hero on some great scale 10,000 men ara called to be courteous, gentle, patient. There are conspicuous virtues which make reputation, and there are quiet virtues, the virtues of private life, which make character. It is not every man's duty to fill a large place, but it is every man's duty to fill his own place well.—Christian Evangelist.

A Narrow Margin.

John Stuart Mill was once dining with two brilliant French talkers who were given to monologue. One had possession of the field, and the other was watching him so intently to strike in that Mill exclaimed aloud, "If ha stops to breathe, he's gone."

The Racing Camel.

The ordinary camel, which will never hurry under any circumstances, has been transformed in southern Algeria into an animal so different in size, temper and appearance that it may almost be looked upon as a different race. This is the racing camel, prized for its speed. The result of many generations of careful breeding, which has been encouraged by valuable prizes, it can be depended upon for nine or ten miles an hour, which it can keep up for sixteen or seventeen hours, almost without a stop. Its value is five or ten times that of the beast of burden. The camel races are popular sport and are made exciting by the evident interest of the creatures themselves in winning.

A Temperance Champion.

Mrs. Teacup—Oh, Mr. Tubbs, I was so delighted when I heard that you were such a stanch champion of the temperance cause!

Tubbs—Why—er—I'm not exactly—

A Woman's Back.

Dublin, Mich., June 29th.—To the many women who suffer with weak back and pains and tired feelings in the small of the back, the experience of Mrs. Fred Chalker of this place will be interesting and profitable.

Mrs. Chalker had suffered a very great deal with these back pains and although she had tried many things, she could find nothing that would relieve her. The pain kept on in spite of all she could do.

At last she chanced to read the story of another lady who had suffered with the backache, and said she had been cured by a remedy called Dodd's Kidney Pills, and Mrs. Chalker thought she would try the same thing.

After the first two boxes had been taken according to directions, she began to feel some better, and she kept on till at last she was cured.

Her pains are all gone, and she is very grateful. She says: "Dodd's Kidney Pills helped me greatly, and I will always recommend them as a cure for Pain in the Back."

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Climate and Crop Bulletin.

The temperatures were moderately high early in the week, but considerably lower towards its close. There were showers in the South and Southwest on the 17th, 18, 19, which were locally heavy in southwestern counties; there were light local showers in northern portions on the 20th.

In the Red River valley there was temporary benefit to the crops from the showers, but more rain is needed, especially for the oats, barley and flax seeded on the spring plowed lands, and for pastures and forage crops. The wheat and oats on the fall plowed lands seem to be standing the dry weather fairly well.

In the southwest the rains were heavy enough to flood some of the low lands again, and to delay the cultivation of corn and potatoes; in other parts of the South the wheat, oats, barley, flax, corn and potatoes on high lands were benefited, and there was benefit also on the recently flooded lands which were becoming dry and baked. Early barley is heading; rye is filling nicely; oats do not look well in some places; wheat is generally good except that a little rust is reported in Redwood County; a fine clover crop is being cut; timothy is coming into blossom; corn is backward because the weather has not been continuously warm enough for corn growth; flax is generally doing well, though much of the flax was seeded on low lands which have suffered from the excess moisture. A good strawberry crop is being gathered.

Must Have Our Butter.

The state dairy and food department has received information that large Eastern butter dealers are negotiating for the butter of Minnesota creameries. A representative of a Brooklyn firm in a visit at the office of the department in St. Paul, stated that his firm has come in competition with Minnesota butter in the Eastern markets and has decided that to keep its trade it must handle the Minnesota product.

The firm authorized the representative to pay at least 1 cent a pound more than the market price for all the butter he could buy. The representative left on a visit to the principal creameries of the state with the intention of buying up the visible supply. The agent said that the firm had never before bought any butter in the West, but that it intended hereafter to make Minnesota its principal market.

B. D. White, creamery expert of the state dairy and food commission, attributes Minnesota's reputation for producing the best butter in the country to the excellence of Minnesota buttermakers, to the co-operative creamery system, and to the fact that most patrons carry milk fresh to the creamery and let the buttermakers skim and ripen it, instead of skimming and ripening at home.

Adulterations.

The state dairy and food department has learned that some of the preserved "strawberries" and "raspberries" sold in Minnesota are mixtures of timothy seed, broom corn, glucose and sugar. The department has prosecuted since Jan. 1 sixteen dealers for selling adulterated preserves, jams and jellies.

Broom corn when put through a steam process, it is said, resembles raspberry seeds and when mixed with glucose, acids and sugar makes a fair imitation of "preserved raspberries." Timothy seed, while more expensive than broom corn, is mixed in a similar manner with glucose, acids and sugar to make "preserved strawberries."

Prosecutions of this kind are made on a law passed in 1901 providing that adulterated jams and preserves shall be labled "mixed and adulterated." Some manufacturers, finding that they cannot sell the goods with the label, have endeavored to pass them off as pure.

The department in the last few days has collected $105 fines as follows: Adulterated lard, $25; adulterated spices, $30; adulterated baking powder, $50.

School Loans.

The state board of investment so far in June has had applications for loans for the construction of new school houses in twelve counties which aggregate $53,650. One application from Plainview, Wabasha county, calls for $23,000. Princeton, Mille Lacs county, wishes a loan of $15,000, and Amboy, Blue Earth county, $6,000. The loan requested by Princeton will be used to construct an addition to the present high school building. The other loans will be used for new school houses.

News Notes.

The village council of Perham has just ordered 2,000 feet of new cement sidewalks on two of the business streets. The walks will be ten feet wide.

The state board of control awarded the contract for supplying the state institutions with coal during the ensuing year to the Northwestern Fuel company of St. Paul. The institutions will require from 40,000 to 50,000 tons during the year.

John P. Gardner of St. Paul was appointed inspector in the labor department yesterday.

After nursing the belief for many years that it held undisputed title to Minnesota mining property worth many millions, the Clark Iron company has just made a settlement with the heirs to the estate of a former owner, by paying over $200,000.

A motion by the defendant to set aside the service of a summons in the suit brought by County Attorney Frederick H. Boardman against the S. S. McClure Company, publishers of McClure's Magazine, for $50,000 damages for alleged libel, was granted by Judge Loehren of the United States circuit court

No Chance for Them.

A number of capitalists sent a man down to a little town to report on the advisability of introducing gas there.

"Well, queried one of them, "what do you think of it?"

"No use," responded the agent. "Wouldn't pay the salary of the superintendent, let alone the expense of putting in the plant."

"Why? What's the matter?" Citizens too poor?"

"No; they're rich enough."

"Old-fashioned? Prefer kerosene or candles?"

"No-o; thet's not it."

"Well, what is the matter, then?"

"To many engaged couples. Wouldn't burn gas at all."—Brooklyn Eagle.

Why Don't You Have It Covered With Hair?

"IT CAN BE DONE"

Crani-Tonic Hair-Food

"WILL DO IT"

You can't grow a plant from plain soil, without seed, root or shoot. It is contrary to Nature. And when you have no hair root, or follicle, you can't grow hair. But, happily, this condition is not as common as many people suppose.

Statistics prove that the hair follicle on nine-tenths of all bald heads is alive, and that all that is needed to restore the hair is scientific and systematic treatment with the proper kind of hair dressing. The proper kind of hair dressing is Crani-Tonic Hair and Scalp Food—the Kind That Never Fails To Grow Hair. Prevents and Stops Hair Falling Out. Prevents and Cures Dandruff.

OUR FINANCES.

Washington, July 1.—Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Keep has made a summarized statement of the principal financial operations of the government for the fiscal year closed Tuesday.

The revenues of the government from all sources for the year ending June 30, 1903, are shown to have been $558,887,526. The sources of revenue were as follows: Customs, $283,891,719; internal revenue, $230,115,256; miscellaneous sources, $44,880,551. The expenditures for the year were $506,176,590, as follows: Civil and miscellaneous, $125,518,312; war (including rivers and harbors), $118,549,683; navy, $82,696,803; Indians, $12,931,856; pensions, $138,425,618; interest, $28,556,618. The surplus for the year is $52,710,936.

In comparison with the fiscal year, ended June 30, 1902, the revenues show a decrease of $3,500,707, and expenditures an increase of $34,985,732. The surplus shows a decrease of $385,676,439. The revenues from customs increased $29,447,010. The internal revenue receipts decreased $41,764,866, due wholly to the operation of the war revenue repeal act. The miscellaneous receipts increased $8,727,148. More than half of this increase is due to larger sales of public lands. The surplus for 1903 is $9,710,936 greater than was estimated. These figures do not include the revenues and expenditures of the postal service.

American Boats Win Prizes.

Kiel, June 30.—The United States cruiser Chicago's sailing cutter, entered by Midshipman Stephen C. It is thought that the following two will die: John Churney, Alleghany, both legs broken, and Mrs. Edward Holman, Mount Hope, N. J., injury to spine.

Murder in Kentucky.

Hopkinsville, Ky., July 2.—Bug Garth, member of a prominent Todd county family, shot and killed Younger Watkins, aged 20, at the latter's home near Tranton Tuesday night. They fought several days ago about a woman and Watkins swore out a warrant for Garth's arrest. Garth went to Watkins' farm and was met by Younger and Henry Watkins, armed with shotguns. Shots were exchanged and Younger was killed.

TERRIBLE DISASTER.

Madrid, June 29. — Fourteen bodies and 50 injured persons have been extricated from the wreck of the Bilbao train which overturned at Nejerille river Saturday night. According to official information, 90 persons were killed and 100 others seriously injured. Many of the latter will die. Of the 300 passengers on the train, it is stated that only six escaped unhurt. The train, which was composed of two engines and 16 coaches, was crossing the bridge when the couplings between the engines broke. The second engine left the track and fell, followed by the entire train, into the bed of the river. Fortunately the water was low. The nearest medical attendance was a mile and a half distant, and those passengers who were least injured aided the others and did all possible until the arrival of relief trains, bringing nurses, doctors and soldiers from Bilbao.

The train fell 50 feet from the bridge to the river bed, the coaches piling up in a mass of splintered wood and ironwork. The scene is described as horrifying. Many corpses were carried down the stream, which was actually reddened with blood. It was found impossible to extricate numbers of the injured who were pinioned under the wreckage.

PARENTS MADE HAPPY.

Kidnaped Child Restored to its Home in Chicago—Woman Under Arrest.

Chicago, July 1.—Little Alice Furlong, who disappeared from her home at 333 Aberdeen street last Tuesday, has been found, alive, well and happy; the woman who is thought to have kidnaped her is a prisoner at the Desplaines street station, and a man who accompanied her is also held pending an investigation. The woman and child were found on the street at Washington boulevard and Lawrence street shortly before noon Tuesday. Detectives who had received clews early in the morning which pointed to the solution of the mystery had been on the watch for hours, and finally saw the child they were seeking walking with a stylishly-dressed woman. The woman was at once arrested and taken to the station with the child.

Highest in the World.

New York, July 2.—Plans for a gigantic city office building and terminal for railways and bridges were presented to the board of estimates Wednesday by Bridge Commissioner Lindenthal. The building is to be 45 stories high and its ultimate cost $50,000,000. The plans look to the immediate appropriation of $9,000,000. The building rises 650 feet above the curb line. The building is to be erected in Chambers street, in front of City Hall park.

Slain at a Crossing.

Chicago, June 29.—Crowded with home bound passengers, an Archer avenue trolley car crashed into a Belt line freight train at Archer avenue and Forty-seventh street at one o'clock this morning. Two passengers were killed and many were seriously injured. The dead are: Minnie Malstrom and an unknown man.

ROUND ABOUT THE STATE.

The body of Fred Keefe of Blooming Prairie was found in Cedar river in the heart of Austin.

David Brice, well known among Minneapolis sportsmen, committed suicide in his rooms in the Hotel Cecil.

A young man giving his name as John Burus of Cincinnati, Ohio, aged twenty-three, was run over at Awatonna.

Ex-Congressman Page Morris, of Duluth, the newly appointed United States district judge, was sworn in in St. Paul.

Authority has been granted for the organization of the First National bank of Hallock, Minn., with a capital of $25,000.

The state's loans from the permanent school fund on June 29, for the first time in the history of Minnesota, reached the $2,000,000 mark.

Richard Kallusky committed suicide at Stewart by cutting his throat with a pocket knife. Business troubles are responsible for the deed.

Fred Johnson, who lives four miles southeast of Bertha, lost his barn containing horses, calves, oats and grain, by fire. Nothing was saved.

Seventeen shovelers employed on an extension to the Hennepin pulp mill at Little Falls struck for more pay. They were getting $1.65. A new crew went to work.

A carload of oranges has arrived in St. Paul from California under a new system of transportation. It was the first carload of fruit sent across the country without ice.

A large barn belonging to Casper Taubert at Luverne was struck by lightning and burned. Eleven head of horses were either killed by the lightning or burned.

Miss Hilda Sneve and Miss Lizzie Hanson of Rollag were drowned in Pelican Lake while bathing. The bodies were recovered in an hour in about eight feet of water.

Water was turned into the new bass pond at the state fish hatchery, St. Paul. The new pond is 400 by 500 feet, and will greatly increase the facilities of that institution.

The monthly report issued by State Treasurer Julius H. Block shows that there is in the treasury a balance of $1,562,812.72. There is a deficit of $17,446.84 in the general university fund.

The premature explosion of a giant firecracker in the fireworks warehouse of the Paris Murton company, Minneapolis, started a fire which destroyed nearly $20,000 worth of fireworks.

The building owned and occupied by S. J. Murray as a drug store at Rockford burned, and the postoffice building adjoining was damaged. The fire was undoubtedly of incendiary origin.

The public examiner authorized two state banks, the Nicollet State Bank at Nicollet with a capital stock of $10,000 and the state bank of Parker's Prairie with a capital stock of $10,000.

State Superintendent of Instruction J. W. Olsen, has been requested by the similar official of the state of Missouri to forward plans and particulars of the best high schools in Minnesota.

A. B. Sage of Eyota, who disappeared on Jan. 27 of this year and, was thought by some to have drowned himself in the Zumbro river, has been found at Oelwein, Iowa, in a demented condition.

Nathaniel Case Rail, aged sixty-six, for twenty-three years a resident of Rail Prairie, committed suicide by shooting himself through the heart with a winchester. Despondency over lingering illness was the cause.

A drive of 23,000,000 feet of logs is held at Red Lake Falls by low water and unless heavy rains come will not be moved this summer. The logs are the property of the Crookston and Grand Forks Lumber company.

The body of an unindentified man was found in the river at South St. Paul. The only articles in the clothes were two keys and a jackknife. The body is that of a laborer aged about 45 years and of a sandy complexion.

The 11-year-old son of James Gray was drowned in the Clearwater at Red Lake Falls. He was playing on some logs and fell in. His body was recovered in a short time, but all attempts to revive him were unavailing.

St. Paul osteopaths have opened a free dispensary at 138 W Sixth street, St. Paul. On Mondays and Fridays from 8 to 10 a. m. and from 7 to 8 p. m., one or more practioners will be present and treat patients free of charge.

The bankers of the state, through their state association, have just closed arrangements with the Soo line for their annual outing, which will take them down the lakes this year as far east as Collingwood, and Parry Sound.

John Reidelberger, a farmer living near Perham, was brought to the hospital with both legs badly broken. He was operating a stump puller, when the whiffletree broke and the sweep hit him on the legs, fracturing both below the knees.

The railroad commission has issued a circular providing that after Sept. 1, 1903, all freight tariffs issued in Minnesota must bear a serial number for file with the Minnesota commission, the same as will the interstate commerce commission. Under the old practice, the roads have been able to publish and maintain rates that were, for some time at least, unknown to the commission.

A change has been made in the management of The McIntosh Tribune and it comes to us this week double in size and much improved in appearance. Frank Hanson has taken charge of the business and editorial management, haveing leased the interest of H.P.King, Here's success F.O.

When a hail insurance agent drives up to your farm take a good look at him and consider if there is any prospect that you would ever see him again if he insured your crop, and if you are of the opinion that he will vanish as soon as the papers are signed you had not better do business with him.

If the medicine that we have been advertiseing the past year, in anyway compars with the advertisers, we would advise our subscribers, to shun it as "unclean". We will take this matter up later, all we have to say at the present, is to the wester editors, don't let H.E.Bucklins agent, get you to advertise sweetened water in your colums free, and "spree", and you have to to take your medicine C.O.D.

In these times of swindles of all sorts, the following taken from the Warren Register is very appropriate; Hail insurance agents are getting about as thick as fleas on a common every day dog in this country. Thare are some good companies doing business in this state and some very poor ones and we would advise every one insuring or thinking of insuring their crops, to do business with home agents. Strangers promising the earth with each policy should be given a wide berth. Steer clear of them.

The decision of the supreme court that Columbia county was a lawfully constituted county up to the time of the supreme court desision ending its existence tends to make all the acts of the short live county legal and sundry couples who have been worring about the lawfulness of their marriage vows now dwell togeather in peace.

Very good as far as it goes, but there is no record of their mrriage in the county that they reside in at preasant and in order to make one they may have to do the same as the other fellows are doing with the Probate court and wolf bounty business, do it over again.

Courage of Wild Dogs.

The whole tribe of wild dogs, which in closely allied forms are to be found in the wildest jungles and woods of Asia, from the Himalayas to Ceylon and from China to the Taurus—unless the "golden wolves" of the Roman empire are now extinct in the forests of Asia Minor—show an individual and corporate courage which entitles them to a high place among the most daring of wild creatures. The "red dogs," to give them their most characteristic name, are neither large in size nor do they assemble in large packs. Those which have been from time to time measured and described seem to average some three feet in length from the nose to the root of the tail.

The pack seldom numbers more than nine or ten, yet there is sufficient evidence that they are willing and able to destroy any creature that inhabits the jungle, except the adult elephant and perhaps the rhinoceros—creatures whose great size and leathery hide make them almost invulnerable to such enemies as dogs.—London Spectator.

A STARTLING TEST.

To save a life, Dr. T. G. Merritt, of No. Mehoopany, Pa., made a startling test resulting in a wonderful cure. He writes "a patient was attacked with violent hemorrhages caused by ulceration of the stomach. I had often found Electric Bitters excellent for acute stomach and liver troubles so I prescribed them. The patient gained from the first, and has not had an attact in 14 months." Electric Bitters are are positively guarenteed for Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Constipation and kidney troubles. Try them. Only 50c at Kronschnrbel & Bolstad.

A Lake of Many Wonders.

Lake Chad, in Africa, is 185 miles long and 80 miles wide, or somewhat larger in area than Lake Erie, yet it is only twenty-five feet deep in its deepest part and only five feet in its eastern side.

It has eighty islands, some barren, others only pasture land and some covered with forests and millet plantations and having a total population of about 50,000.

Storms arise with surprising quickness on the lake, and the shallowness of the water forces up big waves at short notice, while treacherous gusts and puffs of wind about the islands make navigation dangerous.

Superstitious Fate.

In some parts of England the tapping of a bird round the house is looked upon by the superstitious as a warning.

A doctor was recently summoned in hot haste to a little Warwickshire farmhouse not many miles from Birmingham.

He found an old man in bed, but in perfect health, and asked why he had been sent for.

"Why, sir," replied the daughter-in-law, "there coom a little robin about the door. We knowed it was a 'call,' and we thought it must be granfer; so we put 'im in bed and sent for you."

The Family.

Railway officials differ in the degrees of liberality with which they define the word "family" when used on a pass. An American copied the instructions of the Paris-Lyons-Mediterranean railway bearing upon the subject as a lesson in liberality. On that road a pass for one and family is good for father, mother, children, grandfather, grandmother, mother-in-law, father-in-law, brother, sister, brother-in-law, sister-in-law, uncle, aunt, nephew, niece and servants attached to the family.

Only Room For Doubt.

Maid—But I saw Mr. Jones lay several articles there.

Discretion.

Southern Europe.

A traveler writes: "I have often been struck by the ease with which people in southern Europe are amused. In Paris 100,000 people go out to Longchamps for the Grand Prix race, and half a million people go out and line the roads on their return to see them come back. In Rome at the feast of the "Divine Amore" 5,000 people go out on the Campagna to a spot where once stood a temple to Venus and hold a picnic, while 50,000 go out and line the Appian way to see them return. In Madrid this peculiarity is even more marked. On the Puerta del Sol about a thousand people stand around and do nothing outdoors, while crowds of people sit indoors or lean from balconies to watch them do it. And in Berlin the idle rich sit in chairs and cafes on the Korso to watch the lower classes walk by, while the lower classes walk by to watch the idle rich sitting in the chairs and cafes on the Korso."

Falmouth is probably the oldest port in England. It was used by the Phoenicians at least 2,500 years ago.

He Was Not.

"Gentlemen, you wouldn't take me to be a member of a millionaire's family, would you?" inquired the young man.

"Frankly, we would not."

"Neither would the millionaire. I asked him last night."

Love in Lapland.

In Lapland the crime which, after murder, is punished with the greatest severity is that of marrying a girl against the wishes of her parents. When a suitor makes his appearance he says nothing to the maiden, who often does not know who he is, but her parents inform her that she is sought in marriage. Shortly afterward, on a day appointed, the girl, her parents, friends and suitor all meet together at a feast, and the young man and maiden are placed opposite, so that they can look at each other freely and can talk with comfort. After the meal is over the company repair to an open space where "the race for a wife" is run. The usual distance is about a quarter of a mile, and the girl is placed a third of the distance from the starting point. If she be fleet of foot she can easily reach the goal before her suitor, and in that case he may never trouble her again. If, however, he has found favor in her eyes, all she has to do is to lag somewhat in her flight, so that he may overtake her. If she desires to intimate to him that his love for her is returned she may run a little way and then turn with open arms to accept him.

English For French Tongues.

Persons who have worried through a "French Manual" may get some satisfaction from the thought that with their own language they are revenged upon the Parisian. "Methods Avec Prononciation" is a little book which makes straight the way of the English language for French tongues. Does one wish to say, "How is it, miss; one so charming and pretty walking alone?" (which, of course, would be one of the first remarks a French traveler would have occasion to make) it is only necessary to consult the "Nouvelles Methods:" "Aou iste, miss; ouane so tcharminngue annde pretti ouakinngue alanne?" If the traveler goes to the theater the man at the box office may say, "Oui have onli orchestre stalls lefte, bute allow me tou rimarque dat se are se best sites for hinngelle dgentlemene." Evidently "th" is given up as a bad job, and "j" is as difficult for the Frenchman as for the German, though a German manual gives John Bull as "Dschohn Bool."

Great Mushroom Garden in France.

The strangest of the underground worlds in France which I visited was one devoted to the raising of mushrooms. Its limits seemed unbounded as indeed they were, for it pierced the hillsides in every direction. We entered through an opening under an orchard of cherry trees. During "harvest time" a crop is gathered every twenty-four hours. Three men, with their great baskets, make the rounds of this underground farm every morning, and every day in the year can count off an immense crop, which they ship to the large cities near by and even several miles away. The discolored and inferior mushrooms are sent to the canneries but for his best growth the producer receives only 20 cents a pound.—Scribner's Magazine.

Flamingoes' Tongues.

The beastly Vitellius, as Gibbon calls him, spent at least six millions of money on table in as many months. He invented, or his cook invented for him, a dish which he designated "the Shield of Minerva." One of its principal ingredients was flamingoes' tongues, of which both Pliny and Martial speak in encomiastic terms. Dampier says that the flamingoes have "large tongues and near the root is a piece of fat which is accounted a great dainty." When Captain Owen was surveying the east coast of Africa his sailors shot down hundreds of these beautiful birds in order, with an extravagance worthy of Vitellius, to make a dish of the tongues alone.

Historic Albania.

Albania lies 180 miles on the Adriatic sea and is fifty to a hundred miles wide. It was formed originally, says William Jackson Armstrong in his "Heroes of Defeat," from part of Ilyria, all of Epirus and part of Macedonia in the eleventh century. From this territory sprang Pyrrhus, who defeated the Roman invader; Philip and Alexander of Macedon, the conquerors; Perseus, whose fame as a soldier covered the world sixty years after Christ, and Skanderbeg, who for thirty years defeated armies sent against him by the Turk. Ancient Albania lay in Asia, just east of the Caucasus.

The Whole Thing.

"Then you've been to Niagara?"

"Yes. I was quietly married last Tuesday week, and the next day we reached Niagara. Soon as we got there I started out to see the falls with my wife."

"Magnificent, eh?"

"You bet! You should have seen all the other men turning around to look at her at the places!"—Philadelphia Press.

Foolish Fear of the Opal.

Many people to this day have a superstitious dread of wearing opals, because they really believe ill luck is attached to this beautiful stone. Three centuries ago the opal was an exceedingly fashionable gem, and the Italian goldsmiths particularly favored it as the stone for their most exquisite settings.

The opal was at the height of its popularity when the plague broke out in Venice. Some especially observant individual discovered that when a plague-stricken sufferer was at the point of death the opal, if he wore one, would grow brighter, and after his death it would grow dull. The reason for this appears to have been that the burning fever warmed the stone and that after death the damp and chill of the body dulled it. But many deduced from this a belief that it was the opal that had brought death and misfortune, and with the spread of this superstition the opal declined in popular favor.

Many persons would on no account whatever even accept one as a gift, much less wear what they foolishly deem the unlucky opal.—New York Press.

A Custom of the Balkans.

He or she who enters a house for the first time is supposed in the Balkan countries to bring it good or bad luck for the whole twelvemonth. This belief gives rise to a curious observance. The visitor before crossing the threshold picks up a stone (token of strength) or a green twig (emblem of health and fruitfulness) and lays it on the hearth. He also brings with him some grains of salt, which he casts into the flames, and then, squatting by the fireside, wishes his hosts "a prosperous year, a plentiful crop and many blessings." Then as the grains of salt burst and crackle in the fire he utters the following quaint formula: "As I am sitting even so may sit the hen and warm the eggs. As this salt splits even so may split the eggs of the clucking hen and the chickens come forth."

Why Men Eat Too Much.

Eating is the greatest of all our standard amusements. A great number of people obviously eat a great deal more than they need, and it is entirely credible that a large proportion of the moderate eaters might thrive as well and look as handsome and work as hard and live as long on a very much restricted diet. But would the joy of life continue unimpaired for them? The native born might raise plenty of children if they could subsist for 11 cents a day, but would they think life was worth living on 11 cents worth of food a day? No, they wouldn't. That is one thing that ails them.—Harper's.

Chairs in the Dark Ages.

The chairs of the dark ages, modeled partly on those of the Romans, were in keeping with the comfortless dwellings in which the people of the north of Europe then passed their lives. The Saxon kings of England are represented as seated on thrones in the form of a box, the ends slightly raised, the bottom advanced to form a sort of footstool. There is always a cushion to add a degree of comfort, and sometimes a back in the form of a cross piece or remotely resembling the backs of modern chairs.

Courage Begets Courage.

One brave step makes the next one easier. True, the road seems more piled up with obstacles as one goes along; but, then, one is made stronger and more capable with every step, so that relatively we have an easy road always before us. At least if not exactly easy it becomes more interesting—one feels less inclined to grumble.—Cosmopolitan.

Turned Out.

"Yes," replied his son gloomily, "our college turned out the man who was sure to have won the hundred yard dash for us next year just because he didn't pass any of his examinations."—Syracuse Herald.

The Cataleptic Trance.

It cannot be doubted that in numerous cases of cataleptic trance the apparently lifeless patient has been acquainted with all the arrangements being made for his interment. Several instances are recorded in which, although the body presented every appearance of death, the patient was conscious of everything going on around him, but absolutely unable to raise a limb or in any way communicate with those near his bed.

Street Car Speed.

"Ever notice," asked the street car philosopher, "how the speed of street cars is regulated by our frame of mind?"

"In what way?"

BOY'S WILD RIDE ON A CAR STEP

Perilous Journey of a Boston Youth on a Mighty Flying Train.

A few weeks ago Arthur Hahne, a Boston boy of fourteen, made up his mind that he would like to see the great city of New York. He had no money, but that did not bother him, as he was a lad of resource. He determined to ride on the swift Pullman train that covers the distance between the two cities at a speed of fifty miles an hour.

When the train pulled out of the station at Boston at 10 o'clock in the forenoon no one noticed that crouching on the forward step of the head Pullman car, holding on with his hands and by means of wedging his back up against the floor above, was the youthful adventurer.

Faster and faster moved the train. It was now flying. Arthur Hahne had never dreamed that trains could go so fast. He stole a frightened look down at the track bed. The pebbly ballast was flying past in a solid floor of grayish brown. What if he should lose his grip and fall off? The thought made him faint. He could imagine the way his little body would go sliding and ripping along the ends of the sleepers till it stopped lifeless.

Suddenly the train swept around a slight curve. He was on the outside, and the momentum gave him an outward impulse. His heart flew into his throat as he realized that he was holding on as hard as he could and that only a trifle more energy would force him off the step into space.

Suddenly a train rushed past in the opposite direction. It went by with a roar that was like the thundering of Niagara, and the boy dared not look. He hugged closer to the step, resisting the sucking wind that tried to pull him off and under the wheels of the passing train. His hat was gone now, and the flying cinders, many of them hot, buried themselves in his hair.

He pulled the corner of his coat over his head that he might the better protect himself from the ashes and dust.

The train stopped at Providence, R. I., an hour after it had started, and in the rush and hurry no one noticed the little bundle of humanity huddled on the step of the forward Pullman. There was no time for him to get off and stretch his legs. In a few minutes the train was again in motion.

At New Haven the station platform is long and exposed. It was impossible for little Arthur Hahne to escape detection, and as soon as the train stopped he jumped off and hid among the passengers on the platform.

As soon as the deep mouthed train caller had started the Bay State express the little fellow climbed again upon the step and snuggled down. But this time fate was against him.

As the fast train moved out of the station the quick eye of a train dispatcher in the high signal tower at the south end of the yard saw him and as the train swept past leaned out for a better look.

Then he stepped over to the telegraph instrument, and a message something like this went flying ahead of the train into the Grand Central station in New York:

THE BOY CLUNG TO THE STEP.

"Boy hanging to forward step of first Pullman of Bay State express."

Another message came out of Manhattan to Mount Vernon, which is a few miles above New York, telling the station master to flag the Bay State express and take off a small boy clinging to the forward Pullman.

When the train swept into the little town of Mount Vernon in a cloud of dust the engineer was surprised to see it flagged and to see a group of trainmen lined up as though they intended to mount the train and capture it. There was a rush, a dusty little figure dodged out and ran, but was overtaken and held.

A doctor rushed out of the crowd and felt the boy over. "He is all right," he said. "Better let him go." The policeman who had his hand on Arthur's collar released it. Some one offered to pay the boy's fare to New York, and the last ten miles of his journey he rode as a first class passenger.

FOSSTON CELEBRATED.

Notwithstanding the unfavorable wether Fosston gave a very good celebration July fourth. It rained in the forenoon and the oration by Hon. H. Steenerson was delivered in the hall instead of the large bowery that had been provided for the purpose, which made it impossiable for more than one fourth of the people, that desired to hear him to get within sound of his voice.

A good program of sprts was caried out in the afternoon, the ball game between Fosston and McIntosh being, won by the latter. The large bowery and hall with good dancing music, and the merry-goround intertained the large crowed until a late hour.

Valuable Special Knowledge.

The unique botanical knowledge of Sir George Birdwood, one of the most erudite men in the India service, once enabled him to perform almost unconsciously a neat bit of detective work.

He was in Bombay when he was asked to investigate the case of a young nobleman who in applying to the governor for an appointment represented that he was just out from England and that his letters of introduction had been lost on the voyage.

A few days after Dr. Birdwood, as he then was, had undertaken the investigation he met the young nobleman at dinner at the governor's house. The table decorations of orchids suggested a conversational opening, and Dr. Birdwood's praise drew from the young nobleman standing opposite:

"You should see the Amherstia nobilis in its native woods, sir."

It was a fatal remark.

"You come from Rangoon, then!" instantly exclaimed Dr. Birdwood.

The pale face, the silence that could be felt, the request of the young man that he might leave the table, all prepared the governor and the company for the subsequent discovery that he had absconded from Rangoon with some public funds.

How Roses Came to be Red.

More than with any other flower have the color of the rose have special significance. Red is love, white is silence, yellow speaks jealousy, says K. Hudson Moore in the Delineator. One of the legends connected with the rose tells that it became white through being bathed with the tears of mourners who sought the sweetest flower to lay in the hands of their dead. A prettier conceit declared that all roses were white until one day young Cupid, dancing among them, upset in his merry sport a glass of wine, which dyed the roses upon which it fell red, its own color. Another legend tells the story of a holy little maid of Bethlehem who was doomed to death. When the fagots were heaped around her the fire would not burn, but the brands which had been flaming turned to red roses and those which had not caught to white. From this time forth roses, red and white, were [illegible] flowers. The Turks say that the roses sprang from the blood of Mohammed.

Bad Man's Finish

How Ben Thompson Was Done Up In a San Antonio Theater.

Thirty Men Turned Loose Their Guns on Him and He Was Riddled With Bullets: Game to the End.

The recent killing of Outlaw Jim McKinney in a Chinese joss house at Bakersfield, Cal., by the town marshal has served to recall the nervy deeds of famous frontier marshals.

McKinney was a desperado of the worst type. He was known to be a sure shot and quick with the gun. Consequently after his brutal and unprovoked murder of Blakey when McKinney turned up at Bakersfield the town marshal knew that he was facing death as soon as he got within range of McKinney's gun.

Deeds like this were not uncommon in the west a few years ago. In fact, when a man accepted the marshal's star or service badge he knew pretty well that he was taking long chances in a game with death, particularly if he happened to be in a community that was favored with the presence of many men of the "bad" type. Towns like Dodge City and Hays City, Kan.; Tombstone, Ariz., and Leadville, Colo., were the bright particular gathering places of the knights of the revolver, and the history of the "bad men" and of the takers of "bad men" is so mingled that one is at a loss to know today where to find the line that marks the desperado from the upholder of the law. In fact, it was common custom in the west to select as sheriff a man who had made a record as a killer.

THOMPSON RODE INTO THE COURT ROOM.

Ben Thompson was a noted shooter, and he and his brother Bill played many wild pranks with their revolvers, to the terror of the populace and to the undoing of many marshals. It was Ben Thompson who broke up a cattlemen's banquet at Austin by shooting every plate off the table and breaking the neck off of every bottle, while not a cattleman dared shoot in return.

The wholesome fear of Thompson can be realized when it is known that the desperado rode into a county court room on his mustang, with a six shooter in either hand, and pleasantly informed the judge and jury that he would like to see any coyote in the crowd with nerve enough to take him. Nobody moved, and Thompson rode from the room as debonair as you please despite the fact that there were several unserved warrants out for him on charges of murder.

Thompson met a dramatic death. He was persuaded to visit the Palace theater at San Antonio, Tex. As he entered his seat in the front row of the balcony a volley of rifle shots rang out. Thirty men in the parquet fired by signal, and the desperado was riddled with bullets. "King" Fisher, who was with Thompson, was killed outright, and Thompson tumbled from the balcony into the pit, mortally wounded. Before the desperado died, however, he drew a gun and killed two men, one of them being the man who had prevailed upon him to come to the theater.

Thompson's brother Bill quickly heard the news, rallied his followers and swept down upon the theater. A barricade of well armed men under cover kept them back with repeating rifles. The cow punchers poured into town to avenge the death of "King" Fisher. The militia was called out, and for six weeks San Antonio was under martial law. At last the cowboys retired, leaving the deaths of Thompson and "King" Fisher unavenged.

It was seldom, however, that any "bad man" arose who could not be corralled by the nervy marshals of the west, and if worst came to worst the "bad man" himself could usually be persuaded to don the star of authority and act in the interests of the law. In the case of nearly every "bad man" death has been violent and has been brought about by treachery.

Largest Hanging Bell.

What is perhaps the largest hanging bell in the world is to be seen in Mandalay. This is the Mingun bell, on the right bank of the Irawadi, almost opposite the city of Mandalay. This immense bell measures as follows: Height to crown, 12 feet; diameter at the lip, 16 feet 3 inches; thickness of metal, from 6 to 12 inches. It weighs about eighty tons and is suspended on three massive round beams of teak placed horizontally the one over the other, their ends resting on two pillars of enormous size, composed of masonry and large upright teak posts. This bell was cast at the end of the eighteenth century under the superintendence of the reigning king.

The Spittle Fly.

The spittle fly is an insect which encompasses itself in a white froth composed of the juice it has sucked out of the plant on which it is bred. It seriously injures pinks, carnations and picotees if not checked in the early stages of its progress. It is very tender when young, but develops into a hard skinned hopper. It can be pinched and rubbed off with the fingers, or a good syringing with something bitter, like a concoction of quassia chips, will drive the creatures away.—London Times.

The Serpent That Talked Like a Man.

In John Ashton's "Curious Creatures of Zoology" there is a quotation from "a little Latine booke printed at Vienna in the yeare 1551" which tells a most wonderful story. Ashton quotes as follows: "There was found in a mowe or ricke of corn almost as many snakes, adders and other serpentes as there was sheafes, so as no one sheaf could be removed but there presently appeared a heape of ougly and fierce serpentes. The countrie men determined to set fire upon the barne and so attempted to do, but in vaine, for the straw would take no fire, although they laboured with all their witts and policye to burn them up.

"At last there appeared unto them at the top of the heap a huge great serpente which lifted up his head and spake with a man's voyce to the countrie men, saying: 'Cease to prosecute your devises, for you shall not be able to accomplish our burning, for wee were not bredde by Nature, neither came we here of our owne accord, but were sent by God to take vengeance on the sinnes of men.'"

Ashton leaves us in the dark as to what the "countrie" men did, but it is natural to suppose that they surrendered at once.

Pictures in Stone.

Shakespeare could "find tongues in trees, books in the running brooks, sermons in stones and good in everything," but he fails to mention the possibility of finding a picture drawn by nature in a stone. In several of the ancient as well as modern scientific journals we read of lines and markings in certain stone formations, particularly agates, which bear striking resemblances to the outlines of men, animals, landscapes, etc.

One of these curiosities now preserved in the museum of the Vatican is a perfect likeness of a crowned king. Many of these representations are so lifelike that they have been mistaken for medallion portraits. We read accounts of several of these wonders in Albertus. One plainly shows a man in the attitude of running, another is a perfect figure of the good St. Jerome, but the most remarkable of all is an agate containing a representation of Apollo surrounded by the nine muses.

A Persian Story.

There is a story in Persian literature of a certain poet who came before a great man and praised him very ornately. The rich man was very pleased and said: "Ready money I have not, nevertheless there is in my granaries very much corn. If you come tomorrow I will give you some." The poet went to his own house and on the morrow presented himself to his patron. The rich man asked him, "Why have you come?" He said: "Yesterday you promised to give me corn. For this reason am I come." The rich man said: "A most wonderful fool thou art. What you said to me gave me pleasure. What I have said to you equally pleased you. Why, then, should I give you corn?" The poet was covered with shame and departed.

How to Make Cloth Waterproof.

Ordinary cloth may be made waterproof by the following treatment: Put half a pound of sugar of lead and half a pound of alum in a pail of soft water. Stir this at intervals until it becomes clear. Then pour it off into another pail, put the cloth or garment into it and let it stand an entire day, twenty-four hours. Then hang up to dry without wringing. Garments treated thus, it is said, can be worn in the wildest storm of wind and rain without the wearer getting even damp. The rain hangs in globules upon the cloth, and cloth that is waterproof is better and more healthy than rubber goods.

Burmese Girls.

The Burmese girl begins smoking when she is about three years of age. A group of schoolgirls in Mandalay will sit in a circle passing around the cigarette, just as American girls would pass round the bag of caramels. It isn't a weedy little thing two inches long and no thicker that the Burmese girl smokes. It is a whacking big cheroot, nearly a foot long and weighing about three-quarters of a pound.

For Aged People.

Bellflower, Mo., July 6th.—Mr. G. V. Bohrer, of this place, has written an open letter to the old men and women of the country, advising them to use Dodd's Kidney Pills as a remedy for those forms of Kidney trouble so common among the aged. Mr. Bohrer says:

"I suffered myself for years with my Kidneys and urinary organs. I was obliged to get up as many as seven or eight times during the night.

"I tried many things with no success, till I saw one of Dodd's Almanacs, and read of what Dodd's Kidney Pills were doing for old people.

"I bought two boxes from one druggist, and began to use them at once. In a very short time I was well. This is over a year ago, and my trouble has not returned, so that I know my cure was a good, genuine, permanent one.

"I believe Dodd's Kidney Pills are a splendid medicine for old people or anyone suffering with Kidney and urinary troubles, for although I am 84 years of age, they have made me well."

If a man is old, don't call him "old man."—Atchison Globe.

Mrs. Anderson, a prominent society woman of Jacksonville, Fla., daughter of Recorder of Deeds, West, says:

"There are but few wives and mothers who have not at times endured agonies and such pain as only women know of. I wish such women knew the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It is a remarkable medicine, different in action from any other I ever knew and thoroughly reliable.

"I have seen cases where women doctored for years without permanent benefit who were cured in less than three months after taking your Vegetable Compound, while others who were chronic and incurable came out cured, happy, and in perfect health after a thorough treatment with this medicine. I have never used it myself without gaining great benefit. A few doses restores my strength and appetite, and tones up the entire system. Your medicine has been tried and found true, hence I fully endorse it."—Mrs. R. A. Anderson, 225 Washington St., Jacksonville, Fla.—$5000 forfeit if original of above testimonial proving genuineness cannot be produced.

The experience and testimony of some of the most noted women of America go to prove, beyond a question, that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will correct all such trouble at once by removing the cause, and restoring the organs to a healthy and normal condition.

CUTICURA OINTMENT

Purest of Emollients and Greatest of Skin Cures.

The Most Wonderful Curative of All Time

For Torturing, Disfiguring Skin Humours

And Purest and Sweetest of Toilet Emollients.

Cuticura Ointment is beyond question the most successful curative for torturing, disfiguring humours of the skin and scalp, including loss of hair, ever compounded, in proof of which a single anointing preceded by a hot bath with Cuticura Soap, and followed in the severer cases, by a dose of Cuticura Resolvent, is often sufficient to afford immediate relief in the most distressing forms of itching, burning and scaly humours, permit rest and sleep, and point to a speedy cure when all other remedies fail. It is especially so in the treatment of infants and children, cleansing, soothing and healing the most distressing of infantile humours, and preserving, purifying and beautifying the skin, scalp and hair.

Cuticura Ointment possesses, at the same time, the charm of satisfying the simple wants of the toilet, in caring for the skin, scalp, hair, hands and feet, from infancy to age, far more effectually, agreeably and economically than the most expensive of toilet emollients. Its "Instant relief for skin-tortured babies," or "Sanative, antiseptic cleansing," or "One-night treatment of the hands or feet," or "Single treatment of the hair," or "Use after athletics," cycling, golf, tennis, riding, sparring, or any sport, each in connection with the use of Cuticura Soap, is sufficient evidence of this.

Sold throughout the world. Cuticura Resolvent, 50c. (in form of Chocolate Coated Pills, 25c. per vial of 60). Ointment, 50c., Soap, 25c. Depots: London, 27 Charterhouse Sq.; Paris, 5 Rue de la Paix; Boston, 137 Columbus Ave. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Proprietors. ☞ Send for "The Cuticura Skin Book."

  A smile to the passer-by;
Wayside warder, sentinel flower,
  What is your password—say?
You know the seasons, you tell the hour,
And you hold a title, in sun and shower,
  To a simple right-of-way.

You have sisters inside the garden wall,
  Tended with human care;
They grow up graceful and fair and tall,
  But naught of your freedom share.
Their beauty is hid from the vulgar gaze,
  They pine in a willing ease;
But you—you are light of the lowly ways.
You shine on the common, you star the braes:
  Boon-comrade of the breeze.

A lifted face to the rain and sun,
  Eyes moist with the morning dew,
A nod and a smile for every one,
  And the joy of living for you.
Starry-rayed, and a heart of gold,
  Planted by God's own hand;
Too poor you are to be bought or sold,
Too free to forsake the heathy wold;
  Star-flower of No Man's Land.
—Walter C. Howden, in Chambers' Journal.

MADAME BARBETTE

By WAYNE B. CARLOCK

(Copyright, 1903, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

It was about 10 a. m. I was out getting a little fresh air, strolling idly and aimlessly up Broadway, almost wishing something exciting would happen to puncture the morning's tiresome serenity and instill a little high life into my apathetic state.

Arriving near Thirty-fifth street my attention was attracted across the way to a rumpus on the front steps of the Herald building. A man, apparently in the throes of great excitement, was directing the eyes of several others toward an open car headed down Broadway. He was making violent gestures with his hands and evidently had discovered something about the vehicle which amounted to grave fear or importance.

I no sooner turned them in its direction than a gentleman ran awkwardly against me, nearly sprawling me headlong into the street. Glancing around as quickly as I could balance myself I noticed him point with a sweeping movement toward the fleeing car, his eyes glaring wildly with the fire of discovery.

I whirled and caught sight of the departing vehicle, all the time straining my ears to overhear what my neighbors were saying, but they were conversing so rapidly that it came to me as the merest jargon.

I scarcely knew what to do; in fact I had nothing to do, wanted something to do, so I made up my mind that I would run down this mystery if it took me all the way to Battery Place.

Just at this moment a second car rolled by me, and seeing my opportunity, I made a wild climb for it. My morning lethargy was fast disappearing. Strolling rapidly to the front I noticed the preceding car just opposite Smith, Gray & Co., where a mob of men who had been inspecting the windows were making various kinds of frantic gesticulations. They, too, had discovered something and were imparting the news to each other in the most nonplussing manner.

I now turned my attention to details. That car was moving along as smoothly as possibly could be, so there could not have been anything wrong with the machinery or rolling stock. Both motorman and conductor were calm and collected, as likewise seemed the passengers. One thing, however, appeared quite singular as to the different passengers positions.

There were aboard just five men and one woman. These five men were bunched together on the two rear seats. As they were not smoking I could hardly believe this incidental. The woman sat in the second seat from the front, was large and attractively dressed; that is, if you call a full suit of sable in the summertime attractive—and wore a black chapeau adorned across the front with a single large plume of brilliant green.

That she was the cynosure in question I had no further doubt. We were keeping within an average of about 30 yards of the leading car, so I could easily see everything that transpired ahead.

As we emerged into Madison Square I detected the woman glancing sidewise toward the Hoffman house. At the entrance stood a group of men, whom her advent had thrown into a fluster, and as they were apparently gentlemen of time and money, the perplexity of the situation became more and more puzzling. What could there be about this woman which gave birth to such commotion among both class and commoner?

Then something else happened. The group of men sitting on the rear seats had placed their heads together, and I could tell they were consulting each other in a strange, enigmatical style. One gentleman in particular was assuming an explanatory attitude of the most startling and conspicuous nature. The car came to a halt at Twenty-third street and the entire party sneaked fearfully from the car, never looking once behind them.

My anxiety and curiosity at this turn of affairs simply became unbearable. Something had to be found out quick or I would probably fall in an unconscious, sweltering fit.

The fated car was now rolling into Union Square. From in front of Tiffany's a crowd of window inspectors had caught on, and if the hubbub they displayed could have been seen by a party at a distance, they would have believed someone was going through one of the plate glass windows in quest of sunbursts.

A thought now came whirling through my fevered brain which greatly distressed me. I could not recall that a single policeman had so far appeared in any party of these perturbed discoverers. Why didn't somebody find a bluecoat and inform him? Surely it must be of importance to them!

In a blockade at Fourteenth street our car caught up with the one bearing the terrifying black and green. Alighting to the pavement I dashed forward, and caught it just as they started on. The conductor was in the extreme rear end and was looking calmly up the street in the opposite direction from which the car was traveling, so he was evidently unaware of the disturbances arising on the sidewalks. In my undue agitation I caught his arm with such force that we came near crashing into each other head-on.

"What in the Devil is the matter with this car? Who is that woman?"

"Why—why?"

"Look! Look out there at those excited men. Don't you see where they're pointing?"

He faced around and fastened his eyes on the only other passenger aboard. Then as the light of discovery seemed to break over his features he suddenly became white and purple as a corpse. He shrank back almost convulsively.

"What is the matter? Speak," I implored.

"Have—have you change for $5?" he stammered. "Quick!"

I jerked out what money I had.

"I just have a ten and four ones."

"They'll do," he said eagerly, almost savagely, thrusting the five into my hands.

"What! the ten and the ones?" I gasped.

"No—just the ones—here!"

A signal came from the lady and the man pulled the rope.

While I was trying to beat into my brain why this man had taken four ones for a five the woman had alighted from the car and was disappearing down East Ninth street.

"Tell me, who was it?" I yelled.

Somebody shouted "Madame Barbette!"

Who in seven worlds could be Madame Barbette? I knew almost as much as I did before. However, I came to my senses again and rushed like a wild man down East Ninth street in search of the sinister, lugubrious, city-upsetting madame.

As I tore along I remembered "the five dollar bill!"

The conductor must have had it from Madame Barbette in collecting her fare. Not having paid any particular attention to the passenger he had overlooked her identity until I aroused his especial interest. Then he thought of the bill! He was afraid of it! He would have gotten rid of it at any sacrifice! He had palmed it off on me—I had been duped—had probably sold my life for a dollar!

Or maybe it was counterfeit—perhaps the madame was the chief and queen of some notorious swindling gang.

I hurriedly pulled the thing from my pocket and held it up to the light—it appeared faultless in every detail, so I tried to think of some other reason.

The other reason, which was not long coming, sent cold chills all over me. Maybe she had some deadly contagion—some horrible, zymotic disease! The thought paralyzed me!

I stopped a policeman, quickly describing the madam; he hadn't seen her. I ran three blocks farther, looking into stores and buildings, stopped another bluecoat—if he had seen her we could approach her together. He knew nothing of her.

Then followed a futile search for hours. I haunted every street corner from Wanamaker's to Chatham square to no avail. Till late in the afternoon I hung around Mott and Pell streets, thinking she might put in an appearance there, but she never came in sight.

Sick, tired and disgusted I made my way home that evening and threw myself dejectedly on a couch. I had lost a day, worried myself ill and discovered nothing—nothing but a name—Madame Barbette.

A morning paper which I had not yet read lay beside me. I wearily picked it up and glanced over its pages. My eyes fell on a sensational article with scare headlines—it had been read that morning, no doubt, by every man and woman in New York but myself. My blood froze in my veins!

IS IT BLACK DEATH?

I slowly drew the five-dollar greenback from my pocket and stared at it feebly. Then solemnly striking a match, I watched it vanish in phantom plumes of greenish smoke.

Squelched.

Feline amenities show themselves most forcibly at committee meetings. There was one of these latter gathered together to discuss a charity bazaar. The chairman smiled sweetly upon the artist's wife, and said:

"You'll get your husband to let us have some little thing of his for the art table, will you not, Mrs. Mahlstick?"

"Well, you know husbands are not always easily managed, my dear."

"Ah, but take him after one of your pie dinners and then put in a word for our worthy cause—but, remember, we are not allowed to have anything which sells for over $25."

"Indeed!" and Mrs. M——'s eyebrows went up alarmingly: "then perhaps he'll induce one of his pupils to dash off something for you."—N. Y. Times.

Five hundred pounds' worth of feathers have been taken from a single ostrich during its lifetime.

WILLING TO REPEAT.

Young Hunter Captures Something More Than Game on One of His Expeditions.

On the Kronprinz Wilhelm, one moonlight May night, a young man and a girl were discovered making love. The news of this discovery spread among the passengers, and many a joke was cracked, says the Kansas City Journal. But Senator N. B. Scott, of West Virginia, said in the smoking-room:

"There is nothing to laugh at here. Innocent love-making is natural in the young. This fact was well brought out by an adventure that happened to a friend of mine, years ago, in the mountains of West Virginia.

"The young man was hunting. He came to a lonely cabin, and, being thirsty, he knocked at the door for a drink. The drink was handed to him by a girl so charming that, with a smile, he said:

"'Would you be angry if I should offer you a dollar for a kiss?'

"'No, sir,' the girl answered, with a little blush.

"So my friend took the kiss, and then he gave the maiden the dollar. She balanced it in her hand a moment. She knitted her pretty brows in perplexity.

"'What,' she asked, 'shall I do with all this money?'

"'Why, anything you please, my dear,' said my friend.

"'Then,' she murmured, 'I think I'll give it back to you, and take another kiss.'"

STARTING IT RIGHT.

This Woman Was Superstitious About Having Thirteen Stamps on Her Package.

"How much postage will this package require?" asked a woman at the window of the Ravenswood postal station, relates the Chicago Daily News.

"Thirteen cents," was the answer.

"Just exactly 13?"

"Yes."

"Think it would go all right?"

"Sure!"

"Wouldn't it go for 12 cents?"

"No, madam."

"Hadn't I better put 14 cents on it?"

"What for?"

"Thirteen is unlucky, you know. Wouldn't it get lost?"

"Scarcely."

"Wouldn't it be sure to fetch up at the dead-letter office?"

"Hardly."

"Some pilfering clerk would steal it?"

"Uncle Sam's clerks are honest."

"Well, that may be, but I'm not going to start that stuff away from here with a hoodoo amount of postage sticking to it. The address would rub off, it would get smashed in the mail, even if it didn't roll out of the car and get under the wheels. That's not all. If the woman to whom it is addressed discovered that it came to her home for 13 cents, she'd find fault with the goods, be cross for a week, and finally throw the whole thing into the fire. Here's another cent; make it 14 and start it right."

Didn't Get Through.

They are laughing in Washington over a rebuke that a sentry of one of the departments administered recently to the Russian ambassador's coachman.

The coachman, it appears, wished to drive his master's carriage along a roadway that for some reason was barred. When the sentry refused to let the carriage pass, the coachman remonstrated:

"I drive," he said, "ze Russian minister."

"I can't help it," returned the sentry.

"Let me t'rough," persisted the coachman. "My master is ze Count Cassini, ze ambassador extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of ze czar of all ze Russians."

"Frenchy," said the sentry, "I wouldn't let you through even if your master was a free-born American citizen."—Boston Post.

New Wheat Fields in Southwest.

What would you think if told that the unirrigated sections of Western Kansas, Eastern Colorado and Pan-handle of Texas can be counted on to produce 50,000,000 bushels of wheat annually? Yet that is what a government official predicts with reference to a new variety of that cereal imported from Russia, known as macaroni wheat. Recent experiments, as reported to the industrial department of the Santa Fe, show that this plant flourishes best where the rainfall is less than 15 inches a year. The yield per acre is equal to that of ordinary wheat, and the price received is about the same.

The Change.

"And does he do so now?" asked the bosom friend.

THE COUNTESS FABBRICOTTI.

Here is the picture of one of the greatest society beauties of Europe, and also one of the poorest. She makes no secret of her deplorable condition, but talks freely to her friends of the depleted state of her finances. Her maiden name was Anna Kingsley. Her father was Irish, her mother French. Last year rumor had it that the countess, who is divorced from her husband, was to marry either August Belmont or William C. Whitney, but nothing came of the gossip. The countess says she will have a good time while her money lasts, after that she is ready for the deluge or obscurity.

TO FIGHT THE CODLIN MOTH.

The Department of Agriculture Will Experiment with Birds in California.

Now it is the birds that are to help in the destruction of the codlin moth—that little insect that is doing so much harm to the apple orchards of California. Down at Watsonville, where the big orchards are, the ornithological department of the United States department of agriculture, under the supervision of Dr. E. L. Beele, is working in conjunction with Prof. C. W. Woodworth and Warren Smith, of the University of California, to exterminate the moth, and just now they are installing a lot of bird cages as part of the work, says a Berkeley report.

These cages, of which there are to be 12, will be large enough to envelop a fruit tree. Into them it is purposed to put 30 varieties of California birds, including canaries, bluejays and linnets, and then to watch them closely to discover upon what they feast most.

At certain times the birds will be killed and their stomachs exhaustively scrutinized by the ornithologists. In this way it can be determined accurately what the proportion of fruit the birds eat is to the insects they consume. And then from this it will be determined what birds are most destructive to the codlin moth and the other destroyers of plant life.

If the experimenters are lucky enough to find a bird that makes the codlin moth its prey, that species will be propagated in large numbers and distributed over the state. It is thought they can be kept in the orchards by attractive baits.

New York's Public Baths.

New York, with 3,437,202 inhabitants, has only one public bath, but has three others under way. London, with a population of 4,536,063, has 38.

Alaska's Riches.

Alaska's commerce last year, exclusive of gold production, reached $20,000,000, or nearly three times the amount paid for the territory.

THEFT AND CONFESSION.

Loss of Money in a Bank Discovered Through the Aid of a Priest.

In one of the downtown banks the other day the balance sheet showed $50 missing. That started trouble for the whole institution. Until nearly midnight the whole force was kept busy searching for that half century, but to no avail, reports the Pittsburg Gazette. The search continued the next day and the next, but nowhere could be found a trace of the short change. Finally it was given up, but the matter was not allowed to rest there. The loss was narrowed down to three or four clerks, and their records were thoroughly investigated. Not a trace of gambling or drinking was found, but every man in the bank who could have gotten his hands on the money felt the finger of suspicion pointing his way.

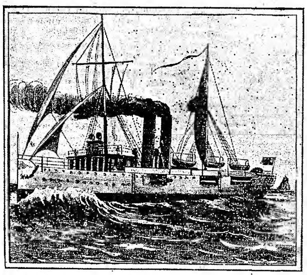
The situation was tense for nearly a week. Then one morning a Catholic clergyman called on the cashier. In the confessional he had been told by a penitent that $50 too much money had been paid him when cashing a check at the bank.

This cleared the mystery, and it did more. The investigation pending the discovery had shown the management of the bank that it had the most thoroughly regular and honorable set of employes it would be possible to accumulate—and now every man of them expects a raise in salary.

Vogue of the Peacock.

Bird fanciers are predicting a vogue for the peacock. They say that people who can afford it have been lately buying hundreds of them for their country places. Ornament is one consideration, but there is another thing that recommends the brilliant creature in a more practical way. Some one discovered not long ago that there is no watchdog equal to the peacock as a guardian against thieves and marauding tramps. Perched on the roof of an arbor or outbuilding of the estate, a peacock will announce in shrill, discordant notes that can be heard a mile away the presence of suspicious looking strangers within the grounds.

NEW UNITED STATES CRUISER GALVESTON.



The cruiser Galveston, which has recently figured in much litigation at Richmond, Va., is one of the class of ships which were begun about three years ago. She has a displacement of 3,200 tons, is 292 feet long and 44 feet in the beam. The Galveston, when ready for active service, will be heavily armed. She will carry ten five-inch guns, eight six-pounders, two one-pounders and two Colt automatic guns. Her complement will be 293 men. The builders of the Galveston got into financial trouble and their creditors sought to enjoin the navy department from launching her, but in vain.

ROUND ABOUT THE STATE.

Authority has been granted for the organization of the First National Bank of Rush City, with capital of $25,000.

A Wright county medical society was organized at Buffalo, almost all of the doctors of the county being present.

Settlers of Beltrami county report game of all kinds more plentiful this year than for many seasons past. Deer are especially numerous.

Two electricians met a horrible death at Duluth at the grounds of the Ferari Carnival. They are Moses Blewett of Duluth and George Rabischung of 312 University avenue, St. Paul.

The Cass Lake land office was opened in an informal manner. The register, receiver and two clerks were present, with a few prominent business men.

Patrolman Moses Zimmerman of the West Side police precinct, St. Paul, was beaten into insensibility by three young men. They took the policeman's club from him and beat him over the head and kicked him while he was unconscious on the sidewalk.

Mike Welsh, a section foreman at Burnett, seventeen miles from Duluth, employed by the Duluth, Missabe & Northern road, suffered the loss of his right hand while setting off giant crackers. He was brought to Duluth on a special train to enter a hospital.

The body of a man badly decomposed, having been in the water for months, probably, was found near the water power mill at Cloquet. Letters in his pocket gave his name as Otto Swanson. His drowning is supposed to have been accidental.

Wolford and Franklin Nelson, sons of Alexander Nelson, were drowned in Lake St. Croix near the Atwood A mill yards, Stillwater, while bathing. The boys were nine and ten years of age.

Despondent over his inability to secure work and brooding over repeated attacks of ill health, John Carlson, a tailor living in St. Paul, slashed his throat from ear to ear with a razor and then lay down on a couch in the parlor of his home and died.

Archie, the sixteen-months-old son of A. D. Hall, St. Paul, fell from a window, a distance of forty feet, and received serious injuries. The boy sustained no fractures, but he is thought to be hurt internally.

The fiscal year for the United States government closed June 30, and the customs receipt at the port of St. Paul amounted to $880,000. The internal revenue collections for the district of Minnesota, comprising St. Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth, were $1,465,570.62. The report of the postoffice receipts is not finished, but enough has been compiled to show an increase of $10,000 over the business of last year.

Maj. Burlingame, of Tracy, is doing a little house cleaning for the good of the city. Many business places have been operating nickel-in-the-slot machines without let or hindrance for several years. The mayor instructed the marshal to order every machine in town removed at once, and by morning they had all disappeared. Many small boys were fooling away lots of money and acquiring the gambling habit by means of them.

John M. McClintock of Duluth has undertaken to mine iron ore from under the waters of Longyear lake, in the Mesaba range, without lowering the level of the water in the lake or interfering with the riparian rights of the other owners along the shore. Just how Mr. McClintock will accomplish this he does not state, but he has taken out a prospector's lease and evidently intends to "find a way." He is county attorney of St. Louis county.

The increase of business at the Duluth land office for the fiscal year was in excess of 100 per cent. The grand total of receipts for the year was $460,147.54, as compared with $209,513.75 for the preceding fiscal year.

Mrs. Peter Becker of 116 Seventeenth avenue N., Minneapolis, is lying at the city hospital with a bad knife wound under her left arm, inflicted by her husband, with a small pocket knife.

Carl August Finnell, a St. Paul artist, who considers it a disgrace to work at anything but his art, was adjudged insane by the Ramsey county probate court. He was taken to Rochester. Finnell has figured in police court hearings several times, always being charged with non-support of his wife. It is said that during the past five years the artist has done no work except paint unsalable landscapes and has contributed only $6 to his family's support.

June ore shipments from Minnesota broke all records with a total on roads coming into Duluth from the Mesabi and Vermilion ore districts of 2,292,000 gross tons. This makes more than 5,000,000 tons for the season to July, and is more than 5 per cent above the corresponding period of 1902, which was by far the highest mark made to that time.

With the return of the Democratic party to power the strikes of organized labor would cease, as they would all have to take to the road to hunt up free soup houses.

He who prays for a return to power of the Democratic party, may be compelled to live on free soup made from the shade of a beef bone hung in a sunlight window. They used to say, during the administration of Cleveland that a young chicken hung in a window, so the shade of it came directly over the kettle made fine soup for free lunch.

A good story is going the rounds, that two republican campaigners went out to interview a threshing crew in the last presidential campaign, and all of the men was to busy at work to talk politicts, except one of whom they made the inquirey, of how they were going to vote?, and were astonished to get this reply. We will vote for Bryn, we voted for Bryn four years ago and it has been good times ever-since.

If Ezra G. Valentine desires to step into Judge Mills shoes on the railroad and warehouse commission, he can announce himself in a more popular way than to start a mud throwing campaign against Judge Mills, as the judge has a few friends in the northern part of the state that are very liable to get into the game. The weather is unfavorable at the present time for mud throwing, but we are expecting rain soon.

Eddy is strong in the seventh and ninth districts for the nomination for Governor, says The Crookston Journal, and it is the Heatwol idea to develop candidates for nomination on the state ticket in thoes two districts.

This would be in opposition to the candidacy of F. M. Eddy, who has shown in past years that he is one of the best campaigners the party has, and is undoubtedly the stongest man the party could nominate, as he has lost none of his former political strength in the northern part of the state.

The story runs that a good man died recently and of course went to the good place. As he wanted to go sight-seeing the first day, an angel guide was given him. Before long he noticed a number of persons dragging each a ball and chain as he walked. "How is this" he asked the guide. "Isn't this heven and why are there so many bad men here?" The angel smiled and replied; "Why those are not bad men; they are all good men, but they came from Minnesota and we have to chain them or they would go back—Ex.

Palaces of Waters.

The principal Palace of Waters is an immense hall which stretches in mysterious grandeur far beneath the city of Constantinople. Its roof is formed of wide spanned arches supported on massive marble columns. These stand some ten feet apart and their capitals are elaborately wrought.

This marvelous building springs from an expanse of waters which underlies the foundations of the city for miles. The length and extent have been shrouded in mystery ever since its discovery about seventy years ago, when some of the arches gave way. All attempts to explore by boat this marvel of construction have been either fatal or fruitless.

Another palace of waters was the stately Palace of Ice which was built in 1780 at the command of Anne, empress of Russia, to honor the nuptials of the Prince Galitzin and a simple peasant girl. In this novel palace bride and bridegroom were housed, in rooms of which the walls and furniture and bed were constructed wholly of frozen water.

Prosperity leads often to ambition, and ambition to disappointment.

Probate Notice.

ORDER FOR HEARING APPLICATION FOR APPOINTMENT OF ADMINISTRATOR.

State of Minnesota County of Polk } S S.

In Probate Court.

Special Term June 26th 1903.

In the Matter of the Estate of Thomas Olson Deceased.

On receiving and filing the petition of Kristi Lovdal of the County of Polk representing, among other things, that Thomas Olson late of the County of Polk in the State of Minnesota, on the 6th day of November A.D. 1899, at the County of Polk died intestate, and being an inhabitant of this County at the time of his death, leaving goods, chattels, and estate within this County, and that the said petitioner is the Mother of said deceased; and praying that administration of said estate be to Kristie Lovedal granted;

IT IS ORDERED, That said petition be heard before this Court on Saturday the 25th day of July A.D. 1903, at 10 o'clock A. M., at the Probate office in the Court House, in Crookston in said County.

AND IT IS FURTHER ORDERED, That notice of the time and place of said hearing be given to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in The Sunbeam, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Gully in said County.

Dated at Crookston this 26th day of June A.D. 1903. By the Court.

[SEAL] O. A. Thoreson,
Judge of Probate.

A STARTLING TEST.

To save a life, Dr. T. G. Merritt, of No. Mehoopany, Pa., made a startling test resulting in a wonderful cure. He writes "a patient was attacked with violent hemorrhages caused by ulceration of the stomach. I had often found Electric Bitters excellent for acute stomach and liver troubles so I prescribed them. The patient gained from the first, and has not had an attact in 14 months." Electrict Bitters are are positively guarenteed for Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Constipation and kidney troubles. Try them. Only 50c at Kronschnrbel & Bolstad.

Magnet Finds Needles.

"John, buy a magnet while you're out. Ruth has lost the old one," said the head of a big dressmaking establishment to her errand boy.

"What do you do with magnets here?" a woman who was being fitted asked.

"We find needles with them."

"How do you mean?"

"Every day it naturally happens that my forty-five assistants drop a great many needles on the floor. To stop and look for these needles would take time. They are all left lying, therefore, till the day's end, when a cleaner goes over the room with a magnet, holding it close to the floor. Every lost needle instantly, then, jumps up on the steel and in that way all are recovered in a few minutes. To recover them by any other means would take at least an hour."—Philadelphia Record.

Desert Gems.

In 1889 a hunter in the northwest of New South Wales wounded a kangaroo. The animal went off through the mulga and the salt bush at a pace too fast for the hunter to follow and was soon out of sight. The hunter was a bushman and did not despair. He followed the blood trail, hopeful of a short search and a speedy bag. At one point of the pursuit it may be that the trail grew faint and necessitated a closer inspection. Anyway the hunter stooped and picked up a piece of stone. This he examined. The red spot was not on it. It was in it. It was not blood that he saw; it was opal. Such was the beginning of the White Cliffs opal fields.

King James' Last Straw.

The stodgy faced boy at the last table in the public library reading room is having a struggle most serious. He has covered both sides of a foolscap sheet with a vague smudge over which he still labors. His twisted mouth follows the motion of his creaking pencil. Before him Greene's "Shorter History of the English People" lies open at the year 1688. Of all the two pages only so much is decipherable: "The Abdication of Jams II. The english people had born a grate deal from James 2nd but when at last he gave birth to a son they said this thing must end."—Adele Marie Shaw in World's Work.

Dangerous Smoking.

Natives of Central America are inveterate users of pimento tobacco, which they make from dried pimento berries, or allspice. It invariably gives the smoker a sore throat and often causes cancer of the tongue. The natives of South Africa are affected in a peculiar manner by the smoke from the dried leaves of the camphor plant. The smoker trembles with fright at nothing, weeps bitterly and uses all sorts of words which do not in the least express his meaning. The wild dagga, another South African plant, poisons slowly those who use it.

A Martyr to Etiquette.

In the antebellum days a charming Virginia hostess "rather than disturb her company" sat still through the long dinner in silent torture. A hornet got caught under her cape and traveled about searching for an outlet, stinging as it went. When coffee was served in the drawing room she had to "retire." Fever came on, and she was really ill, but the force of etiquette and hospitality combined had made it an occasion to die at one's post.—Good Housekeeping.

Nothing Dangerous About It.

A gentleman complained to his coachmen of the grooms' scarcity of attendance at church. He thought they might go at least once in a day.

"Yes, sir," replied the coachman, "that's what I tell 'em. I say: 'Look at me. I go twice every Sunday, and what harm does it do me?'"—Stray Stories.

"Very. Why, her trousseau alone cost over $6,000!"—Judge.

Measuring Hides.

Hers the Credit.

"There is one thing I like about your husband—he never hurries you when getting ready to go out with him."

"Very little credit is due to him for that, my dear. Whenever I see that I am not likely to be ready in time I simply hide his hat or his gloves and let him hunt for them up and down until I have finished dressing."

The British government has proposed a plan for reducing the number of Irish members of parliament. Perhaps it is thought that this would be less cumbersome and more satisfactory than sending them to prison.

Life in Lapland.

In Lapland the crime which, after murder, is punished with the great severity is that of marrying a girl against the wishes of her parents. When a suitor makes his appearance he says nothing to the maiden, who often does not know who he is, but her parents inform her that she is sought in marriage. Shortly afterward, on a day appointed, the girl, her parents, friends and suitor all meet together at a feast, and the young man and maiden are placed opposite, so that they can look at each other freely and can talk with comfort. After the meal is over the company repair to an open space, where "the race for a wife" is run. The usual distance is about a quarter of a mile, and the girl is placed a third of the distance from the starting point. If she be fleet of foot she can easily reach the goal before her suitor, and in that case he may never trouble her again. If, however, he has found favor in her eyes, all she has to do is to lag somewhat in her flight so that he may overtake her. If she desires to intimate to him that his love for her is returned she may run a little way and then turn with open arms to accept him.

English For French Tongues.

Persons who have worried through a "French Manual" may get some satisfaction from the thought that with their own language they are revenged upon the Parisian. "Methods Avec Prononciation" is a little book which makes straight the way of the English language for French tongues. Does one wish to say, "How is it, miss; one so charming and pretty walking alone?" (which, of course, would be one of the first remarks a French traveler would have occasion to make) it is only necessary to consult the "Nouvelles Methode:" "Aou laite, miss; oueune so tcherminngue annde pretti ouakinngue alaune?" If the traveler goes to the theater the men at the box office may say, "Oui have onli orchestre stalls laifte, beute allow me tou rimarque sat se are se best sitce for sindgeule dgenntlemene." Evidently "th" is given up as a bad job, and "j" is as difficult for the Frenchman as for the German, though a German manual gives John Bull as "Dschonn Bool."

Great Mushroom Garden In France.

The strangest of the underground worlds in France which I visited was one devoted to the raising of mushrooms. Its limits seemed unbounded, as indeed they were, for it pierced the hillsides in every direction. We entered through an opening under an orchard of cherry trees. During "harvest time" a crop is gathered every twenty-four hours. Three men, with their great baskets, make the rounds of this underground farm every morning, and every day in the year can count on an immense crop, which they ship to the large cities near by and even several miles away. The discolored and inferior mushrooms are sent to the canneries but for his best growth the producer receives only 20 cents a pound.—Scribner's Magazine.

Flamingoes' Tongues.

The beastly Vitellius, as Gibbon calls him, spent at least six millions of money on table in as many months. He invented, or his cook invented for him, a dish which he designated "the Shield of Minerva." One of its principal ingredients was flamingoes' tongues, of which both Pliny and Martial speak in enthusiastic terms. Dampier says that the flamingoes have "large tongues, and near the root is a piece of fat which is accounted a great dainty." When Captain Owen was surveying the east coast of Africa his sailors shot down hundreds of these beautiful birds in order, with an extravagance worthy of Vitellius, to make a dish of the tongues alone.

Historic Albania.

Albania lies 180 miles on the Adriatic sea and is fifty to a hundred miles wide. It was formed originally, says William Jackson Armstrong in his "Heroes of Defeat," from part of Ilyris, all of Epirus and part of Macedonia in the eleventh century. From this territory sprang Pyrrhus, who defeated the Roman invader; Philip and Alexander of Macedon, the conquerors; Perseus, whose fame as a soldier covered the world sixty years after Christ, and Skanderbeg, who for forty years defeated armies sent against him by the Turk. Ancient Albania lay in Asia, just east of the Caucasus.

The Whole Thing.

"Then you've been to Niagara?"

"Yes. I was quietly married last Tuesday week, and the next day we reached Niagara. Soon as we got there I started out to see the falls with my wife."

"Magnificent, eh?"

"You bet! You should have seen all the other men turning around to look at her as she passed."—Philadelphia Press.

One Had To Die

Duel to Death Between Two Indians at Standing Rock Agency.

In Full Panoply of War Crooked Neck and Shaven Head Ended a Feud—Rifle Against Shotgun.

A duel to the death between two human beings, a duel planned and prepared for and not a suddenly precipitated conflict, is a peculiarly thrilling and awful spectacle, one that chains the attention of the beholder and binds him fast by the horrible fascination of it. Such a duel took place between two Indians at the Standing Rock agency many years ago, and the man who witnessed it has not yet forgotten the smallest detail of that sanguinary fight.

It was beef killing day at the agency in the year 1876, but a few weeks after the Custer massacre. Long point, on the eastern bank of the Missouri, opposite Fort Yates, was covered with a kaleidoscopic crowd of Sioux, to whom the butchery of sixscore huge steers strongly appealed.

CROOKED NECK BRANDISHED HIS SHOTGUN.

At that day and date the Indians were allowed to shoot a fortnight's supply of cattle themselves. Later soldiers were detailed for the work in order to abate cruelty to the animals and danger to all residents within the radius of a mile.

On the morning in question it was evident to the agent and his employees, whose presence at the killing was necessary to secure a proper allotment of the beef as between tribes and families, that something more than usually exciting was affecting the Indians. There were four tribes of Sioux at Standing Rock—Lower Yanktonnais, Upper Yanktonnais, Uncapapa and Blackfeet—and generally these mixed together without thought of tribal relations or jealousies, as do nationalities on Broadway, New York. This day, however, the Uncapapas and the Blackfeet were divided and even to the inexperienced eye were hostile.

Having finished the distribution of the divided carcasses and sick with sights, sounds and smells that told of nothing but brutality and savagery, the agent was about to take a boat across the Missouri when sundry fierce war whoops bade him pause on top of the corral fence and look interestedly whence they came and where, a hundred yards away, fully 250 Indians, men, women and children, were rapidly separating into two groups, with a lane fifty feet wide between them.

Into the head of this lane danced a bronzed figure, thrusting aloft a double barreled shotgun and yelling at the top of his voice. At the foot appeared a quieter but no less ferocious warrior armed with a Winchester rifle of the old magazine type, caliber 45.

How were they dressed?

Not at all, unless you call a coup feather each, some daubs of yellow, green and blue paint on their parting, face and breast and a very much abbreviated and visibly soiled breech clout a toilet. Their wonted garb had been hastily doffed.

By this time the farmer of the agency, [illegible] and an old stager on the plains, had climbed to a seat beside the agent and in a rather uninterested tone said:

"Guess them fellers intends to do some shootin' to kill. There's been bad blood atwixt 'em for most a year. Now they're going to try to let some of it out."

"I conceive it to be my duty to put a stop to this killing," was the agent's comment. "Why, bless my soul! It's murder!"

"I conceive it to be my duty," retorted the farmer, "to purvent any sich durn fool proceedin', 'ceptin' you're plum anxious to furnish the corpse yourself."

As the farmer, to emphasize his protest, seized the agent's arm in an unshakable grasp, the only thing remaining was to watch the proceedings with such composure as could be [illegible] to one who had left the Atlantic seaboard but a few short weeks before. While the conversation between the farmer and the agent was proceeding, the Indian opponents had been dancing forward and back along the lane and across it in zigzag fashion, for all the world as if they were setting to partners in an old fashioned contra dance.

The man with the shotgun was named Crooked Neck, and he was a Blackfoot, while his opponent, an Uncapapa, usually called Shaven Head, was a noted scout in the employ of the government and appeared on the rolls as Usnsuppi (Good Tamed Metal). Their hostility grew out of the fact that Shaven Head had stolen Crooked Neck's favorite wife, and the immediate outbreak arose out of what some of Shaven Head's people claimed was an unfair allotment of beef.

Of the two Shaven Head looked far the more dangerous, while Crooked Neck did the most yelling. Possibly the latter felt his disadvantage. His ten gauge was loaded with buckshot rammed hard enough to scatter at the end of the hundred yards more or less that separated the fighters, but he only had two shots as against the fifteen Shaven Head had at his command in the barrel or the magazine of his Winchester.

Suddenly Shaven Head stopped capering, drew his rifle to his shoulder, fired and missed. While he was throwing a cartridge from magazine to barrel Crooked Neck ran toward him to within eighty yards and let fly with one barrel. He got results. As is usual with the Sioux, Shaven Head wore his hair in two long cues, one resting in front of each shoulder. One of these was amputated close to the scalp by Crooked Neck's shot, and a tiny stream of blood that soon showed itself on Shaven Head's breast proved that the skin at least had been abrased.

Again the yelling and the dancing accompanied, be it well understood, by the yells of spectators whose savage blood was fairly boiling with excitement. The shrieks of the squaws had a peculiarly appalling note, and high above the unmusical clamor could be heard the long continued scream of the bone of contention, the wife Shaven Head had stolen from his opponent.

Crooked Neck now had but one shot left. If he missed he was at the mercy of his antagonist, and mercy, strained or unstrained, had no part in Shaven Head's makeup. The shotgun fighter seemed to redouble his activity and beyond question made of himself an exceedingly difficult target. Three times the Winchester spoke apparently without effect, although later it was discovered that one bullet had gone through the upper muscles of Crooked Neck's left leg. Of course Shaven Head was doing some ground and lofty steps on his own account, thus disarranging his aim.

The end came suddenly. Shaven Head pretended to stumble and fell partially forward. Instantly Crooked Neck fired his remaining barrel, but fired it at the air. The Uncapapa had side stepped in a fashion that would have made Corbett green with envy.

Seeing that he had missed, Crooked Neck turned to run, but after him in long leaps came his foe. Two shots in quick succession, and Crooked Neck was on the ground a corpse. The fatal bullet went through his brain, and he was shot from the rear, a detail, by the way, which gave his friends little concern.

If these duelists had been white the spectacular part of the affair would have ended with the death of one or other of the contestants. Not so with the savage Sioux. Before any one could have counted five the victor had fetched the body, placed his foot thereon and struck it with the barrel of his rifle.

TWO SHOTS RANG OUT IN QUICK SUCCESSION.

This was the "coup," or final blow that completed Shaven Head's triumph and made him truly conqueror.

Probably with foreknowledge of what was coming the spectators ceased their yells as soon as Crooked Neck fell, and after delivering the "coup" Shaven Head set up his chant of victory.

No notice was taken of the affair either by the military or the civil authorities.

A Bismarck Incident.

It used to be the privilege of Austria's representative at any conference of representatives of the German states to smoke, the others refraining. This was supposed to be an acknowledgment of Austria's supremacy. At the first conference that Bismarck attended as Prussia's representative he began to puff smoke across the conference table as soon as the Austrian diplomat lit up. That set everybody present to smoking on equal terms, and Austria's supremacy got a blow.

Happiness.

We are forever children. When we are infants we cry for the moon; when we are grown up we cry for happiness. And we always cry for the wrong thing because we never know what is good for us. It is a man's lot to mistake his wants and to be disappointed. It is his purpose in life always to grasp for the useless thing, to strive for that which has no merit, to hope for that which perishes as soon as he holds it in his hands. We have our ideal of happiness, but we endeavor to realize it in ways which are not good for us.

Happiness, as we perceive it in this terrestrial sphere, is a saddening illusion. It never lasts, because it cannot. It never satisfies, because it is not made to satisfy. The land of El Dorado forever remains east of the sun and west of the moon—that is, nowhere. It is the fatal morgana, the mirage of the desert of life. Happiness remains happiness while it is an illusion. Mortality is not made to hold and to enjoy it. It is mortality's lot to chase jack o' lanterns—to cry for the moon, which cannot be obtained because it hangs so high up in the heavens.—Valley Magazine.

The Last of the Ruffs.

In 1762 the rage for ruffs, such as are seen on many monumental effigies, began to decline. A writer in the London Chronicle of that year says of gentlemen's dress, "Their cuffs entirely cover their wrists, and only the edges of their ruffles are to be seen."

It is said that a distaste for ruffs was first created so far back as 1613, when a woman named Turner wore them on her trial for the murder by poison of Sir Thomas Overbury. The French revolution of 1789 much influenced British fashion, and the picturesque cocked hat and ruffles then gave way generally to round hats and small cuffs.

The period of their final disuse cannot be easily determined, as men of old fashioned or eccentric habits have worn ruffled shirt fronts within quite recent memory similar to those which, according to Planche's "History of British Costume," originated in the seventeenth century.

Lincoln's Fees.

As a rule, Abraham Lincoln's fees were less than those of other lawyers of his circuit. Justice Davis once remonstrated with him and insisted that he was doing a grave injustice to his associates at the bar by charging so little for his services. From 1850 to 1860 his income varied from $2,000 to $3,000, and even when he was recognized as one of the ablest lawyers of the state his fee book frequently shows charges of $3, $5 and $1 for advice, although he never went into court for less than $10. During that period he was at the height of his power and popularity, and lawyers of less standing and talent charged several times those amounts. But avarice was the least of his faults.—"The True Abraham Lincoln."

What He Is Worth.

"What a curious habit we have," remarked the street car philosopher, "of saying that a man is worth so and so many thousands of dollars. I know men who have many dollars who, judged from any reasonable standard that I know, are not worth anything at all. It is refreshing to hear occasionally of men who do happen to be worth a great deal even though they are rich and who are anxious that people should forget they have money and think of them only for their qualities. All the same, it always gives me an unpleasant turn when I see a man's worth put down in dollars." — New York Commercial Advertiser.

Badly Balanced.

"I am a self made man," said the proud individual.

"Well, you are all right except as to your head," commented the other part of the conversation.

"How's that?"

"The part you talk with is out of proportion to the part you think with."—San Francisco Wasp.

A Pessimist.

Little Sister—Puttin' us out of the room just—boo, hoo—cause there's company!

Little Brother—But maybe they won't eat all the cake.

Little Sister—Oh, you can't trust—boo, hoo—company with cake!—Puck.

An Even Score.

"What is your objection to him, papa?"

"Why, the fellow can't make enough money to support you."

"But neither can you."

A Souvenir.

"A souvenir," said the thoughtful man thoughtfully, "is something that we consider to be worth a whole lot more than its value."—Exchange.

The Publishers' Error.

"The publishers told Arthur that he would have to rewrite a good portion of his book before they could bring it out."

"Humph! I should think they would have had him rewrite some of the bad portions."—Kansas City Journal.

Mutual Diagnosis.

"What an awful voice that man's got," said the manager, who was listening to the throaty tenor.

"Call that a voice?" said his friend. "It's a disease!"—Punch.

Thwarted.

LASSOED A CATTLE THIEF.

How a Women Overcame Two Border Desperadoes, Killing One.

The people in the San Joaquin valley of California have never ceased telling of a deed of rare bravery enacted by Mrs. Victor Daniels some twenty-five miles southwest from Bakersfield some years ago. Her husband, with great difficulty and constant watchfulness, had acquired a bunch of cows, about fifty in all, and was endeavoring to start a little herd in order to rescue his family from the poverty which hung over the claim. Mrs. Daniels had the herding of them as well as the care of the house. One day when the husband had gone twenty miles to the store she was compelled to leave the cattle grazing while she looked after a sick baby at home. Suddenly she saw two men ride from behind the foothills and start the cattle off full canter, abducting the whole bunch. She wasted not a minute, but, mounting her broncho, was after them.

The men probably thought themselves undiscovered and in the bustle of hurrying on the stock did not hear the pattering hoofs of the pursuer's pony as she came cantering up behind. Suddenly one of them gave a yell and tumbled backward off his saddle, with the noose of a lariat tight around his throat. Frightened, the other turned to see a furious woman facing him.

THE ROBBER TUMBLED BACKWARD.

"What are you doing?" she demanded.

"Who are you?" he responded gruffly.

"I own these cattle, and you will help me drive them back where you got them."

As she held a cocked revolver toward his head, he decided to submit and, with her following closely, rode around the scattered herd and turned their heads homeward. For three miles the stock was driven, and then, with a warning not to look backward, the depredator was dismissed. He fled without a backward glance. His companion, choked to death and with neck broken, was found among the chaparral, but there was never inquiry as to the manner of his taking off. It was enough to know that he had been engaged in cattle stealing.

Naval Discipline.

The force of naval discipline is shown in this true story of the captain who, fatally smitten with cholera, was being taken ashore to the hospital. The story is told in "Sport in the Navy."

The captain's men were rowing as slowly and gently as possible in order not to disturb him. The dying captain beckoned the midshipman in charge of the boat and whispered these last words:

"Ten days' black list for the crew for not giving way!"

Sleep Methods.

It is said that hours of sleep can be regulated by two simple methods: First, never allow yourself to be awakened, but insist on being undisturbed until you awaken naturally; second, get up the minute you are awake. The hours of sleep will soon become adapted to the requirements of your constitution.

The Serpent That Talked Like a Man

In John Ashton's "Curious Creatures of Zoology" there is a quotation from "a little Latine booke printed at Vienna in the yeare 1551" which tells a most wonderful story. Ashton quotes as follows: "There was found in a mowe or rycke of corn almost as many snakes, adders and other serpentes as there was sheafes, so as no one sheaf could be removed but there presently appeared a heape of ougly and fierce serpentes. The countrie men determyned to set fire upon the barne and so attempted to do, but in vaine, for the straw would take no fire, although they laboured with all their witts and policye to burn them up.

"At last there appeared unto them at the top of the heap a huge great serpente, which lifted up his head and spake with a man's voyce to the countrie men, saying, 'Cease to prosecute your devise, for you shall not be able to accomplish our burning, for wee were not bredde by nature, neither came we here of our owne accord, but were sent by God to take vengence on the sinnes of men.'"

Ashton leaves us in the dark as to what the "countrie" men did, but it is natural to suppose that they surrendered at once.

Pictures In Stone.

Shakespeare could "find tongues in trees, books in the running brooks, sermons in stones and good in everything," but he fails to mention the possibility of finding a picture drawn by nature in a stone. In several of the ancient as well as modern scientific journals we read of lines and markings in certain stone formations, particularly agates, which bear striking resemblances to the outlines of men, animals, landscapes, etc.

One of these curiosities now preserved in the museum of the Vatican is a perfect likeness of a crowned king. Many of these representations are so lifelike that they have been mistaken for medallion portraits. We read accounts of several of these wonders in Albertus. One plainly shows a man in the attitude of running, another is a perfect figure of the good St. Jerome, but the most remarkable of all is an agate containing a representation of Apollo surrounded by the nine muses.

A Persian Story.

There is a story in Persian literature of a certain poet who came before a great man and praised him very ornately. The rich man was very pleased and said: "Ready money I have not; nevertheless there is in my granaries very much corn. If you come tomorrow I will give you some." The poet went to his own house and on the morrow presented himself to his patron. The rich man asked him, "Why have you come?" He said: "Yesterday you promised to give me corn. For this reason am I come." The rich man said: "A most wonderful fool thou art. What you said to me gave me pleasure. What I have said to you equally pleased you. Why, then, should I give you corn?" The poet was covered with shame and departed.

Measuring Hides.

The ancient tanner paid an expert high wages to guess at the contents of his hides when sold by measure. Today an unskilled workman hands the irregular shaped pieces to a little machine that looks something like a table with a double top which, quicker than the mind of the expert can guess it, reckons with exactness the square contents in both the metric and standard systems.

Here the Credit.

"There is one thing I like about your husband—he never hurries you when getting ready to go out with him."

"Very little credit is due to him for that, my dear. Whenever I see that I am not likely to be ready in time I simply hide his hat or his gloves and let him hunt for them up and down until I have finished dressing."

Serpent Worship In India.

Serpent worship, once very widely diffused, survives in India. Sometimes when Hindoos find a cobra in some crevice in the wall of their house it will often be reverenced, fed and propitiated, and if fear of the death of some one bitten by it induces them to remove it they will handle it tenderly and let it loose in some field. When Hindoos are bitten, they have far more confidence in their magic spell or "muntra" than in any medicine, even if they do not scruple to make use of medical aid.

Cheese.

Cheeses come under three general heads, whole milk, skim or sour milk and whole milk and cream. The ripening of cheese, upon which depends its flavor, is due to the action of bacteria, which are ever present in milk; also in the rennet which is used in the manufacture. Cheese which has been improperly handled is apt to accumulate deleterious bacteria. Cheese has great nutritive value. It yields nearly three times the amount of [illegible]

How to Make Cloth Waterproof.

Ordinary cloth may be made waterproof by the following treatment: Put half a pound of sugar of lead and half a pound of alum in a pail of soft water. Stir this at intervals until it becomes clear. Then pour it off into another pail, put the cloth or garment into it and let it stand an entire day, twenty-four hours. Then hang up to dry without wringing. Garments treated thus, it is said, can be worn in the wildest storm of wind and rain without the wearer getting even damp. The rain hangs in globules upon the cloth, and cloth that is waterproof is better and more healthy than rubber goods.

It is always safe to learn, even from our enemies; never safe to instruct, even our friends.—Colton.

Reading the Bible.

How long will it take a man to read the Old Testament, with its 592,489 words, or the 181,[illegible] words of the New Testament? And how long to read the 773,692 words of both?

A man can read understandingly [illegible] words every minute. By hurrying a man can read 160 words or possibly more. I will assume that a man can read critically—that is, carefully and understandingly—at least sixty words a minute. That is slow reading, being only 3,600 words an hour. Suppose a man should devote an hour a day to the Bible.

At this rate he would read 108,000 words in thirty days, or in a month's time. He would therefore read the Old Testament in less than six months and he would finish the New Testament in less than two months.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

Home Duties

The real heroines of every day are in our homes. Frequently, however, it is a mistaken and useless heroism.

Women seem to listen to every call of duty except the supreme one that tells them to guard their health. How much harder the daily tasks become when some derangement of the female organs makes every movement painful and keeps the nervous system unstrung? Irritability takes the place of happiness and amiability; and weakness and suffering takes the place of health and strength. As long as they can drag themselves around, women continue to work and perform their household duties. They have been led to believe that suffering is necessary because they are women. What a mistake!

The use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will banish pain and restore happiness. Don't resort to strong stimulants or narcotics when this great strengthening, healing remedy for women is always within reach.

FREE MEDICAL ADVICE TO WOMEN.

If there is anything in your case about which you would like special advice, write freely to Mrs. Pinkham. No man will see your letter. She can surely help you, for no person in America has such a wide experience in treating female ills as she has had. She has helped hundreds of thousands of women back to health. Her address is Lynn, Mass., and her advice is free. You are very foolish if you do not accept her kind invitation.

For proof read the symptoms, suffering and cure recited in the following letters:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I wish to express to you the great benefit I have derived from your advice and the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. My trouble was female weakness in its worst form and I was in a very bad condition. I could not perform my household duties, my back ached, I was extremely nervous, and I could not eat or sleep, and the bearing-down pains were terrible. My husband spent hundreds of dollars to get me well, and all the medicine that the doctors prescribed failed to do me any good; I resorted to an operation which the physician said was necessary to restore me to health, but I suffered more after it than I did before; I had hemorrhages of the womb that nothing could seem to stop.

"I noticed one of your advertisements and wrote you for advice. I received your reply and carefully followed all instructions. I immediately began to get stronger, and in two weeks was about the house. I took eight bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and continued following your advice, and to-day I am a well woman. Your remedies and help are a Godsend to suffering women, and I cannot find words to thank you for what you have done for me."—MRS. LOTTIE V. NAYLOR, 1328 N. J. Ave., N.W., Washington, D. C.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I write to tell you what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me.

"I was suffering with falling of the womb and could hardly drag about, but after taking five bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was completely cured. I am now a well woman and able to do all my work.

"I think your medicine one of the best remedies in the world."—MRS. J. M. LEE, 141 Lyndal St., Newcastle, Pa.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done a great deal for me. I suffered so much from falling of the womb and all the troubles connected with it. I doctored for years with doctors and other remedies but received only temporary relief.

"I began taking your medicine, and had not taken it long before I was feeling better. My husband said that I should keep right on taking it as long as it gave me relief from my suffering, as I could not expect to be cured by one or two bottles. I did so and am now able to be on my feet and work hard all day, and go to bed and rest at night. Thanks to your Vegetable Compound I am certainly grateful for the relief it gave me. It is the mother's great friend. I would not be without it in my house, for when I feel tired or out of sorts I take a few doses and feel all right.

"I would recommend your medicine to all tired mothers, and especially to those suffering as I was."—MRS. R. F. CHAMBERS, Bennet, Neb.

NERVE WORN KIDNEYS.

Doan's Kidney Pills make freedom from kidney trouble possible. They carry a kind of medication to the kidneys that brings a bright ray of hope to desperate cases.

Aching backs are eased. Hip, back, and loin pains overcome. Swelling of the limbs and dropsy signs vanish.

LOCK HAVEN, PA.—Mrs. L. W. Ammumen writes: "A few weeks ago I sent for a trial box of Doan's Kidney Pills for myself, and they did all they are said to do. My husband was kicked last fall by a horse and badly hurt—his hip was fractured—and after he recovered he was in such misery that he could hardly walk, and to stoop caused him such distress that he thought he would have to quit work—also, it affected his bladder, and he was unable to make his water without so much distress. I insisted on his getting a box of your pills and trying them so I went to Mason's Drug Store and got a box. The first box helped him so much that I got the second and also the third, and now he is entirely well."—Mrs. L. W. Ammemen, Lock Haven, Pa.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

All Records Broken.

Sec. E. W. Randall, of the Minnesota State Fair, has announced the official entry list for the State Fair of 1903, and is again able to say that all records have been broken, as the list surpasses that of last year by more than 30 horses.

Over 260 horses have been entered for the fair of 1903 as against 230 in 1902. When last year's entry list was announced, it was regarded as about the biggest thing that could ever be expected at the state fair meet, but it is now shown that the popularity of the Minnesota State Fair is such that an even greater list is forthcoming upon the announcement of the race program for 1903. Horsemen know that the management of the Minnesota race meet is absolutely fair in every particular, that purses are paid promptly and that the horses will be exhibited before enormous crowds of people. They also know that the track is a splendid one on which many records have been broken.

In detail the race entry list which appears below, is a remarkable one. Not a race in all the list of thousand-dollar purses has less than ten entries, while the numbers range up to twenty-eight. The great 2:21 class trotting race for a purse of $5,000 has twenty-eight entries, while the 2:13 class pacing $5,000 race has the astounding number of forty-one entries. It is believed that no race in the West has ever had this many entries, and this will be the greatest event ever seen on a Western race track. Horses are entered for this contest from Manitoba to Texas, and from California to Georgia.

The completion of this entry list assures a great racing meet at the next Minnesota State Fair, and as the races are the center and chief attraction of the grand stand entertainment, it may now be said that there is no doubt of a most successful amusement program at the fair of 1903. The fair opens Aug. 31 and closes Sept. 15.

Stabbed.

James Mackie, proprietor of the Mackie barber shop, was probably fatally stabbed in the right breast by one of the proprietors of a skin game which was operated at Luverne during the celebration of the Fourth.

Mackie had watched the game for some time, and after seeing a farmer drop about $30 he asked the man running it why he did not give the man a chance for his money. Hot words followed, and one of the men on the outside, who was capping for the concern, pushed through the crowd to Mackie and, drawing a dagger, deliberately plunged it into his breast.

He than attempted to escape in the crowd, but was grabbed by bystanders and arrested by Officer Bert Benton. The knife entered the right breast, penetrating the lung and inflicting a serious wound.

Owing to the serious condition of the injured man, his assailant will not be given a hearing until there is decided change in his condition.

The prisoner gave his name as G. Wright, and stated that he lived in Minneapolis. Further than this he refused to talk. When he was searched, something over $2,000 in bills were found upon him.

The St. Paul Carnival.

For the elaborate Summer Carnival in process of preparation in St. Paul, $15,000.00 is being expended by the committee on substantial booths and buildings alone. A brilliantly illuminated arch and Court of Honor mark the approach to the Carnival, thence will follow several hundred elaborate mercantile and manufacturing displays. The location is central and beautiful, just fronting the new state capitol. About midway, the street opens into St. Paul's new baseball park, where the delectable Jabour shows and special attractions imported from various parts of the world will hold entranced the interested spectator. Fireworks on a magnificent scale will illumine the entire street every evening. Excursion rates will be granted by all the railroads on July 28 and 30, Aug. 3 and 5.

News Notes.

At South Stillwater lightning struck the William Kaiser box factory, but the flames were subdued by the village fire department and the crew at the Tozer & Nolan mill before much damage was done.

Minnesota will receive 1,616 Krag-Jorgensen rifles from the United States government, one for every enlisted man in the twenty-seven companies of infantry and the company of engineers. The number has been ascertained from the reports of the regular army officers who inspected the Minnesota guard this spring. Counting the artillery, they found 135 officers and 1,846 men in the state guard.

Red Wing can boast of counting among its manufactured products an automobile or motor car. It is a beauty, and of mechanical workmanship and finish that will stand comparison with any factory in existence.

The bureau of forestry has sent eight men to study white pine of northern Minnesota, and they will devote three months to the work in the neigboorhood of the Cloquet river. The main idea to be arrived at is whether a second growth of the trees can be successful.

The dairy and food commission prosecuted three grocers in Minneapolis for selling adulterated food. One was fined $10 and costs for selling spurious pepper, another $10 for selling jam mixed with glucose, and the third $25 for disposing of vinegar diluted with water.

A Good Story.

Frederika, Ia., July 13th.—Mr. A. S. Grover, of this place, tells an interesting story showing how sick people may regain their health if they will only be guided by the experience of others. He says:

"I had a very bad case of Kidney Trouble, which affected my urinary organs so that I had to get up every hour of the night. I could not retain my urine and my feet and limbs began to bloat up. My weight was quickly running down.

"After I had tried many things in vain, I began to use Dodd's Kidney Pills, a medicine which had cured some other very bad cases.

"This remedy has done wonders for me. I have gained eight pounds in two months. The bloat has all gone from my feet and legs, and I don't have to get up at night. I took in all about ten boxes before I was all sound."

Those who suffer as did Mr. Grover can make no mistake in taking Dodd's Kidney Pills, for they are a sure, safe and permanent cure for all Kidney and urinary disorders.

Supreme Court Sustains the Foot-Ease Trade-Mark.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Justice Laughlin, in Supreme Court, has granted a permanent injunction, with costs, against Paul B. Hudson and others, of New York City, restraining them from making or selling a foot powder which the court declares is an imitation and infringement on "Foot-Ease," now so largely advertised and sold over the country. The owner of the trade-mark, "Foot-Ease," is Allen S. Olmsted, of Le Roy, N. Y., and the decision in this suit upholds his trade-mark and renders all parties liable who fraudulently attempt to profit by the extensive "Foot-Ease" advertising. Similar suits will be brought against others who are now infringing on the Foot-Ease trade-mark rights.

SUFFERING WOMEN

Tired, Nervous, Aching, Trembling, Sleepless, Bloodless---Pe-ru-na Renovates, Regulates, Restores---Many Prominent Women Endorse Pe-ru-na.

AMERICA is the land of nervous women.

The great majority of nervous women are so because they are suffering from some form of female disease.

Mrs. Emma Mitchell, 520 Louisiana street, Indianapolis, Ind., writes:

"Peruna has certainly been a blessing in disguise to me, for when I first began taking it for troubles peculiar to the sex and a generally worn out system, I had little faith.

"For the past five years I have rarely been without pain, but Peruna has changed all this, and in a very short time. I think I had only taken two bottles before I began to recuperate very quickly, and seven bottles made me well. I do not have headache or backache any more, and have some interest in life. I give all credit where it is due, and that is to Peruna."—Emma Mitchell.

By far the greatest number of female troubles are caused directly by catarrh. They are catarrh of the organ which is affected. These women despair of recovery. Female trouble is so common, so prevalent, that they accept it as almost inevitable. The greatest obstacle in the way of recovery is that they do not understand that it is catarrh which is the source of their illness. In female complaint, ninety-nine cases out of one hundred are nothing but catarrh. Peruna cures catarrh wherever located.

Chronic invalids who have languished for years on sick beds with some form of female disease begin to improve at once after beginning Dr. Hartman's treatment.

Among the many prominent women who recommend Peruna are:—Belva Lockwood, of Washington, D. C.; Mrs. Col. Hamilton, of Columbus, Ohio; Mrs. F. E. Warren, wife of U. S. Senator Warren, of Wyoming.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

HAIR GROWTH

Promoted by Shampoos of Cuticura Soap

And Dressings of Cuticura the Great Skin Cure

Purest, Sweetest, Most Effective Remedies for Skin, Scalp and Hair.

This treatment at once stops falling hair, removes crusts, scales and dandruff, destroys hair parasites, soothes irritated, itching surfaces, stimulates the hair follicles, loosens the scalp skin, supplies the roots with energy and nourishment, and makes the hair grow upon a sweet, wholesome, healthy scalp when all else fails.

Millions of women now rely on Cuticura Soap assisted by Cuticura Ointment, the great skin cure, for preserving, purifying and beautifying the skin, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales and dandruff, and the stopping of falling hair, for softening, whitening and soothing red, rough and sore hands, for baby rashes, itchings and chafings, for annoying irritations, or too free or offensive perspiration, for ulcerative weaknesses, and many sanative, antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves, as well as for all the purposes of the toilet and nursery.

Cuticura remedies are the standard skin cures and humour remedies of the world. Bathe the affected parts with hot water and Cuticura Soap, to cleanse the surface of crusts and scales and soften the thickened cuticle. Dry, without hard rubbing, and apply Cuticura Ointment freely, to allay itching, irritation and inflammation, and soothe and heal, and, lastly, in the severer forms, take Cuticura Resolvent, to cool and cleanse the blood. A single set is often sufficient to cure the most torturing, disfiguring skin, scalp and blood humours, from pimples to scrofula, from infancy to age, when all else fails.

Sold throughout the world. Cuticura Resolvent, 50c. (in form of Chocolate Coated Pills, 25c. per vial of 60), Ointment, 50c., Soap, 25c. CROWN PRINCE GEORGE OF SERVIA.

Until a few weeks ago this bright youngster was plain George Karageorgevitch, but now he is heir-presumptive to the somewhat shaky throne of Servia. He was educated along Russian lines from his infancy, and this was the chief reason why Russia placed no obstacles in the way of recognizing King Peter. By those that know him the young prince is described as a lively boy, of excellent principles, and unless the corruption which prevails in the political circles of Belgrade proves too potent a temptation the next king of the unhappy little kingdom may be able to rehabilitate it in the esteem of the nations.

FRESH AIR DISLIKED.

Where Clothes and Fuel Are Scarce This Has Oftentimes Been the Case.

The theory that the necessity of excluding from houses the injurious night air is the cause the world over of the practice of poor ventilation will not hold. It is at least not the sole nor the chief reason of the prejudice against fresh air, says American Medicine.

Manifestly it does not obtain for countries in which there is no mosquito. In cold climates, and especially in the winter season, the theory has no applicability, and another explanation must be found.

This is, we believe, the necessity that exists, especially among the vast majority of the poor, to economize warmth. A large portion of the peasants of France to-day secure this economy by keeping their domestic animals at night in the combined house and stable.

In arctic climates and in winter even in temperate zones, and especially in previous centuries, the securing of sufficient clothing and saving the loss of warmth has doubtless been a chief cause of the universal fear of ventilation.

In this way to-day in some countries medical college lecture rooms get on without the expense of fuel by utilizing the foul, but warm exhalations of the bodies of hundreds of students, who in anger cry out against a door ajar or a crack in a window.

The greatest and best remedial agent in tuberculosis and many other devitalizing diseases is fresh air, by night or by day, ever fresh air.

Birch Bark Postals.

A pretty fancy, in vogue just now among the summer residents in the mountains, is to take a strip of birch bark and cut it up into the dimensions of postal cards, stamping and sending the same to town friends. The mails accept these little missives which, properly directed and bearing a friendly message on the reverse side, constitute an agreeable variation of the souvenir postal card.

AUSTRIA'S STATE SECRETS.

They Are Placed for Security in Iron Rooms of House Built Expressly for Them.

The Austrian imperial archives have been lately conveyed from the Hofburg to the great house built for them adjoining the foreign office. They will later on be opened for public inspection, from the most ancient documents down to those of 1840, says the London Telegraph. The rooms containing the secret archives are of ironwork, each story being completely separated from the next one, so that neither fire nor water can penetrate. Hose supplying abundance of water is fixed in every direction, the windows can neither be melted by fire nor destroyed by blows and the ornamental ironwork before each window can be unlocked in case of emergency.

It is remembered when Napoleon Bonaparte invaded Austria and established himself at Schonbrunn with what terrible haste the secret archives were carried off to Buda-Pesth to the Ofen stronghold, these being the first things secured when all else was left. Among the iron cases stands a plain wooden box which will not be opened for 50 years.

It contains the letters and papers of the late Crown Prince Rudolph hurriedly collected at Mayerling on the day of the disaster and placed in a box bought in the adjoining village.

Why Nations Wear Colors.

Did it ever occur to you that the bunch of colored ribbons you wear in your buttonhole—or pinned on your dress, if you are a girl—at commencement, or at a baseball or football game, is really a flag? It tells to what class or school or college you belong, or which of these, for the time, has your interest and sympathy. And for somewhat similar reasons do nations wear their colors, says St. Nicholas. At first maybe it was to tell one another apart; but after a while the colors—the flag—came to represent the nation itself; and the way the people acted toward the nation's flag was supposed to show the way they felt toward the nation.

HORSES, DYING OF THIRST, DIG FOR WATER.

One of the most pitiable instances of suffering caused by prolonged drought comes from Africa, whence a correspondent writes: "It is a common thing to see horses, when the surface water has dried up, digging in the sand to get water to quench their thirst; and it is surprising how deep they can dig. In the recent drought they were known to dig three and four feet down, and in many cases they struck the bottom without getting on to water. Hundreds perished from thirst, and some died while in a weakened state from the sand giving way and holding them fast by the forelegs when down in a deep hole."

TURN the Clearwater river into the Mississippi, We have plenty of water up this way to satisfy us without it.

Those that are of the opinion, that the state ditching done last season on Lost river marsh, is no benefit to the country, should come up here and look at the thousands of tons of hay in the stack on lands that were worthless before this work was done by the state.

Some of the members of the last legislature, from the northern part of the state openly opposed any appropriation for ditching. Of course they may get back to do the same dirty work at the next session, but it won't be by our vote, and we will give them a little free advertiseing to let people know who they are.

THE Crookston Water Works Power & Light Co., give it out cold that it will fight the proposed improvement of the Clerwater by the diversion of its headwaters to the Mississippi, and evidently thinks that it is the thing, and that the intrest of the flood suffers and the settlers along the river banks are not entitled to consideration.--McIntosh Times.

THE Bemidji Pioneer makes the folowing highly complimentary referance to Congressman Steenerson in conection with his efforts to locate the land office at Bemidji, Congressma Steenerson is doing himself and his district proud in his fight for the relocation of the new land office. After the commissioner of the general land office and the secratary of the enterior let him and Tams Bixby both down, the big cogressman went to the president of the United States and asked him if it was meant to establish land offices to suit townsite men or to accommidate the people to be served. The president at once responded, ""To accomodate the people." "then you will see that this office goes to Bemidji," said Steenerson. And upon that cue Rosevelt acted. Always for the people," he heard Mr. Steenerson through and at once issued an order for a rehearing of the whole matter, and required that he should himself see the "re hearing" proofs and approve the final act of location.

The Pioneer repeats, that Mr. Steenerson has don himself and his district proud. He has honnered the voters of Beltrami county who pinned their faith to him. He is a big man, and made a big impression on the president.

Before him Greene's "Shorter History of the English People" lies open at the year 1688. Of all the two pages only so much is decipherable: "The Abdication of Jams II. The english people had born a grate deel from James 2nd but when at last he gave birth to a son, they said this thing must end."—Adele Marie Shaw in World's Work.

Dangerous Smoking.

Natives of Central America are inveterate users of pimento tobacco, which they make from dried pimento berries, or allspice. It invariably gives the smoker a sore throat and often causes cancer of the tongue. The natives of South Africa are affected in a peculiar manner by the smoke from the dried leaves of the camphor plant. The smoker trembles with fright at nothing, weeps bitterly and uses all sorts of words which do not in the least express his meaning. The wild dagga, another South African plant, poisons slowly those who use it.

A Martyr to Etiquette.

In the antebellum days a charming Virginia hostess, rather than disturb her company, sat still through the long dinner in silent torture. A hornet got caught under her cape and traveled about searching for an outlet, stinging as it went. When coffee was served in the drawing room she had to "retire." Fever came on, and she was really ill, but the force of etiquette and hospitality combined had made it an occasion to die at one's post.—Good Housekeeping.

Crabs and Earthquakes.

For some time previous to the day upon which the great Chilean earthquake of August, 1857, occurred great swarms of crabs of an unknown variety were seen in the bay of Payta. They all appeared to be greatly excited and were literally climbing over each other in their efforts to escape the impending calamity.

How they knew that the earthquake was collecting its strength to desolate the coast is more than man can say, but that they knew something unusual was about to happen there is no doubt whatever.

That there were millions of them may be inferred from the report of Dr. Forbes, who says that "ten days after the earthquake the dead crabs were thrown upon the beach in a wall-like line three or four feet wide along the whole extent of the bay."

A French Dog Story.

A Parisian lady went out recently for a walk in the Avenue de Clichy, taking with her a toy terrier, which she held by a string. While she was looking into a shop window two mischievous boys substituted a bone for the dog. A Great Dane then appeared on the scene and, seeing the bone, made a dash and swallowed it, string included. The lady turned round and in despair cried out that the Great Dane had eaten her pet. The little dog was found later on, much to the joy of his mistress, who carried him off in a cab.

A Lack of Firmness.

A very matter of fact old gentleman the other day called to see a neighbor, an old Irishwoman, who had been ailing for some time, when the following conversation took place at the door:

"And how do you find yourself today, Bridget?"

"Sure, your honor, I'm mighty bad. This shocking weather 'll be the end of me. I'll be a dead woman before long."

"Hoots, toots, woman! Ye've been saying that for the last twenty years! I'll tell ye what it is—ye want firmness o' mind. Fin' a day for yer deeing and stick tae it!"—London Telegraph.

Whale Hunting

Modern Methods Do Not Differ From Those of Former Years.

Description of a Thrilling Combat Off Cape Hatteras. Boat Attacked by Big Beast.

Whaling is no longer the industry it was fifty years ago, but the whale ship has not altogether disappeared from the seas. In fact, there has been somewhat of an increase in their number in the past five years. It is the same exciting pursuit, however, as of yore, as the following tale by a modern wielder of the harpoon proves:

In March, 1902, I signed as one of the harpooners on the whaling schooner Grozier, bound from New Bedford, the only remaining whaling port on the Atlantic seaboard, for the West Indies. We called first at Marie Galante, Dominica and St. Vincent, where we collected our splendid crew of twelve black fellows; then we set sail finally for our old reliable Hatteras grounds between Hatteras and the Bermudas.

THE IRON WENT TRUE TO THE MARK

Our two whaleboats, modeled somewhat after the pattern of birch canoes, were of very light build. Each was equipped with lances, harpoons, a quarter of a mile of whale line, twenty-five pound bomb gun, bomb lances and an explosive harpoon. I was harpooner of the starboard boat, under charge of the second mate, but whaling is really the survival of the fittest without much regard to rank. One day the captain called me to the weather quarter deck and gave me charge of the boat.

I drew first blood on Hatteras. It was the very morning we made the grounds. The sea had hardly a ripple, and through the heavy mist we could discern a school of sperm whales which seemed to have just awakened. Eight bells (4 o'clock) had struck only a half hour before, and I had just gone below, when I heard the captain's sharp tones: "Yes; they are sperm whales! Get 'em out for'ard! Call 'em out! Call 'em out! Get the boats ready quick!"

"My God, they're right alongside!" "Blows, blows!" resounded through the ship for the first time on the voyage. In an instant every one was wild with excitement, for the whales were so close that their spouts could be plainly seen from the deck.

With breathless interest I mustered my crew. "Lower away the starboard boat!" thunders from the masthead. Our chance is at hand. In an instant we are in the water. Up goes the mast and sail without a hitch, and as I am belaying the halyards the monster breaks water close to. "Easy your paddles," whispered the second mate. "Now, Slocum, my boy, give it to him!" roared my officer as the great snout appeared under my starboard bow, giving me a right hand dart of about three fathoms.

I hurled the first iron true to a mark that my eye had made just behind the fin and over the heart. This cramped him, and as he rolled in toward the boat, with his flukes lashing up the sea, I gave him the second iron right in the bilge, and away he went, fin up, throwing torrents of water in every direction. The strength of a whale's flukes is incomprehensible to any one who has never seen such an exhibition as this. Before he quieted down we had the mast and sails stowed so as to allow of no interference with the line or oars when we got ready for the death fight. He took only a few flukes of line, so we hadn't much to haul in, and I shifted ends with the second mate, for now my work was to maneuver the boat with the big steering oar.

The men yelled in their enthusiasm as I passed through them in getting aft, and the old second mate shook hands with me and almost hugged me on the spot. We were all in high spirits, and the men aboard the ship were yelling and cheering, while the captain forgot to be dignified and capered around like a great boy.

Suddenly the whale headed for the ship. This was bad, for it might have "stove" us in pieces. But we veered out line as fast as he wanted it, passing astern of the vessel a moment after he dived under her, not without striking the bulwarks with the flukes.

"Haul in all the line!" I ordered as soon as my officer signaled me, and the men turned face to the bow and hauled away. In a minute we were alongside the flukes. We watched them closely. The whale was quietly taking in the situation. I laid the boat header up to the fin and in went a bomb lance; but it was a little too high up to be fatal. The new pang made him heave his flukes away above the boat and bring them down with a crash that smothered us in foam, filling the boat half full of water. We have to be quick at these times, letting go the line and pulling ahead or sterning off, as the instant may require.

As soon as he was quiet we hauled right up to him again and again, and the officer lanced him through and through without letting go of the lance pole. The shank of the lance was about seven feet long, so it reached in pretty well. At last the snout that had spouted with so much angry vigor took on a crimson look and turned to pure blood. Then a tremor warned us of the coming flurry, and we backed astern for our lives. Round and round he whirled like mad, when he suddenly stopped and headed for the boat. He was going to ram us with his junk!

"There he comes straight for us! Boys, pull for your lives! Pull for your lives!" Only men really fighting for their lives could shoot the boat ahead as they did, and as the great beast passed under my steering oar the fin dropped into his side and he turned up dead.

What the Dickens!

The London Chronicle declares that "What the dickens!" has nothing to do with the novelist. It is as old as Shakespeare, who in the "Merry Wives of Windsor" makes Mrs. Page say to Ford: "I cannot tell what the dickens his name is." And so the word—a palpable diminutive of Dick, like Wilkins and Hodgkins and Watkins—came into use as a substitute for another and more important D. As to "play the dickens," one thinks of Smollett and Humphry Clinker and the immortal scene in which the lion "would roar and tear and play the dickens," and in comparatively late times Thomas Moore could write:

Like the Goths who played the dickens
With Rome and all her sacred chickens.

Great Mushroom Garden In France.

The strangest of the underground worlds in France which I visited was one devoted to the raising of mushrooms. Its limits seemed unbounded, as indeed they were, for it pierced the hillsides in every direction. We entered through an opening under an orchard of cherry trees. During "harvest time" a crop is gathered every twenty-four hours. Three men, with their great baskets, make the rounds of this underground farm every morning, and every day in the year can count on an immense crop, which they ship to the large cities near by and even several miles away. The discolored and inferior mushrooms are sent to the canneries, but for his best growth the producer receives only 20 cents a pound.—Scribner's Magazine.

Flamingoes' Tongues.

The beastly Vitellius, as Gibbon calls him, spent at least six millions of money on table in as many months. He invented, or his cook invented for him, a dish which he designated "the Shield of Minerva." One of its principal ingredients was flamingoes' tongues, of which both Pliny and Martial speak in encomiastic terms. Dampier says that the flamingoes have "large tongues, and near the root is a piece of fat which is accounted a great dainty." When Captain Owen was surveying the east coast of Africa his sailors shot down hundreds of these beautiful birds in order, with an extravagance worthy of Vitellius, to make a dish of the tongues alone.

Historic Albania.

Albania lies 180 miles on the Adriatic sea and is fifty to a hundred miles wide. It was formed originally, says William Jackson Armstrong in his "Heroes of Defeat," from part of Ilyria, all of Epirus and part of Macedonia in the eleventh century. From this territory sprung Pyrrhus, who defeated the Roman invader; Philip and Alexander of Macedon, the conquerors; Perseus, whose fame as a soldier covered the world sixty years after Christ, and Skanderbeg, who for forty years defeated armies sent against him by the Turk. Ancient Albania lay in Asia, just east of the Caucasus.

The Whole Thing.

"Then you've been to Niagara?"

"Yes. I was quietly married last Tuesday week, and the next day we reached Niagara. Soon as we got there I started out to see the falls with my wife."

"Magnificent, eh?"

"You bet! You should have seen all the other men turning around to look at her as she passed."—Philadelphia Press.

The Customs o' the Country.

There was once a Newfoundland fisherman—he chanced to be a Catholic—who in old age came to die. He had lived in debt all his life and, no doubt, had never once given his whole catch to the dealer who supplied him, but had wrongfully slipped many a quintal over the side of a rival schooner and traded it out on the spot.

"Send for Fawther Rafferty," he said. "Send immediate!"

He wanted to confess his sins, to be shriven and to depart in peace, but his old priest had been transferred to Trinity Bay. A young man, just back from Rome, was now the spiritual head of the parish.

"Sure, 'tis Fawther Codlin," they told him.

"Noa, noa!" the old man protested. "Fawther Codlin's a fine young man—a clever young man, I doubt me not, but 'tis old Fawther Rafferty I wants t' hear me confession."

"An' why?" they asked.

"Sure," the dying man gasped, "he knows the customs o' the country."—Norman Duncan in World's Work.

Ancient Table Manners.

A description of a dinner given in 1850 shows that there has been a vast improvement in table manners since then. As a rule, one knife had to serve for two people, and often a bowl of soup was used by two persons. For this reason the party giving the dinner arranged his guests in couples, trying to place people together who would be congenial and not adverse to this common use of table appointments.

Spoons were seldom supplied to the guests, and the soup was drunk directly from the bowl, the latter usually having side handles by which it was held. In less refined company there were no separate soup bowls, only one large porringer, which was passed around to the guests in turn. The diners helped themselves to the pieces of meat they desired from the common dish with their fingers.

Napkins were considered a luxury, and were only provided in very aristocratic and wealthy families.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Sponge Growing.

Sponges are cultivated in West Indian waters and the Mediterranean. In its natural state the bath or toilet sponge is fleshy and covered with a black skin. To obtain the light colored, horny and elastic skeleton, sponges are left in shallow sea water for several days in a staked inclosure until the rotten animal matter can be beaten out. For artificial cultivation a living sponge is cut into small blocks, about a cubic inch in size, with a portion of the outer skin on each. These, fixed to a frame of weighted trellis work, are sunk into a few fathoms of clear water, where they flourish best on a bottom of green seaweed free from mud. In about seven years the cuttings grow into sponges of marketable size.

A Caustic Retort.

An Englishman of somewhat questionable reputation, who was criticising the American way of spelling, once turned to Maurice Barrymore, the actor, and said: "I'll leave it to Mr. Barrymore. Is it right to leave out the 'u' in such words as harbor, neighbor, honor, candor, etc?" "Well, about harbor and neighbor I am not sure," replied Barrymore, "but when it comes to honor and candor I leave you out."

A HISTORIC CHEESE.

THE MONSTER THAT CHESHIRE SENT TO PRESIDENT JEFFERSON.

Nearly Every One In Town Contributed Curd, and Elder John Leland Bossed the Job—The Formal Presentation at the White House.

The story of the great cheese made at Cheshire in 1801 and sent the following winter to President Jefferson as a New Year's present has been many times told in prose and verse, but is worthy of repetition as an interesting bit of local history, showing, as it does, the patriotic spirit by which the good people of Cheshire were moved and the novel manner they chose for its expression.

In those days Cheshire was famous for three things—its exceptionally fine dairying interests and products, the well nigh universal adhesion of the voting population to the Democratic party and Elder John Leland, an able, eccentric and witty Baptist divine, whose fame is a part of the history of Cheshire. Elder Leland and most of the other people of the town were ardent admirers of Thomas Jefferson, and when he was elected president of the United States their joy was unbounded. It was finally decided that it would be proper to give to their esteem a tangible expression in the form of a mammoth cheese, which should show to the president the quality of their material resources and something of the extent of their admiration for him.

The announcement of this plan was made by Elder Leland from his pulpit one Sunday morning and was received with pleasure by the people. July 20, 1801, was the date set for the making of the cheese, and the plan was to have all the owners of cows in the town with the exception of the few federalists there were, to make their curd and carry it to a central place for pressing. Of course there was no cheese press large enough for the pressing of such a cheese as was proposed, and Elisha Brown's cider press was consequently selected for the work.

When the day came for making the cheese the people gathered from all parts of the town. Those who had curd to contribute brought it with them, some in large quantities and some in small, but all extremely proud to contribute to the monster cheese that was to be sent to the president. Besides being a busy day it was also a gala day for the inhabitants of Cheshire. The farmers and their wives and families turned out en masse to witness the construction of what proved to be the most famous cheese in all history, for, though a still larger cheese was made in the town at a later date, this was the president's cheese, and the great Elder Leland, who in the estimation of the people of Cheshire was second in importance only to President Jefferson himself, was leading and directing the enterprise. Most of those present were arrayed in their Sunday best, though the women who superintended the mixing of the curd were obliged to wear protecting aprons.

The hoop in which the cheese was pressed was made for the occasion. It was four feet in diameter and eighteen inches deep and was secured with strong bands of iron to enable it to stand the pressure. When all of the curd had been mixed and salted it was placed in this hoop, a follower which had also been made especially for the purpose was placed upon it, and the ponderous wooden screws of the old cider mill were turned down on the most precious body they had ever compressed. After all was done a hymn lined off by Elder Leland was sung by the assemblage, and the people separated for their homes, highly satisfied with and very proud of their day's work. Some days after it was made the cheese was taken to Captain Daniel Brown's cheese house to be cured. Its weight one month from the time it was pressed was 1,235 pounds. The moving of the cheese from the cider press to Captain Brown's was made a great occasion. The people turned out again, and the cheese was followed by a big procession. Moses Wolcott, who kept the "tavern," gave a feast to all present and thereby linked his name to this part of the town's history.

The following December the great cheese was sent to Washington in charge of Elder Leland and Darius Brown. There were no railroads in those days, and it was drawn on a sled to Hudson, N. Y., and shipped from there by water. The presentation of the cheese to the president was an event of moment in Washington. The presentation was made at the White House in the presence of the cabinet, foreign diplomats and other notables, Elder Leland serving as spokesman and assuring the president in suitable terms of the great esteem in which he was held by the people from whom the gift had come.—Springfield Republican.

The Center of Observation.

LIFE BY THE CLOCK.

Doing Things on Time May Be Carried to Dangerous Extremes.

An eminent physician at a recent gathering of his profession directed notice afresh to the daily tension under which most Americans do their work. We rise on time, he remarked, in the morning, whether by an alarm clock, by the call of a servant or by habit, eat breakfast and read the paper on time, a clock in every room and a watch frequently in our hand. We then, on time, meet office and outside engagements, always preconsidering the amount of time that will be required and timing the next engagement accordingly. Often we subdivide this time and note by our watches exactly how long we can discuss a subject.

Doubtless punctuality is a virtue. Doubtless also the practice of doing things exactly on time has won for us as a people a large measure of industrial success. But, carried to an extreme, as it often is, it is wearing to the individual. The people whose nerves break down from exhaustion incident to overwork are often not so much the victims of overwork as the habit of compressing every bit of work within prearranged limits of time. Let any one try the experiment of doing a given piece of work steadily and with application, but without noticing by his watch or clock how much time he is consuming, and he will be amazed to find how much easier it will go than when he is timing himself and scheming to bring the prescribed task within a fixed number of minutes.

We know a great deal more about sanitary matters than our fathers and grandfathers knew. We have hunted down microbes. We have concocted serums. Diseases which were once regarded as visitations of Providence we now know to be preventable, and we take suitable means of preventing them. All these discoveries and new remedies ought to diminish the death rate and to promote longevity. They have not done so, as a matter of fact. Perhaps they might do so if they had a fair chance. The trouble is that along with these devices for lengthening life we are adopting practices which tend to shorten it. One of the most wearing of these is the habit of bringing all details of our work within exact time limits.—Boston Transcript.

SCIENCE SIFTINGS.

The chemical forces are nearer akin to the vital forces than to the physical forces.

A body weighing one pound on earth would weigh twenty-seven and a half pounds upon the sun.

The mechanical force of the sun[illegible] emitted from 5,000,000 to [illegible] comets would equal but one horse power.

The highest speed which matter has been known to reach is that attained by the eruption of hydrogen and other gases from the sun, which is at times several hundred miles a second.

The star Sirius, which is shown to be about double the size of our sun, emits from forty to sixty fold more light than the sun owing to its matter being much more diffused.

Two hundred and eighty stars north of —20 declension have a velocity through space of twenty miles per second. The speed of our solar system is but 12.4 miles per second.

The most delicate scale is made by fixing one end of a fine thread of glass. The atom to be weighed is placed at the free end and the degree of the bending of the thread under it noted. This has to be done under a glass which magnifies a hundred times.

Judged by His Voice.

One day Sir Algernon West, a well known member of parliament from London, was observed by one of the doorkeepers talking to a gentleman who had a rasping, raucous voice and a demonstrative, excited manner. While the conversation was in progress Sir Algernon received the card of another member of parliament and an intimation that its owner wished to see him. "Sorry; I'm engaged," was the answer. Next moment up came another card from a well known peer. Again an apology was returned. In another minute the doorkeeper came carrying a huge card and saying that the lord mayor and sheriffs of London wished very urgently to see Sir Algernon. The latter excused himself from the gentleman with whom he was conversing. This was too important to resist. "There ain't nobody here," whispered the doorkeeper when he got the member outside, "only I was afraid a madman had been shown in to you by mistake, and I wanted to warn you."

WORKING WITHOUT SYSTEM

Lack of Mental Control and Concentration Is Fatal.

A man who does forcible work must dismiss a subject from his mind when he is done with it. This increases the grasp and power of the mind and keeps it clear for concentration upon the thing under consideration. Nothing can be accomplished with half a mind; you must concentrate or focus all your powers upon the thing you are doing. This you can never do when things by the score are half settled in your mind, continually obtruding themselves for consideration, and hindering the thought of present problems.

When you have anything in hand, settle it. Do not look at it, lay it down, then look at something else and lay that down also, but settle things as you go along. It is a thousand times better to make an occasional mistake than never to settle anything, but be always balancing, weighing and considering many things at a time.

It is vigorous thought which counts. A subject which is handled, so to speak, with the tips of the mental fingers never amounts to anything. You must seize and grasp with all your might the thing you are attempting, and do it with vigor and enthusiasm, if you wish to bear the stamp of superiority when completed. Another defect in your work, which arises from the faults I have mentioned, is failure to complete things. Your work bears the impress of incompleteness, and seems always to lack something.

If you could overcome these defects you might be successful, for you really possess great ability, but lack definiteness. Evidently your mind has not been trained to exactitude. There has been carelessness in your education somewhere. It may be partly the fault of your teachers or your parents in not calling your attention in early life to these deficiencies. If this had been done the task of correction would have been easier than it is now, but the faults may still be overcome if proper diligence be used. I hope, for your own sake, that you will set about it with determination.—Success.

The Crown.

There is no mention of crowns before the eighth century after Christ. The crown really did not become the head covering of kings until the times of the Christian rulers after the might and power of pagan Rome were broken. Before those days the crowning was done with a helmet. This change in the method of crowning the rulers is typical of the changes that occurred in the spirit that animated nations and races in the selection of their kings.

The first kings and chiefs, after the world had emerged from the patriarchal forms of government, were selected almost altogether for their prominence as leaders in war. Thus, gradually, the chief of the army became the chief of the nation. Almost all the ancient kings were military despots. Then, with the prevalence of Christianity and the overthrow of the old governments, came the new rulers who claimed to rule by divine right. They, too, were almost all military despots, especially in the beginning but the world had progressed far enough to demand more proof of authority to rule than mere brute power.

Travels of a Bullseye.

A German scientist says that if a marksman at noon on a cloudless windless day sets his rifle so that it will cover the bullseye of a target the gun will in the same position the next day, if it also happens to be cloudless and windless, shoot "high left." "The bullseye is apparently attracted by the position of the sun or of any other luminous point," says the scientist, "and apparently during the day follows the course of the sun in a semicircular line on the target."

This seemingly changed position of an object under the changing influence of light cannot, he thinks, be produced by refraction nor by the changing temperature of the air nor by changing barometric pressure. The change of position is instantly responsive to the sun breaking through a cloud. It cannot be akin to mirage, because the shooter would then have to lower his gun at noon instead of elevating it as he now does.

Young folks grow most when they are in love. It increases their sighs wonderfully.

Sizing Him Up.

Young Wife—I want to buy a hat for my husband.

Hatter—What size does he wear?

Young Wife—I declare I forgot to find out! I know the size of the collars he wears, though. It's 15. He'd want about size 18 or 20 for a hat, wouldn't he?

Looking Ahead.

A little girl aged three asked her father for more candy, but was told to wait until tomorrow. Looking out of the window for a few moments, she suddenly called out, "Papa, it looks like tomorrow now."

The Whale's Appetite.

A whale's appetite is phenomenal. His chief diet consists of jellyfish. He has simply to open his mouth and paddle along leisurely in order to take in jellyfish by the wagon load. Such is the method adopted by the whalebone whale. The sperm whale, on the contrary, captures huge squids weighing often several tons. Like his brother the whalebone whale, he must be constantly on the lookout for food; otherwise he would starve. As many as fourteen seals have been taken from a thirty foot "killer." Other fishes of enormous appetites are not uncommon. The bluefish, for example, thrives on sardines and other small fish. Assuming that one bluefish eats ten small fish a day, it has been figured that it requires 10,000,000,000 sardines to feed the 1,000,000,000 bluefish on our coasts every summer. Most curious of all eaters is the hydra—a strange creature that can be turned inside out without impairing its appetite or its power to eat.—Scientific American.

THE INDIGO BIRD.

Oh, late to come but long to sing,
My little finch of deep-dyed wing,
I welcome thee this day!
Thou comest with the orchard bloom,
The azure days, the sweet perfume
That fills the breath of May.

A winged gem amid the trees,
A cheery strain upon the breeze
From tree-top sifting down;
A leafy nest in covert low,
When daisies come and brambles blow,
A mate in Quaker brown.

But most I prize, past summer's prime,
When other throats have ceased to chime,
Thy faithful tree-top strain;
No brilliant bursts our ears enthrall—
A prelude with a "dying fall"
That soothes the summer's pain.

Where blackcaps sweeten in the shade,
And clematis a bower hath made,
Or, in the bushy fields,
On breezy slopes where cattle graze,
At noon on dreamy August days,
Thy strain its solace yields.

Oh, bird inured to sun and heat,
And steeped in summer languor sweet,
The tranquil days are thine.
The season's fret and urge are o'er,
Its tide is loitering on the shore;
Make thy contentment mine!

Sir Roland's Experience

By WILSON M. MATTHEWS

(Copyright, 1903, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

When Sir Roland Chesterton announced his engagement to Camille Rodays, a popular French actress, English society was horrified, while the French elite merely shrugged their shoulders and said: "Ah Dieu!" Then the reported engagement was declared false and again Dame Rumor circulated the announcement as a positive fact this time.

Sir Roland, having just reached his majority, was a handsome, reckless, dare-devil sort of a fellow, with an income of £20,000 sterling a year. One day at the club, when in one of his reckless moods, he publicly announced the engagement. As a matter of fact it caused a great row in the young baronet's family. Lady Chesterton, the mother of Sir Roland, and the handsomest and haughtiest woman in all England, became hysterical when a "dear" friend told her the news. She actually took the boy in her arms and in affectionate and endearing terms entreated him to renounce this foolish love. The Ladies Blanche and Eleanor, his elder sisters, went on their knees to him; his cousin, who came next in succession to the title and estates, asked him to abdicate; his fellow clubmen simply laughed at him; but Sir Roland remained obdurate—for a little while.

Then very unexpectedly came the announcement that the "marriage" was "indefinitely" postponed, and Sir Roland suddenly determined to make a tour of the continent. He was gone almost a year when one morning he returned as mysteriously as he had departed. He was received with open arms by all members of the baronetcy, for they were thoroughly convinced that his infatuation for pretty Camille was gone.

It was shortly before midnight one evening, as Sir Roland was preparing to leave the club, that a letter was handed to him by a messenger boy. The hand writing on the back of the envelope caused him to turn deathly pale, and with trembling fingers he broke the seal.

"My Dear Roland," it ran. "Come to me as soon as you get this. I have but a little while to live, the doctor told me yesterday. My long sickness has made me horribly ugly, but I am starved for just one smile from you. I am always at home and can see you any time."

The next day at two o'clock he went to see her and was horrified at her changed appearance. Her cheeks, once oval and tinted with delicate pink, were now sunken and colorless; great, dark rings encircled her eyes, and deep, heavy lines that told of long suffering marred the face that was once famous for its beauty. The eyes retained much of their former brilliancy, the lips were still fresh and pink, and the glorious locks of hair, as they lay in tangled disorder on the white pillows, were still beautiful as when first he met her. The room, with the curtains all drawn, and the medicine bottles arranged in profusion about her. Camille seemed really about to enter the portals of death. Sir Roland remained but a short while in the sick room and as he turned to go he met a large, brusque woman in the doorway wearing the garb of a nurse, and who treated him in a surly fashion when he inquired after the patient. "The illness is her affair, not yours!" she said, brushing past him. The next day Sir Roland again visited the sick room and found Camille a trifle better, her eyes flashed with the old brilliancy and in every way her manner was quite like the Camille of former days. Sir Roland passed a most congenial hour in her company until the nurse came and in the same brusque fashion dismissed him from the room. When he reached the stairway a bell rang in the lower hall.

"I knew the doctor would come and find you here!" cried the nurse, shaking her fist in Sir Roland's face. The next instant a fine, portly-looking man entered the hallway. When the nurse went upstairs to inform Camille of the doctor's arrival Sir Roland seized the opportunity to make inquiries.

"Is Mademoiselle Camille dangerously ill? Or do you think she will recover?

"I presume you are a near friend of mademoiselle's?"

"Yes—yes, of course!"

"Then I would say mademoiselle is quite ill. I have done everything for her that medical science can do, but—" he hesitated.

"Is her illness so serious that you have given up all hope?"

"Practically. You see it is what people call 'heart break.' A wealthy baronet, who came of a very aristocratic family, left her suddenly. At first she succeeded in hiding her sorrow, but it proved too much for her strength, and as a consequence she collapsed.

"When she was able to sit up she insisted on having a window open, and in an hour afterward was taken with a hard chill, then came a hacking cough, which affected her lungs—that is all; it is simply a question of time."

"There must be something you can do for her to save her from death, medical science is so advanced nowadays. If it is simply a matter of money—"

"No, no, no! Money, science or nothing else can save her. She tried change of climate, she consulted the most eminent specialists, and at last she asked that she might come home to spend the few remaining weeks of her life."

"Doctor, mademoiselle is ready to receive you," said the nurse, appearing at the door.

A week after Sir Roland went again to see Camille, but was refused admission to her apartments. "Mademoiselle is much worse, Lord Chesterton, and she has changed dreadfully; she absolutely refused to see anyone."

"Then it would not make her happy now—she would not care to—"

"To what, my lord?"

"To marry me."

"I fear—but wait; here comes the doctor now."

Sir Roland took the doctor to one side and unfolded his plan, although the doctor warned him that Camille could live but a few hours; then, deliberately pushing the nurse to one side, he entered Camille's room, and was horrified at the change in her condition, her lips were white as death, her face was ghostly like that of a corpse, and the light from the green shaded lamp made the room look weird and strange. Had he been a closer observer he would have noticed a mocking smile playing about her mouth as he told her of a certain thing he intended to do. But, as a most natural consequence, he saw nothing. Returning two days later, clothed with all the necessary authority of the law, Camille Rodays became Lady Chesterton, the nurse and the doctor acting as witnesses to the ceremony. After the ceremony was over Sir Roland bent over the bed and, taking the new Lady Chesterton in his arms, kissed her colorless lips, despite her efforts to struggle away from him. The next instant the nurse was ordering him out of the house, declaring that the excitement brought on by the hasty marriage would be the death of the girl.

Sir Roland walked rapidly down the narrow little street with a very serious expression on his handsome young face. He was both glad and sorry; he was thoroughly convinced that he had done the right thing by Camille. He at least had kept his word, but the family—what would they say? Then the thought came to him that probably Camille would die in a week or so; before his chivalrous act became known; and the very next moment the thought of Camille dying set his heart to beating wildly. After he had walked some distance he took a cigar from an inner pocket, bit off the end and was going to light it when he felt a sticky substance on his lips. Impulsively, he drew his hand across his mouth, then looked at his fingers, and saw they were smeared with a cosmetic.

"Could it be?" he asked himself, then he remembered how round and plump Camille's hand was when he placed the ring on her finger. Turning back, he walked rapidly, his heart filled with doubt and misgiving. As he again approached the pretty little villa he turned hastily down a side street that led directly past the garden. Reaching the gate, he lifted the latch and entered, with the same rapid strides he walked up the graveled pathway; upon reaching the house he entered unannounced.

In the garden room, seated about a table, was a merry company; Camille, in the best of health and bewitchingly beautiful, sat at the head of the table arrayed in a costly gown; on one side sat the fake nurse, and on the other the "doctor" in whom Sir Roland recognized a young variety actor that had lately become popular; some chorus girls and a few amateurs completed the company. "How strange that I should not have been asked to this feast," he said, entering the room very quietly.

The "doctor" made an effort to reply, the "nurse" covered her face with her hands, the chorus girls sat mute and dumb with terror, but Camille, calm and collected, rose and went to him.

"Roland, I know it was wrong, but it is no more than you deserve. I will admit it was all a trick, but the law can't annul the marriage on that account," and her voice grew tender and pleading. "I never meant you to know how I had deceived you. You will forgive me—you will—Roland!" She held out her beautiful arms to him, and for a moment he hesitated, then almost fiercely he took her in his arms and showered her face with kisses.

A fortnight later London was startled by the announcement that Sir Roland Chesterton has abdicated in favor of his cousin, Sir Charles.

COMING FINANCIER.

Young Napoleon of Finance Found a Way to Realize on Promised Assistance.

A certain member of the stock exchange set his nephew up in business three times, but the young man lacked something essential to success in the line selected for him, and had failed with each effort. Recently, when he came with the fourth request for financial assistance, the uncle demurred.

"You must learn to lean on yourself," he said. "I can't carry you all your life. It would be an unkindness in me to keep supplying you with money to carry on enterprises that invariably end in assignments. I'll tell you what I'll do. You owe a great deal as the result of that last failure. Pitch in on your own hook, and go it alone till you pay off those debts. When you've done that I'll give you a check for all they amount to. Such an experience will do you more good than all the money I could give you now."

Two months later the nephew walked in with every claim receipted in full, and the uncle was so delighted that he gave the promised check.

"Now, that's something like it," he said, "and I'll wager you feel the better for the hard training. How did you manage it, Dick?"

"Borrowed the money."

Now the old gentleman is telling them that there is the making of a great financier in that nephew.

REALISTIC FINISH.

Where There Was to Be an Automobile an Ambulance Was Necessary.

"This," said the dramatist, who was elaborating the scenario of his new play to the manager, according to Judge, "is to be a realistic society drama. The heroine makes a thrilling entrance in an auto."

"What does she do then?" asked the manager.

"Why, of course she meets the hero and the villain and the soubrette and the rest, and the play goes on to the usual happy ending."

"Well, you start realistically enough, but you weaken on your finish."

"How's that?" asked the puzzled playwright.

"If she's going to come in on an auto she and a few of the rest ought to make their exit in an ambulance."

According to His Folly.

A young Japanese compositor employed on a Japanese paper hardly a stone's throw from the Mail and Express building was riding down town in a city hall train the other morning. He was engrossed in his morning paper and paid little attention to the other passengers. But a fresh-looking young man who sat next to him, and who had been eying him all along, suddenly said:

"What sort of a 'nese' are you, anyhow? A Chinese or a Japanese?"

The little Jap was not caught napping. Quick as a wink he replied:

"What sort of a 'key' are you, anyway; a monkey, a donkey or a Yankee?"

The fresh young man had no more to say, and left the train quickly when City Hall station was reached.—N. Y. Mail and Express.

He Feels Good.

Caddo, Ky., July 20th.—"I believe I could climb a mountain without drawing a long breath," is the way William Ball, of this place, describes how he is feeling.

As Mr. Ball has been on the sick list for a long time, this declaration from him comes as quite a surprise.

When asked to explain how he had become so strong in such a short time, he says:

"I did have Kidney Trouble very bad, in fact I had to get up four or five times every night to urinate. I had shortness of breath which distressed me terribly. I was badly used up, and was really of no account for anything.

"I used three boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and that's what has made me well. I can sleep all night without having to get up. I feel splendid and as I said before, I believe I could climb a mountain without drawing a long breath. Dodd's Kidney Pills did it all."

PE-RU-NA IS OF ESPECIAL BENEFIT TO WOMEN

Says Dr. M. C. Gee, of San Francisco.

A CONSTANTLY increasing number of physicians prescribe Peruna in their regular practice.

It has proven its merits so thoroughly that even the doctors have overcome their prejudice against so called patent medicines and recommend it to their patients.

"I Advise Women to Use Pe-ru-na," Says Dr. Gee.

Dr. M. C. Gee is one of the physicians who endorse Peruna. In a letter written from 513 Jones street, San Francisco, Cal., he says:

"There is a general objection on the part of the practicing physician to advocate patent medicines, but when any one medicine cures hundreds of people, it demonstrates its own value and does not need the endorsement of the profession. "Peruna has performed so many wonderful cures in San Francisco that I am convinced that it is a valuable remedy. I have frequently advised its use for women, as I find it insures regular and painless menstruation, cures leucorrhœa and ovarian troubles, and builds up the entire system. I also consider it one of the finest catarrh remedies I know of. I heartily endorse your medicine."—M. C. Gee, M. D.

Mrs. E. T. Gaddis, Marion, N. C., is one of Dr. Hartman's grateful patients. She consulted him by letter, followed his directions, and is now able to say the following:

"Before I commenced to take Peruna I could not do any hard work without suffering great pain. I took Peruna, and can say with pleasure that it has done more for me than any other medicine I have ever taken. Now I am as well as ever; I do all my own work and it never hurts me at all. I think Peruna is a great medicine for womankind."—Mrs. E. T. Gaddis.

Women are especially liable to pelvic catarrh, female weakness as it is commonly called.

Peruna occupies a unique position in medical science. It is the only internal systemic catarrh remedy known to the medical profession today. Catarrh, as every one will admit, is the cause of one-half the diseases which afflict mankind. Catarrh and catarrhal diseases afflict one-half of the people of the United States.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

A Broad Insinuation.

The fat man slid into the only vacant seat just ahead of the woman who was about to take it.

The man standing up was so disgusted that, as the car swayed, he permitted the end of his cane to dig the fat man in the ribs.

The man standing next to the one with the cane leaned over and told him that he was needed at the stockyards.

"Me!" cried the man with the cane, indignantly.

"Yes, you!" replied the other. "That is where they pay good prices for pig stickers."

Then they both looked at the fat man, who acted as if he would like to hit some one.—Chicago Post.

The Thousand Islands.

There may be somewhere on the earth a more delightful region than that of the Thousand Islands, but if there is, it has not been discovered. It is the Venice of America, but also has good hotels that can be kept warm if there shall happen to be a cold rainy evening. It is as fine as the Bay of Naples, with 2,000 picturesque Islands scattered along the twenty-five miles of one of the most beautiful rivers in the world. You can find out a great deal regarding it in No. 10 of the "Four-Track Series," "The Thousand Islands." Copy will be mailed free on receipt of a 2-cent stamp by George H. Daniels, General Passenger Agent, Grand Central Station, New York.

Our Queer Town Names.

"You have such strange names for your towns over heah," said a titled Englishman. "Weehawken, Hoboken, Poughkeepsie, and ever so many others, don't you know!" "I suppose they do sound queer to English ears," said the American, thoughtfully. "Do you live in London all the time?" "Oh, no," said the unsuspicious Briton. "I spend part of my time at Chipping Norton, and then I've a place at Pokestogg-on-the-Hike."—Boston Christian Register.

"It's powerful easy to abuse a good thing," said Uncle Eben. "A razzer is all right in a barber shop, but it's troublesome at a pahlor social."—Washington Star.

Portrait and Signature of Pope Leo XIII.

POPE LEO XIII.

Pen Picture of the Great Pontiff of the Catholic Church Who Has Just Passed Away.

March 10, 1810, Countess Pecci, daughter of a noble family of Sienna, gave birth to to her fourth son, destined to play one of the most important roles in the world's history—to become the "Lumen in caelo" which St. Malachy in the eleventh century predicted would rise after him, who had borne "Crux de cruce," and papacy should be almost crushed to the earth. Surely he has filled a luminous page in the history of the Catholic church.

His mother bore the name of the mother of the Virgin—to the boy she gave the name of the Virgin's father—Joachim, like Joseph and Mary, sweet, familiar names in Catholic countries.

Born and reared among the Volscian hills, he was a robust, sturdy boy. At the age of 11 he contracted a serious illness, which left him the frail, delicate being he was ever after. When 27 he was threatened with consumption. He made his will—before he died, every legatee was numbered with the dead. He gave early promise of being great. In his first vacation from school he expressed to his father a desire to read and write like St. Thomas Aquinas—and "I," said the father to his wife, sighing, "wished to make a general of him." "Ah, well!" answered Comtesse Anne, "you can make a pope of him. Let Joachim be pope and Joseph cardinal and you can be tranquil as to the future of our boys." On the last day of the year 1837, 13 years after the death of his much-loved mother, he was ordained to the priesthood.

Gregory XVI. appointed him governor of Benevento—a most difficult position. He was not only obliged to cope with political conspirators, but also with well-organized bands of desperate men, given over to brigandage and smuggling—a position in which older and more experienced men had been baffled and retired. Three days after reaching his post he was stricken with typhoid fever. The best medical skill was summoned from Naples and pronounced the case hopeless. The frail body, weakened with ascetic fervor, triumphed over disease and death. In his convalescent state, he began his battle, bearing harder on the rich than on the poor. Soon the Beneventini saw with joy and surprise the most dreaded chief with his band led in chains to prison. Conspirators found it unsafe to hatch plots where Gov. Pecci ruled and sought an asylum elsewhere. In three years the reign of law, with order and peace, was established that Pope Gregory recalled him to fill a more important post.

Perugia was the seat of popular discontent; thither Gregory sent the successful young diplomat. Again he was successful, so successful that there came a time when the prisons of Perugia did not hold a single criminal.

There were educational disputes in Belgium; indeed all the affairs of the church were disordered. Gregory again turned to Mgr. Pecci to smooth difficulties and bring order out of chaos. He went as nuncio to Brussels—a post he filled with credit to himself, the church, the Belgian court and people. It was King Leopold's verdict that he was as clever a politician as he was an excellent churchman.

Before his return to Rome he visited London and Paris, and was received by Victoria, Prince Albert and Louis Philippe, to whom he had been warmly recommended by Leopold.

Death had claimed the bishop of Perugia. The hearts of the people and the clergy turned to him, who had endeared himself to them in his brief sojourn as governor. The pope acceded to their wishes, but intended first to bestow the red hat. When the nuncio reached Rome Gregory lay dying.

His successor, Pius IX., confirmed the appointment. For 32 years Leo filled this pastoral mission. Pius was not unmindful of Gregory's design for his promotion, but political troubles which crowded all the years of Pius' pontificate, delayed for six years the insignia of the red hat.

In 1877 was celebrated the golden jubilee of Pius IX. His strength was failing and he knew his end was near. Death had just taken his oldest friend and paved the way for a new Camerlengo. Pius appointed Cardinal Pecci. It was a position involving, during the vacancy of the papal chair, the supreme authority to administer the temporalities of the holy see. It was the Camerlengo who must use the silver hammer upon his brow and thrice call him by his baptismal name before it could be admitted that he was dead. Already the shadow of the cross had fallen on Cardinal Pecci.

January 17, 1878, Victor Emmanuel died in the Quirinal palace—eight days after Pius followed him, whom he had deemed the prosecutor and spoliator of the church. When the wires flashed over the world the news of Pius' death, Protestants believed that the papacy which was claimed to have come down from Peter was at an end. The questions arose, will the government not take possession of the vatican and St. Peter's? Will they, can they, allow the cardinals to assemble freely in conclave and elect a successor to Pius IX.? Will not the government raise the flag of Savoy and secure a spiritual head of its own selection who will be amenable to the house of Savoy? Such might have been the case had Victor Emmanuel lived, or had the papacy had at its head a man of less diplomatic skill, less tact, than Cardinal Pecci. He carefully avoided everything that could give offence, but was determined there should be no delay that he could prevent in assembling the conclave, which should be ten days after the death of a pope. At that time the papal tiara was not a crown to be coveted.

Out of sixty-four cardinals three were absent. Two were ill and McClosky only arrived in season to do homage to the successor of Pius IX. The Camerlengo prepared for a long session. The doors were closed. None might enter, none pass out. But two ballots could be cast in one day—morning and evening. Two-thirds majority was necessary to an election. If no choice were made, a little smoke emitted from the burned ballots told the fact to the outside, waiting people. The first balloting gave 23 votes to Cardinal Pecci—he was seen to be greatly disturbed—his face expressed dismay and grief. At the second balloting the name of Pecci was called 38 times—great tears rolled down his cheeks—his pen dropped from his trembling hands. Before the third balloting he begged the cardinals to drop his name and choose one more worthy. The third balloting began—44 votes were recorded against his name. He rose declaring his unworthiness. "I am old, I am feeble. I shall soon end my days; it is not the papacy, it is death that should be given me." Finally he bowed to what his brother cardinals declared to be the Divine will and gave Leo XIII. for his pontifical name. He trembled at the threshold of this unknown glory, where he must be solitary, so high above those who were nearest to him. The hour was very bitter. There was not a stain upon his name. In statecraft he ranked with Gladstone and Bismarck—when they passed away he stood alone as the greatest statesman in Europe. By his uniform, steady line of action, his aims were attended by remarkable success. Leo's benevolence, his self-denial surpassed even his zeal and worldly wisdom. To aid the poor he stocked all the streams he could control with fish. The fruits of his gardens he ordered to be preserved and dealt out to the needy.

A late empress craved an audience with him—had the poor taste to denounce certain doctrines of the church. Leo listened with gentle courtesy. On leaving, she was bold enough to ask for his photograph and request that he would write something beneath it. "Leo XIII., to those who walk in darkness and will not see light," was what she read.

The war between Spain and the United States gave Leo infinite distress. He was so torn between the appeals of his people in Spain and the reliance his loyal following in the United States placed upon his upholding the righteous end of the cause that it was feared he could not bear the strain.

The queen of Holland appealed to Leo to use his influence to end the South African war. He declared no war had caused such bitterness of spirit—a war that was inspired neither by ideals of civilization nor by just national interests—but humbly added, "I can do nothing but pray for the dead."

His life was regular and simple. He rose at six—rather his valet called him at six, but often found him at his desk. It is etiquette that a pope eat alone, which he did with all the hurry of a business man. At eight he entered upon the business of the day with one of the cardinals. That over, he walked in the vatican gardens, which he supervised. A gardener, whom he censured for raising poor ivy, exclaimed: "His holiness can teach everyone, from his cardinals down."

After his walk he would return to his reception room and receive all entitled to an audience. Receiving, a pope remains seated—the visitor makes three bows, one on entering, one in the middle of the room, one when kissing the pope's slipper—audience over, he backs from the room. If Leo received an American he directed he should act as if he were being received by the president of the United States. He dined lightly in the middle of the day, committing but one excess. When he could elude the eyes of his doctors he would eat salad. Once when made ill by this indulgence he humbly confessed he had eaten of the forbidden thing. After dinner he indulged in the siesta, so dear to Italians, then drove in the gardens, attended by members of the Swiss and royal guards. After the drive he again began work with his secretary. At 10 he took his evening meal. After supper and prayers, all of interest in the newspapers was read to him. He loved the news and kept posted on all the political events throughout the world. There was nothing in science, literature, art or philanthropy with which he was not familiar. He sat up late writing verses or concocting those wonderful productions he sent out to the world; often would rouse his secretary in the middle of the night to take notes. He had none of the English dread of American inventions, but wanted everything about him up-to-date, even to house-cleaning, which never occurred to any other pope. He employed an army of scrubbers, and, as he had 1,100 rooms, it was a work of time, but it was done with the thoroughness of a New England housewife. He did not scorn a typewriter, but thought it undignified for him to use one.

House in Which Leo Was Born at Carpineto.

His manner and his person, his mind and his speech were peculiar, like none round him. His disposition was serene—his faith sublime. He had a strong sense of humor and a vein of sarcasm. A royal lady painted his portrait—it was such an atrocious caricature it amused him. She asked him to affix his autograph—he wrote in Latin, "It is I; be not afraid. Leo XIII." A physician and scientist who visited him in 1899 said: "Leo will not die like one of us; he will flicker out like a lamp having consumed its last drop of oil." He loved life, said nothing could happen to lessen his love, but added it was not for the mere love of living. He knew, as all knew, that he was mentally as lively as ever; said he was ready to battle in the intellectual arena as long as his bones held together. The scientist said he never saw one of his age whose organization was impaired so little. He scorned doctors and doctors' stuff, yet he was cared for and watched over like a baby by Dr. Lapponi. He ascribed his youthful spirit to his blithe, contented mind, for which he gave thanks and glory to God, but would add, with his peculiar smile, "I take a little credit to myself, too, and am proud that I feel as young as I do. If one has something to live for, then one must put off growing old as long as possible, and that is what I have done."

Leo delighted in disputes. His eyes would sparkle—by smiles he would encourage his opponent in every way possible. For him it was real mental gymnastics.

The scientist retired and said he never saw such subjugation of matter to spirit as in Leo XIII. It was no figment, as is claimed, that he was a prisoner of the vatican. He might, indeed, pass out, but he was mindful of the insults and violence used toward those who bore the body of Pius IX. from the city—bore it at midnight, in order to give the least offence. He would not have the papacy humiliated in his august person. The Italian government would not give him the protection accorded to the poorest citizens in more favored countries.

R.C. Dunn, is about the only candidate for the next Governor of Minnesota, that is being noticed by the newspers, but Bob, is one of the old time politicians that strikes where it counts.

It is getting about time of the year for the "bunch" dry goods, and the fake grocery peddlers, to show up and tell the farmers, that their local merchants, who have been trusting them for their summers goods, have not been useing them right.

If the Citizens of McIntosh would have a few ten foot tall pig weeds cut out of their public park, they would improve its appearence to an ordinary observer.but we suppose they ~~don't~~ notice them as they have been looking at them since their infancy.

The Beltrami County Bugel is our latest X published at Funkley Minnesota by H.P. King, formerly of McIntosh where he has been in newspaper work for a number of years. Funkley is to be congratulated on securing a live newspaper and the business men of that place should do their part to make it a success.

When youhear a local merchant makeing complaint about catalouge houses and peddlers, look over his stock of stationary and wrapping paper, then take a look and see if he is doing advertiseing on his wrapping paper, the farmers fence boards, and with circulars printed in Chicago, and if he is he deserves cheap opposition by peddlers.

A STARTLING TEST.

To save a life, Dr. T. G. Merritt, of No. Mehoopany, Pa., made a startling test resulting in a wonderful cure. He writes "a patient was attacked with violent hemorrhages caused by ulceration of the stomach. I had often found Electric Bitters excellent for acute stomach and liver troubles so I prescribed them. The patient gained from the first, and has not had an attact in 14 months." Electrict Bitters are are positively guarenteed for Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Constipation and kidney troubles. Try them. Only 50c at Kronschnrbel & Bolstad.

A Rocking Shrine.

The most wonderful temple in the world is built on a rocking stone on the summit of a mountain in northern India which is over 20,000 feet high. The rock weighs many thousands of tons, but is balanced on so fine a point that a comparatively light pressure is sufficient to make it sway. Hindoo priests teach their followers that this rock was placed in position by the help of the gods, and thus they add considerably to the feeling of awe which they desire to create.

Worshipers at this shrine must first make a perilous ascent of the mountain. Then they spend seven days of preparation in a temple built on the solid mountain before they are permitted to make the final passage to the mysterious rocking stone. To reach this it is necessary to cross a bridge over a great chasm, for nature and man have combined to make this Hindoo shrine difficult of access. After crossing the bridge the pilgrim mounts a ladder, to which he clings in terror for his life here and in the hereafter. The temple on the rock is necessarily small. Three priests officiate there, but its mysteries no man is permitted to reveal. Europeans have seen it only from a distance.

The Human Body.

The blood, muscles, bones and other parts of the human body are composed of many chemical constituents, and a correct chemical analysis would be long and tedious. The specific gravity of the blood is 1,028, and 779 parts of every 1,000 are water. Of the other parts chloride of sodium, chloride potassium, carbonate magnesia, calcium phosphate, calcium lactate, potassium phosphate, sodium carbonate and other constituents are found. This is generally true, with variations also, of tissues and bone. The fundamental substance of bone is composed of organic matter, combined with various inorganic salts, in which calcium phosphate largely predominates. In addition the bones contain calcium carbonate, calcium fluoride, magnesium phosphate, sodium phosphate and sodium chloride.

Buttoning a Coat.

Buttoning a man's coat from right to left was the original way, when our ancestors, wrapped in skins, held the right edge with the left hand and naturally inserted a fastening thorn with the right hand. This right to left custom has been retained by the Hebrew priests in their garb to this day. When fighting men became necessary and swords and knives had to be drawn by the right hand from the left side, the edge of the coat, buttoned from right to left, was found to be in the way, and men began buttoning from the left. Nonfighting women and priests continue to follow the old custom.

Jewels on an Idol.

The jewels of an Indian idol must be worth stealing if many of those remarkably hideous images possess such valuable head ornaments as one made for the idol Parlhasathy, in the Triplicane temple at Madras. The ornament is worth some 50,000 rupees and is made of sovereign gold, studded with diamonds, emeralds and rubies, the largest emerald being valued at 1,000 rupees and the biggest ruby and diamond at 300 rupees apiece.

The Fire God's Wrath.

A curious story comes to us from the suburbs. A resident in the near neighborhood of London has a museum in his house in which the principal curiosity is a fire god which has been worshiped for many centuries in an Indian temple. Once when the owner of the house took a party of people to look at the museum he proposed in fun that they should all kotow to the image. This they all laughingly consented to do, all except two ladies, who declared it was wicked. The fire god was revenged within two months. One of the ladies had her house burned to the ground the week after, and the other one on a later date fell backward into the fire and sustained some terrible burns. We give the tale without comment.—London Chronicle.

QUAINT BATAVIA.

Java's Picturesque Town and the People One Meets There.

Imagine a town of giant dolls' houses built in Burmese and Japanese style, prim avenues of beautiful trees, broad, clean streets and thousands of grown up dolls masquerading in oriental fancy dress, the picture book of one's childhood animated—that is Batavia.

The streets are paraded listlessly by gangs of blue garbed convicts, who pick up cigar ends, bits of paper and fruit peel. The cleanliness of the streets is astonishing.

A man in Batavia once threw a piece of banana peel on the ground, and, looking back a moment afterward, he felt reproached by the sight of that wretched piece of peel, the only blot on the immaculate cleanness of the streets. For awhile his dignity fought with his sense of decency. Then he returned, picked up the offending peel, and—feeling very foolish—carried it until he saw a convenient opportunity for disposing of it.

Representatives of many nations congregate in Batavia, blue gowned Javanese, wearing white pith helmets shaped like inverted saucers; portly Chinese merchants, dressed in a grotesque combination of yellow silk clothes and billycock hats of Hampstead Heath, their pigtails interwoven with blue silk; lean, tawny Malays, Hindoos, Javanese and effeminate looking Cingalese jostle each other on the sidewalks.

It is impossible for a casual observer to distinguish the sex of a Cingalee, as the men have delicate, refined features, are clean shaven, fasten their long hair behind their heads in woman fashion and wear skirts that sweep the ground.

The dress of the Javanese women merits a detailed description, as the Batavian Dutch ladies have adopted the native dress for morning wear.

A long strip of native cloth, called a sarong, is wound round and round the body beneath the armpits and reaches almost to the ankles. An abbreviated Eton jacket, called a kopeia, covers the shoulders, and out of doors ladies' slippers are worn on stockingless feet, and a paper parasol is carried.

The Batavian Dutch do not make their toilets, unless they go out of doors, until the afternoon, so that one may see men in pyjamas and women in the native dress lolling on the verandas or sitting down to meals at the hotels. The custom is a lazy but sensible one, considering the climate.—Chambers' Journal.

When Dinner Is Over.

As a rule an hour to an hour and a half is spent in conversation after a dinner when neither host nor guests have any other engagement for the evening. When a lady and gentleman are dining together the lady makes the first motion at departure, the gentleman promptly following her lead. No matter how numerous the company, no guest should depart without bidding adieu to the hostess with thanks for her hospitality. These need be neither stiff nor effusive, just some little words of appreciation of the pleasure you have enjoyed in her home. Goodbys may be said to other friends present before you bid adieu to the hostess or to any standing near the door as you pass out, but do not stop for any lengthy conversation after having said good night to your entertainers.

Suicide by Smoking.

One of the most extraordinary suicides on record was enacted in Pesth. Baron Rein Olyi, a wealthy citizen, deliberately poisoned himself by smoking cigars and tobacco to excess. The baron had lost a large fortune in speculation. Having a wife and six children, he insured himself very heavily in their behalf in five companies and then proceeded to put into operation his unique plan for self destruction. He hired a small room in a mean portion of the city and in ten months died of what the doctors called "galloping consumption." He had consumed 3,500 cigars and about a hundred pounds of tobacco.

The Helping Word.

There was a certain old woman who was a constant and devout attendant at church. Her husband died, and her pastor called upon her to comfort her in her sad bereavement.

"Well, my good woman," the pastor remarked, "in your bitter trial I hope you have found some ray of comfort from the Scriptures."

"Indeed I have, dominie," was the confident though tearful reply.

"That's grand, sister," exclaimed the parson sympathetically, "but tell me what passage of the word helped you most."

"Grin and bear it."

"Omit the Third Stanza."

Mabelle had been unusually quiet at church one Sunday. She was generally a very restless listener. Her mother, noticing it, asked her:

"What made you so good during service this morning, daughter?"

"I was thinking," answered the child, "why the people who write hymns always put something bad in them that the minister can't let the people sing. He always says 'omit the third' or some other stanza, and he says it over twice, so they'll be sure not to sing it, so it must be something wicked."—New York Times.

A Way the Baby Has.

"Has the baby had the measles yet, Mr. Popps?"

"Sh-sh! Don't speak so loud. Whenever he hears anything mentioned that he hasn't got he cries for it."

Ruskin's favorite adverb was "entirely." Over the grave of his father he put a memorial stone describing the elder Ruskin as "an entirely honest merchant."

The heavens themselves run continually round; the world is never still; the sun travels to the east and to the west; the moon is ever changing in its course; the stars and planets have their constant motions; the air we breathe is continually agitated by the wind, and the waters never cease to ebb and flow, doubtless for the purpose of their conservation and to teach us that we should ever be in action.—Burton.

A Contrast In Lungs.

Three human lungs lie next one another in the anatomical museum at Edinburgh university. The first is that of an Eskimo and is snow white. In life this would, of course, be ruddy from the presence of blood. The third is that of a coal miner and is coal black. The intermediate one is that of a town dweller and is a dirty slate gray, as are the lungs of all dwellers in cities at this moment.

An Ill Chosen Song.

In order to make him forget his domestic troubles, which were driving him to suicide, some friends of Herr Gustav Krautwinkel arranged a cheerful evening at a restaurant in Berlin. Unfortunately, one of the party began to sing a song entitled "Lost Happiness." Hardly was the first verse finished when Herr Krautwinkel jumped up, pulled a revolver from his pocket and shot himself.

Festal Gifts In Spain.

It is the custom in Madrid for friends and acquaintances to send presents of bonbons on birthdays, name days and festivals. A large silver tray is piled with sweets of various kinds, with a cake made of eggs in the center. This is often surmounted with a silk flag or a pretty porcelain figure. Well known people receive as many as fifty of these trays on their birth and name days.

The Sea Cook's Trick.

"Having tried every kind of female cook, I determined to get a man," said a portly millionaire. "It very naturally occurred to me that an ocean liner was the best place to find him. Everything is so clean about a ship's kitchen, you know. Well, I found a fine looking Swede and established him in my kitchen at $25 a week. He seemed to be all right, but presently my neighbors complained that he was throwing all the refuse out of the window. Old habit! He thought the window was a porthole on a ship. I could never break him of the trick and had to let him go."—New York Press.

A Faithful Servant.

Carlyle told once of a lawsuit pending in Scotland affecting the succession to a great estate of which he had known something. The case depended on a family secret known only to one old servant, who refused to reveal it. A kirk minister was sent to tell her she must speak on peril of her soul. "Peril of my saul!" she said. "And would ye put the honor of an auld Scotish family in competition with the saul of a poor creature like me?"

Theory Versus Practice.

"Medical science has reached the point," boasted the optimistic young doctor, "that for a patient to die we must take out his heart and kill it with a club."

On his way home he caught a cold and for the next three weeks made every one miserable listening to his symptoms.

Butler's Actress Wife.

General Butler deprived the stage of one of its great beauties and a most talented and popular actress. It is a bit of forgotten biography that he fell in love with Sally Hildreth when she was twenty-one years old and had been on the stage five years. She capitulated to the young lawyer and retired from the histrionic field.

Did Not Mean It.

"Honesty is the best policy," sapiently said the committeeman.

"My dear sir, you're wrong," exclaimed the suddenly awakened insurance agent who had been dozing in the opposite seat. "My company has the best policy. We long ago abandoned the other as out of date."

SELF INDUCED AILMENTS.

The Folly of Nursing the Habit of Not Feeling Well.

Few people realize that their ailments are largely self induced, says O. S. Marden in Success. They get into a habit of not feeling well. If they get up in the morning with a slight headache or some other trifling indisposition, instead of trying to rise above this condition they take a positive pleasure in expatiating upon their feelings to any one who will listen. Instead of combating the tendency to illness by filling the lungs with pure, fresh air they dose themselves with "headache tablets" or some other patent specific warranted to cure whatever ill they think they are suffering from. They begin to pity themselves and try to attract pity and sympathy from others. Unconsciously by detailing and dwelling upon their symptoms they re-enforce the first simple suggestions of illness by a whole army of thoughts and fears and images of disease until they are unfitted to do a day's work in their homes or offices.

There is greater danger that young girls who are delicate while growing up and lounge around the house and lie down whenever they feel the least bit out of sorts will form a habit of invalidism when they reach maturity.

How often do we see such girls "brace up" at once when anything happens which interests or excites them! An invitation to a reception or a ball or any other pleasant social function acts like a tonic. For the time being an instantaneous cure is effected. They are as well as anybody until after the entertainment.

Indulgent mothers are frequently to blame for this physical and mental laziness, for it is nothing more, on the part of their daughters. A lounge or sofa is a positive curse in many a home, because it is such a temptation to lie down and succumb to trifling suggestions of illness or the least indisposition. A habit of giving in whenever you "don't feel like it" is fatal to all achievement and ruinous to self discipline, self poise and nobility and dignity of bearing.

THE AURORA BOREALIS.

A Spectacle That Is Magnificent in Its Impressiveness.

It was a trifle past the afterglow of sunset, and the sea was a deep rich purple, with long flowing swells. The sky, a fine light turquoise blue at horizon, gradually deepened into a rich cobalt, in which a few stars twinkled. A majority of the men were absorbed in various occupations below when a call of enthusiasm brought all up on deck. At a point low on the southwest horizon a faint film had arisen, which quickly, silently assumed the form of a curtain, waving and mounting upward in two stately columns past a group of finely shaped cirrostratus. In a few seconds it was across the zenith, displaying beautiful pale yellows, greens and delicate pink and blue lights, with edgings at intervals of faint purple and red. The columns descended rapidly in ever varying spirals of perspective until the avant garde was lost behind the far northwest horizon.

We were about off the Danish port of Godthaab, Greenland, a sufficiently southern latitude at this season for the alternation of day and night, and as the heavens darkened the stars shone with increasing brightness through this great shimmering veil of light.

The heavens and the sea grew darker and darker, and the aurora brighter and brighter in lightning changes of form and color, with the green and yellow and blue rays predominating and the delicate sheen from the aurora's light writhing in fiery serpent forms over the face of the moving waters. What impressiveness, what magnificence! It held the soul as in a spell. There was not much talking. Splendid as it was, I afterward witnessed auroras which produced a deeper impression, due doubtless to the presence of the long night of the far north.—Century.

Arizona Sunshine.

To one who has been there, says Caspar W. Hodgson in Sunset Magazine, the name Arizona, first of all, suggests sunshine and plenty of it. Nowhere on the globe is sunshine more abundant, more appreciated or more harmless. Indeed, a sunstroke has never been recorded in this territory. Though all good Arizonians have crossed the Hassayampa river, which act, according to tradition, divests one of the power to tell the truth, I believe their records are accurate as to sunstroke. The explanation is found in the fact that heat is not so much a matter of thermometer as of humidity.

The dry, hot air of the Arizona desert is invigorating to the initiated. One can learn to love the desert. There the sunrises and sunsets are intensely beautiful and nowhere on earth richer in color. This is sometimes called Sunset Land. It might also be called Land of Sunrise.—Sunset Magazine.

New York's High Grade Teachers.

"At a recent teachers' meeting," said a visitor who just "happened in," "one of the speakers made the statement that the male teachers of New York city public schools were all specialists of exceptional ability; that they were just such men as one finds outside of the city in the positions of superintendents and principals of high schools. This statement seemed to me to be worthy of verification by something more reliable than the words of an enthusiastic partisan, so I set to work making inquiries about those male teachers in the school nearest my home. The following are the data given me by the principal of this school, which, I am told, is by no means more favored in the way of appointments than the others in the system: 'Out of ten male teachers all but three could boast, if they desired to do so, the possession of a bachelor's degree. Two of the seven are masters, with some work done toward a Ph. D., and nearly all are doing some postgraduate work either at Columbia or at the State university. The three spoken of are ex-high school principals from up state cities.' My respect for the New York city schoolteacher has been wonderfully increased."—New York Times.

Marriage Performed by Signature.

There are always a number of marriages on board the cooly ships which ply between Calcutta and the West Indies. The coolies are very fond of marrying before entering on their period of servitude. Sometimes as many as a hundred of them will want the nuptial knot tied.

The captain of any British ship has legal power to marry people, but the master of one of these cooly vessels has grown tired of reading the Anglican service fifty or sixty times a voyage. So he has had a number of forms printed with the essential parts of the service. The bride and bridegroom step into the cabin, sign one of these forms, have it witnessed and become man and wife. No questions are asked. They simply sign their names.

It is the quickest kind of marriage on record, but the British authorities have declared it to be perfectly valid.

Hearts and Heels.

Many good stories have from time to time been told of Rev. Thomas Hunt, the temperance orator who was a well known figure in the early history of Wyoming valley.

During the civil war he enlisted and served as chaplain in one of the regiments of infantry raised in the valley. One day, in the midst of a fierce battle, the major rode up in front of the regiment and to his amazement found Father Hunt at the head of the ranks.

"Chaplain, what are you doing here?" he asked.

"Doing?" echoed the old minister briskly. "I am trying to cheer the hearts of the brave and look out for the heels of the cowards."

Foolish Fear of the Opal.

Many people to this day have a superstitious dread of wearing opals, because they really believe ill luck is attached to this beautiful stone. Three centuries ago the opal was an exceedingly fashionable gem, and the Italian goldsmiths particularly favored its use for their most exquisite settings.

The opal was at the height of its popularity when the plague broke out in Venice. Some especially observant individual discovered that when a plague stricken sufferer was at the point of death the opal, if he wore one, would grow brighter, and after his death it would grow dull. The reason for this appears to have been that the burning fever warmed the stone and that after death the damp and chill of the body dulled it. But many deduced from this a belief that it was the opal that had brought death and misfortune, and with the spread of this superstition the opal declined in popular favor.

Many persons would on no account, whatever even accept one as a gift, much less wear what they foolishly deem the unlucky opal.—New York Press.

The Lime Juice Island.

Nearly all the lime juice used in the world comes from the tiny island of Montserrat, in the British West Indies. The lime grows wild in many West Indian islands, but only in Montserrat is it used commercially. That island is one vast garden of lime trees, and nowhere in the world is there a finer sight than its thirty miles of orchards, laden with the fruit of the lime or fragrant with its blossoms.

The fruit is gathered by negro women, who carry it down the hills to the shipping port in big baskets on their heads. Like all West Indians, they are remarkable for their ability to carry heavy weights in this manner. Once the company which controls the lime juice industry sought to lighten the burden of its laborers by introducing wheelbarrows.

The negroes filled the wheelbarrows readily enough, and then carried them on their heads as they had been used to carry the baskets. Many a negro woman will carry a hundredweight of limes on her head for a distance of a mile or more.—Indianapolis News.

Naming the House.

The custom of naming a ship when it is launched with the breaking of a bottle of wine on the prow is a survival of an ancient practice which had many forms. In early times, when the frame of a house was raised, the bottle of wine was broken on the ridgepole. The usage is mentioned in McLellan's "History of Gorham, Maine."

It was the custom at a raising to break a bottle of spirit on the ridgepole and to repeat some rhymes, "naming the frame," as it was called. When, in 1839, Jacob H. Clement of West Gorham raised a stable, John Phinney, an old Revolutionary soldier who was present, repeated the following lines, which he said were used in naming the frame of Captain John Stephenson's house and barn, which were raised about 1775:

FOR THE HOUSE FRAME.

Cursed is the Tory's heart
Which from the congress laws depart;
If the laws they do not fear
I hope they will not prosper here,
And if the laws they do obey
I hope they will prosper in corn and hay

Chair Postures.

It is one thing to have a chair and another to know how to sit on it. The ideal of a graceful sitting posture has varied in the different ages of the world. The Egyptian sat bolt upright, the knees and feet closely pressed together. It was the ceremonial attitude. The Greeks and Romans, when they were at liberty to forget their dignity, sat stooping, with one or both elbows supported by the arms of the chair.

The Chinese ideal was with the knees and feet wide apart. They have maintained that attitude in sitting for 400 years. The Saxons and early Norman kings are represented in old manuscript and on coins in the same position. Down to a date comparatively recent, kings and queens received sitting stiffly on their thrones, any marked change of posture being thought to derogate from the royal dignity. They now receive standing.

A Legend of February.

Here is the pretty legend which tells why February has only twenty-eight or twenty-nine days. Long ago, they say, February was a gambler, and he was so unlucky that he soon lost all his money. Like other gamblers, he tried to recover it, and he said to his companions that if they would lend him some money he would give them as security one of his days. January and March, who were naturally associated with him more often than any of the other months, accepted his offer, and as poor February soon lost the money which he had borrowed each of them acquired one of his days.

That is why January and March have each thirty-one days and February has only twenty-eight in ordinary and twenty-nine in leap years.

Ungrateful Girl.

"Miss Pechis," began Mr. Klose, "if you marry me you can be assured that"—

"I'm sorry, Mr. Klose," the girl interrupted hastily, "but it is impossible. I can never marry you."

"What! Well, if that ain't ingratitude. Didn't I bring you a box of candy last week?"—Philadelphia Press.

Got Tired of the Gun.

A Clay county man, says the Plattsburg Democrat-Lever, took his pastor out hunting one day. They had but one gun between them and the preacher carried it. After they had been out half an hour the man felt something poking him in the side. Turning around quickly he found the preacher poking him with the muzzel of the gun and fumbling over the hammers. "Say, brother," asked the minister, "how do you let these things down?" The man has sworn off taking preachers hunting.—Kansas City Star.

Modern Conveniences.

The Abilene Democrat tells of a man who stopped over night in a small town near there and registered at the hotel pointed out to him by the conductor as the best in town. In the morning he wanted to take a bath and consulted the proprietor about it. The proprietor shouted back to the rear: "Here, Tom, this here gent wants to take a bath. Bring the fixin's." Tom soon appeared, carrying a cake of yellow soap, a towel and a pick. "What's the pick for?" asked the guest. "Why," said the proprietor; "you'll have to dam up the creek."—Kansas City Star.

Mrs. F. Wright, of Oelwein, Iowa, is another one of the million women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Overshadowing indeed is the success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound — compared with it, all other medicines for women are experiments.

Why has it the greatest record for absolute cures of any female medicine in the world? Why has it lived and thrived and done its glorious work among women for a quarter of a century? Simply because of its sterling worth. The reason that no other medicine has ever reached its success is because there is no other medicine so successful in curing woman's ills. Remember these important facts when a druggist tries to sell you something which he says is just as good.

A Young New York Lady Tells of a Wonderful Cure:—

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—My trouble was with the ovaries; I am tall, and the doctor said I grew too fast for my strength. I suffered dreadfully from inflammation and doctored continually, but got no help. I suffered from terrible dragging sensations with the most awful pains low down in the side and pains in the back, and the most agonizing headaches. No one knows what I endured. Often I was sick to the stomach, and every little while I would be too sick to go to work for three or four days; I work in a large store, and I suppose standing on my feet all day made me worse.

"At the suggestion of a friend of my mother's I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it is simply wonderful. I felt better after the first two or three doses; it seemed as though a weight was taken off my shoulders; I continued its use until now I can truthfully say I am entirely cured. Young girls who are always paying doctor's bills without getting any help as I did, ought to take your medicine. It costs so much less, and it is sure to cure them.—Yours truly, Adelaide Prahl, 174 St. Ann's Ave., New York City."

Women should not fail to profit by Miss Adelaide Prahl's experiences; just as surely as she was cured of the troubles enumerated in her letter, just so certainly will Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cure others who suffer from womb troubles, inflammation of the ovaries, kidney troubles, nervous excitability, and nervous prostration; remember that it is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that is curing women, and don't allow any druggist to sell you anything else in its place.

If there is anything in your case about which you would like special advice, write freely to Mrs. Pinkham. She can surely help you, for no person in America has such a wide experience in treating female ills as she has had. Address is Lynn, Mass.; her advice is free and alway helpful.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Decrease in Milk.

W. W. P. McConnell, state dairy and food commissioner, says that warm weather and flies are causing a heavy decrease in the milk supply of Minnesota. Mr. McConnell estimates that the supply has decreased at least 25 per cent in the last few weeks. One herd of cows which a month ago produced twenty-two gallons of milk daily now produces only fourteen gallons.

The cause for the decrease is attributed largely to hot weather and flies. The flies are said to be unusually numerous this season on account of the wet weather. Mr. McConnell says that cows consume a great deal of energy in driving the flies away, and that consequently the production of milk is decreased. The grass, too, be says, is not so nutritious in extreme hot weather as in the spring.

Mr. McConnell says that cows should be kept in the shade during the warm part of the day, and should be fed corn fodder and other succulent food. At night, when the flies are not so persistent, he suggests that the cows be turned into the pasture.

State Fair Information.

Secretary E. W. Randall of the Minnesota State Fair is frequently called upon for information relative to the equipment, conduct and methods of the fair over which he has presided as executive officer for the past eight years. The reason for this is found in the fact that the Minnesota State Fair has become the most successful of all state fairs, and besides, has gained the reputation for business methods, and fair and prompt dealing.

The latest state to seek to profit by Minnesota's experience, is Montana. A day or so ago, United States Senator Carter, of Silver State visited the Fair Grounds and spent some time with Sec. Randall looking over books, forms and methods, and in examining the the grounds and equipment.

Terrible Death.

John Atkinson, chief engineer of dredge 3, of the Lake Superior Contracting and Dredging company, met a terrible death on board the dredge at Duluth. The backing cable got foul and he struck at it to get in place, when a ragged edge of the cable caught his trousers leg and threw him on the heavy wire, and in an instant he was carried under the big drum over which the big cable winds. Atkinson was crushed to death and at the same time the gearing cut off both his hands. One hand could not be found until the body was removed to the undertaker's, when it was discovered inside the maimed body. Atkinson had been in the employ of the company for fifteen years.

Returns to China.

Ham Hong, a Chinese prisoner at the penitentiary, who received a conditional pardon, after he had served several years of a twenty-five years' sentence for murdering another Chinaman at Brainerd, was released from prison and left Stillwater for St. Paul, from from which point he will leave for his former home in China. Ham Hong has been employed as a cook at the prison and has been an exmplary convict. This fact and the belief that he had been convicted of a crime of which he was probaly not guilty, gained him his freedom. He was profuse in his thanks for his release, and for fear that he might again be placed behind the bars at the prison he left the city in a hurry.

Record Broken.

The steamer William Edenborn has again broken her hitherto unbroken cargo record, by loading at the Duluth Missabe & Northern docks at Duluth 7,780 gross tons of iron ore, equal to 8,714 net tons. This is the largest cargo ever floated in a lake hull. The steamer Edenborn's best cargo record was 7,729 gross or 8,656 net tons. The Edenborn is one of the Pittsburg Steamship company boats, which company is the vessel division of the steel corporation. Her cargo is equel to about 290,000 bushels of wheat.

Fishing with Dynamite.

Dynamite has been used extensively this summer by unscrupulous market fishermen in northern Minnesota. Lakes well stocked with pike and black bass have been cleaned out by exploding charges beneath the water. This kills the fish and brings them all to the surface, where they are scooped into the boats. The game wardens have been on the trail of offenders, and at last a conviction has been reported, where a dynamiter was find $15 and costs.

News Notes.

Numerous grafters got in their work with the Sells & Downs shows at St. Cloud. One man lost $300.

The Twin City Investment and Realty Company of St. Paul filed articles of incorporation with the secretary of state.

Martin Mahn, plasterer employed in the Harmonia building, Minneapolis, was killed by being caught between the elevator and one of the floors. He was dead when found.

Mankato now has a bathhouse in operation, the council having had a large one built on the Minnesota river near Sibley park.

Distemper, a disease dreaded as much by owners of blooded dogs as is consumption by human beings, is an epidemic in St. Paul, and the cases that have developed are of marked severity. Many fine hunters have succumbed to the disease, and sportsmen of the city are keeping a careful watch over their dogs.

The Street Fair association has undertaken to co-operate with Mrs. Caroline P. Shaw of St. Paul, superintendent of the Minnesota agricultural exhibit at the St. Louis World's Fair, to secure a fine display of Winona county grains and grasses at that fair.

MADE MERRY TOO SOON.

Woful Tale of the Man Whose Wife Was Going Away But Missed Her Train.

"What's the matter, old fellow?" he said, as they met the morning after, relates London Tit-Bits.

"I feel blue."

"But last night you were the jolliest member of the party."

"I felt jolly."

"You acted like a boy just let out of school."

"I felt like one."

"You said your wife had gone away for the first time in three years, and there wasn't anyone to say a word if you went home and kicked over the mantle clock."

"I remember it."

"You said that if you stayed out until four o'clock there was no one to look at you reproachfully and sigh and make you feel small."

"Yes, and I stayed out until four o'clock, didn't I?"

"You certainly did."

"And I gave a war-whoop on the doorstep?"

"Yes; and then you sang a verse from a comic opera song and tried to dance a jig."

"Yes; and my wife had missed the train. Now go away and leave me. I want to kick myself a little more for not taking the precaution to get an affidavit from the guard that she went with the train."

And he gave himself several bangs on the ears and then shook himself till his hair began to fall out.

BASE NEGLECT OF DUTY.

Some of the Things That Are Expected of Men Who Aspire to Political Leadership.

To become a political "leader," and to retain the post successfully, requires eternal vigilance. One politician, quoted by the Cleveland Plain Dealer, says that in the tenement districts the leader becomes a sort of unofficial mayor, guardian and father of his people. He can never ignore a request. To do so is to offend not only the individual who makes it, but all his relations.

One woman asked a district leader to take her baby into his family while the mother went out of town for a week's visit. Again, he was called up at two o'clock in the morning by a couple of men who had got into a dispute, and wanted him to arbitrate. He was expected to see that the poor had coal; to bail out those who were arrested; to secure work for those who were out of employment; to have police fines remitted; to attend marriages, picnics and funerals.

One family of voters renounced him permanently because he did not call when seven-year-old Thomas broke a leg.

"But I didn't know he had broken his leg!" the leader remonstrated.

"Sure, and you should have known it."

"But I didn't even know you had a son named Thomas."

"That settles it," and the father took up his hat. "Tim Sullivan would have known it. Niver a meal have you ate in me house."

Found a Friend.

Valley City, N. Dak., July 27th.—Mrs. Matilda M. Boucher of this place tells how she found a friend in the following words:

"For years I suffered with a dizziness in my head and could get nothing to cure me till about two years ago when I was advised to take Dodd's Kidney Pills. These pills cured me before I had used the whole of the first box, and I haven't been troubled since.

"In January of this year I had an attack of Sciatica that made me almost helpless, and remembering how much Dodd's Kidney Pills had done for me before, I sent and got some and began to take them at once.

"In three weeks I was well, and not a trace of the Sciatica left, and I have been well ever since.

"Dodd's Kidney Pills have certainly been of great benefit to me. I have found them a friend in time of sickness, and I will always recommend them to every one suffering with the troubles that bothered me."

The Usual Thing.

"I would like to know," asked the parent, who had a son in need of some further education, "what is the course at your college?"

"The usual half mile course of cinders and all that sort of thing, you know," absent-mindedly replied the president of the great institution.—Philadelphia Press.

DANGEROUS KIDNEY DISEASES CURED

Pe-ru-na Creating a National Sensation in the Cure of Chronic Ailments of the Kidneys.

Major T. H. Mars, of the First Wisconsin Cavalry regiment, writes from 1425 Dunning street, Chicago, Ill., the following letter:

"For years I suffered with catarrh of the kidneys contracted in the army. Medicine did not help me any until a comrade who had been helped by Peruna advised me to try it. I bought some at once, and soon found blessed relief. I kept taking it four months, and am now well and strong and feel better than I have done for the past twenty years, thanks to Peruna." —T. H. Mars.

At the appearance of the first symptom of Kidney trouble, Peruna should be taken. This remedy strikes at once the very root of the disease. It at once relieves the catarrhal kidneys of the stagnant blood, preventing the escape of serum from the blood. Peruna stimulates the kidneys to excrete from the blood the accumulating poison, and thus prevents the convulsions which are sure to follow if the poisons are allowed to remain. It gives great vigor to the heart's action and digestive system, both of which are apt to fail rapidly in this disease.

Peruna cures catarrh of the kidneys simply because it cures catarrh wherever located.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

RAILROAD MERGER SUIT IS DECIDED

State of Minnesota Loses Its Case Against the Northern Securities Company.

CONTENTIONS OF DEFENDANTS SUSTAINED BY JUDGE LOCHREN

The Injunction Asked For Is Refused as State Laws Have Not Been Violated—Decision Does Not Affect Result of the Federal Government Victory.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 3.—Judge Lochren Saturday in the United States circuit court handed down his decision in the case of the state of Minnesota against the Northern Securities company, the Great Northern Railway company, the Northern Pacific Railway company and James J. Hill as president of the Northern Securities company, and individually, in which he sustained the contentions of the defendants and dismissed the bill of complaint of the state.

He finds that the Northern Securities company has not violated the state laws forbidding the consolidation of parallel and competing lines of railway, through its ownership of the stock of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific railways. He refuses the injunctions asked by the state of Minnesota, to restrain the Securities company from voting the stock of the two railroad companies or either of them.

This decision affects the results of the federal government's victory in the circuit court in no way whatever. The federal suit involved the same defendants and the same general state of facts, but was based on a totally different contention of law.

The federal suit, in which the Securities company was beaten, was prosecution for violation of the Sherman anti-trust law passed by the federal congress.

The state suit, in which the Securities company wins, was based on an allegation that the defendants violated acts of the Minnesota legislature, forbidding the consolidation of parallel and competing lines of railway.

The hearing of the state suit was begun Friday, June 5, before Judge Lochren in the federal circuit court. It followed the submission of reams of testimony by both sides for many months in which Frederick G. Ingersoll, of this city, acted as referee. The final argument lasted five days, in which Attorney General Douglass, Former Attorney General George B. Wilson and Attorney M. D. Munn, spoke for the state and George B. Young, M. D. Grover and C. W. Bunn for the defendants. The case was submitted Wednesday, June 10. An appeal to the United States supreme court is now pending in the federal suit.

New York, Aug. 3.—The decision in favor of the Northern Securities company in the suit by the state of Minnesota caused a four-point jump in that stock on the curb.

A Lynching Prevented.

St. Louis, Aug. 3.—A special to the Republic from Greenville, Ill., says three itinerant peddlers, charged with assaulting Mrs. Frank Nance, near Old Ripley, were captured ten miles from here by a posse of farmers, who prepared to lynch them.

COTTON MILLS SHUT DOWN

Two Million New England Spindles to Be Idle in August.

The Present High Price of Cotton Is Responsible for the Shut-Down—To Resume in September.

Boston, Aug. 3.—In cotton manufacturing circles in this city, it is expected that more than 2,000,000 spindles will be idle throughout the north during the month of August, due mainly to the high prices in the cotton market, and the hesitancy of purchasers of goods to agree to any marked advance while any raw material, purchased before the rise, remains in the storehouses. Attempts have been made to induce all cotton manufacturers to enter a general agreement to shut down for a stated period or on certain days of each week, but owing to a large number of unfinished contracts an iron-clad agreement was deemed inexpedient at this time.

The conditions in the cotton market have caused much inconvenience in Fall River, the textile center of North America. About one-third of the 30,000 operatives there have been idle this week, and of the 3,000,000 spindles 700,000 will not be working next week.

In Lowell, another leading mill center, the high price of cotton has not had any noticeable effect on account of the long shut-down of six corporations during the strike of the operatives last spring.

In Maine, mills at Lewiston, Lisbon and Brunswick will shut down for two weeks.

Among other corporations which also will curtail their product are the Queen City, of Burlington, and the North Pownal, of Pownal, Vt.; the Monadnock mills, of Claremont, and the Cocheco mills, of Dover, N. H.; the Bernon mills, of Georgetown, R. I., and other plants in the latter state, and several of the corporations in the Quinebaug valley, eastern Connecticut.

There is a confident feeling in some cotton mills offices that after September is well advanced a general improvement in market conditions will occur.

Troops at Danville Changed.

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 3.—Adjt. Gen. Scott Saturday morning issued an order directing companies H and I, Seventh infantry, I. N. G., which have been on duty at Danville, to proceed to their home station, and ordering company A, Fourth infantry, of Arcola, to proceed to Danville. The new company will report to Sheriff Whitlock for orders. It is believed that troops will be needed at Danville only a few days more.

New Move in Manchuria.

Berlin, Aug. 3.—A dispatch from St. Petersburg to the Cologne Gazette says the Russian authorities are reported to have notified the government at Peking that Russia will prohibit foreigners from staying in Manchuria at present, but that six years hence, when Russia has restored quiet and order in Manchuria the country will be opened to foreigners for free commerce.

Comet Has Four Tails.

New Haven, Conn., Aug. 3.—The astronomers at the Yale observatory have just made photographs of Borelli's comet showing faint indications of the presence of a fourth tail. Previous observations showed only three.

ROUND ABOUT THE STATE.

John McDowell, a farmer about 60 years of age, living near Perham, died from the effects of sunstroke.

John H. Carey, the missing treasurer of Dickinson county, Michigan, was arrested in Minneapolis.

More than 200 horses are in quarantine at LaCrescent, pending examination by Executive Agent S. H. Ward of the state live stock and sanitary board.

A well dressed and refined man was drowned in the north end of Lily lake, Stillwater, and the police believe it to be a case of a demented man meeting death by accident or suicide.

The state board of health is investigating the condition of many small stockyards that are reported to be unsanitary. Most of them at minor railway stations are on marshy ground that cannot readily be cleaned.

The little four-year-old son of Frank Hanson, of Fosston, got in front of the sickle bar of a mower, and had his leg cut off.

Frank Muller, who is charged with burglarizing Baer Bros.' store at Frazee, escaped from the Becker county jail at Detroit.

A boy with matches in a hay mow caused a $13,000 fire at Big Lake. Three barns on the J. E. Putnam farm were destroyed. Loss partly covered by insurance.

Fritz Link, a St. Paul carpenter, was seized with the symptoms of arsenic poisoning, and removed to the City Hospital. He is supposed to have been poisoned by eating new potatoes on which Paris green had been used.

Charles H. Wissler was drowned in the Cannon river, a short distance south of Northfield. A small bruise in the forehead would indicate that in driving he had struck a rock in the bottom of the river and was stunned, making him helpless.

Capt. Matt Marvin, member of Co. K, the famous First Minnesota regiment, and treasurer of the First Minnesota Regimental Association, died at Winona of paralysis.

The Business Men's association of Mankato is to erect an electric plant for street lighting and commercial purposes with a view of selling to the city when practicable.

Elliott Brothers of Minneapolis have been awarded a contract for building the superstructure of the Sheldon memorial auditorium at Red Wing.

The North Star Candy company of St. Paul, which recently went into bankruptcy, has made an offer to settle with creditors on a basis of 50 cents on the dollar.

Gov. Van Sant appointed Miss Mary M. Cheney of Minneapolis a member of the state art commission in place of Mrs. T. B. Walker, resigned. The commission was created by the last legislature.

A number of the Bell company telephones were burned out at Winona on account of the street car trolley wire coming in contact with telephone wires. Several fires were started in residences, but all were put out before much damage was done.

A mistaken identification of the body of James McIntosh, who died suddenly in Minneapolis, resulted in the body's being sent to the university medical school. It has now been identified and turned over to the family.

Adjutant General Libbey of the Minnesota National Guard says there can be no truth in the current report that the new rifles to be furnished the Guard under the Dick law will not be the same as those issued to the regular army. He is positive that his requisition for standard Krag-Jorgensens will be honored, and that the allowance will be generous, amounting to sixty for each company.

A statement showing the status of claims of the several states on account of the war with Spain was made public by the United States treasury auditor. According to the official figures, Minnesota claimed $199,619. The sum of $84,139 was allowed and $88,591 disallowed, the amount suspended and pending payment aggregates $26,887.

An unsuccessful attempt was made to break the Missabe bank at Proctor, a suburb of Duluth. The outer door of the large new safe was blown off by one explosion and the entire safe, except for the cash box, was wrecked by a second. This explosion roused the town and scared the burglars off. The big inner door was blown 100 feet away.

City officials and prominent business men of St. Paul approve the building of a third interurban electric line between the Twin Cities by way of Fort Snelling, favor an appropriation by the St. Paul city council to rebuild or improve the Fort Snelling bridge so that it may support the tracks of the new line.

Articles of incorporation were filed by the Red Wing Boat Manufacturing company. The capital stock is $50,000.

We feel sorry for the hail suffers of the southern part of the state that we can't help out, owing to their opposition to Senator Stephens hail insurance law. We wanted to insure you but you said NO, and now we are the gainers by your remonstrance, against state hail insurance, but when you meet old "Andy" just say: We apologize, and won't do it again.

THAT EXTRA WATER.

The McIntosh Times thinks that it is wicked of the Crookston Water Power & Light Company to fight the proposition to divert the Clearwater into the Mississippi river. For the benefit of the people along the Clearwater river the Times intimates that the company should be willing to go out of business.

Crookston Times.

While the Times believes that the intresrests of the settlers along the Clearwater river, and the flood suffers below, are of much more importance to the state and nation than thoes of the Crookston Water, Power & Light Company, and should therefore be first considered, it does not believe, that the contemplated diversion of water to the Mississippi would materially effect the interest of the Crookston Company or any other company on the river. But whether or not, their financial interests should not be allowed to stand in the way of the improvement of the entire country.

McIntosh Times.

We place the above from the Crookston Times and McIntosh Times, before our readers to let them see both sides of this question, which is of vital importence to the people of the northern part of the state. We do not consider the opinion of the Crookston Times entitled to much consideration, for the reason that they would advocate the drowning out of five thousand farmers rather than to have interest of Crookston suffer to the extent of one dollar. This is to narrow a minded a view to take of a question that is of so much intrest to so many people, and while we are well aduainted with the local situation up this way of the clearwater floods, we have not fully looked up the affect it may have on the interest of others to turn them into the Mississippi river, but do know it will make the meadow lands, that are now compariatively worthless fit for settlement which would contribute to the wealth of the state.

Polish Wedding Customs.

According to the Polish custom, the marriage ceremony usually occurs on a Sunday, this being done to permit the men to attend without losing any time from their employment, while the bride is supposed to maintain the greatest secrecy concerning her wedding until she is actually clad in her wedding garments of thin white and bridal veil. Then she goes from house to house, regardless of the conditions of the weather, and invites her friends to her wedding, which, of course, is paying them a very pretty compliment. Again, according to custom, and during the course of the reception, a china bowl is placed in the center of the table upon which the feast is spread, and each man whom the belle honors with a waltz understands that he is to throw with all his might and main a silver piece into this bowl, the idea being to break it, and the man who is so fortunate as to shatter the vessel is entitled to the farewell dance and a kiss from the bride. While the custom is curious it is none the less practical, as it is not an infrequent thing for the newly married couple to receive three or more hundred dollars at their wedding feast.

A Dog and a Song.

During one of the last birthday celebrations of the poet Whittier he was visited by a celebrated oratorio singer. The lady was asked to sing, and, seating herself at the piano, she began the beautiful ballad, "Robin Adair." She had hardly begun before Mr. Whittier's pet dog came into the room and, seating himself by her side, watched her as if fascinated, listening with a delight unusual in an animal. When she finished he came and put his paw very gravely into her hand and licked her cheek. "Robin takes that as a tribute to himself," said Mr. Whittier. "He also is Robin Adair." The dog, hearing his own name, evidently considered that he was the hero of the song. From that moment during the lady's visit he was her devoted attendant. He kept by her side when she was indoors and accompanied her when she went to walk. When she went away he carried her satchel in his mouth to the gate and watched her departure with every evidence of distress.

Sorry He Sued.

A stranger admitted below the bar of the British house of lords was required to deposit his umbrella with one of the attendants. The umbrella was not to be found afterward, and the owner brought an action in court to recover its value. He was successful and was awarded $5. But this was a violation of sanctuary which the lord chancellor would not tolerate. Summoning the plaintiff and his attorney to the bar of the house, he only refrained from committing them both to prison on their making a humble apology and refunding the amount they had gained.

The Small Grains.

A man recently made a fortune by picking out specks of gold from the heaps which the miners had cast up and abandoned. They were in search of nuggets and despised the smaller grains which rewarded their perseverance. And how frequently the richest findings of philosophy are in the commonplace incidents of life! In circumstances and places that seem wholly uncongenial to it the poet's heavenly attuned ear discerns a sweet undertone of harmony which all the hurly burly of sin and misery cannot down.

Showing the Way.

"Whose little boy is this, I wonder?" asked the old gentleman.

"There is two ways you could find out," said the small boy.

"How so, my son?"

"You might guess, or you might inquire," replied the small boy.

To Shine by Contrast.

Aunt—Your bride, my dear boy, is delightfully rich and all that, but I don't think she will make much of a beauty show at the altar.

Nephew—You don't, eh? Just wait till you see her with the bridesmaids that she has selected.

A Healer.

"Why, Sharpe, I'm glad to see you so lively again. You were quite lame when I last met you."

"Oh, yes, I was awfully lame then. But that was before I got a verdict of $5,000 against the railway company."

Even With Him.

Mr. Flirty (tauntingly)—I saw Mrs Berryman on the street today. She looked charming in her mourning gown.

Mrs. Flirty (sarcastically)—Indeed! It's a pity we can't all be widows

Child Study.

The study of child psychology is attracting ever increasing interest and enthusiasm. Problems in crime and insanity are becoming solvable. The right of the child to proper treatment, bodily and mental, is making a stronger appeal. It is coming to be better known just what treatment fosters a balanced development and just what physical conditions preclude the possibility of such development. Parents will know that the nervous, fractious child needs the services of a brain expert, possibly afterward of a skilled surgeon. It will be understood that stubbornness can be cured if rationally dealt with or made a nucleus of crime if murderously mismanaged. May every educated parent aid in this beneficent work by studying his own child fairly and impartially and collecting materials from his neighborhood that will give the students a broader outlook. Fair, honest statements from varying environments are of value. Read, study along this line and see what wonderful avenues of thought open up.—Health.

Perfectly Safe.

A tourist in a remote part of Ireland, having stayed the night at a wayside inn not usually frequented by visitors, informed the landlord in the morning that his boots, which had been placed outside his room door to be cleaned, had not been touched.

"Ah, shure," said the landlord, "and you moight put your watch and chain outside your room door in this house, and they wouldn't be touched."—London King.

Oranges and Tobacco.

"Did you ever notice," asked a well known physician the other day, "that men who eat oranges are not much injured by smoking? It is a fact. A TEMPEST OF BATTLE.

Stirring Description of a Cavalry Charge at Gettysburg.

A cavalry charge met by a countercharge of cavalry is still perhaps the most terrible spectacle witnessed in war. If the reader has never seen such a charge he can form little conception of its awe inspiring fury. Imagine yourself looking down from Gettysburg's heights upon the open, widespreading plain below where 5,000 horses are marshaled in battle line. Standing beside them are 5,000 riders armed, booted and spurred and ready to mount. The bugles sound the "Mount!" and instantly 5,000 plumes rise above the horses as the riders spring into their saddles. In front of the respective squadrons the daring leaders take their places. The fluttering pennants or streaming guidons, ten to each regiment, mark the left of the companies. On the opposite slope of the same plain are 5,000 hostile horsemen clad in different uniforms ready to meet these in countercharge. Under those 10,000 horses are their hoofs, iron shod and pitiless, beneath whose furious tread the plain is soon to quiver. Again on each slope of the open field the bugles sound. Ten thousand sabers leap from scabbards and glisten in the sun. The trained horses chafe their restraining bits, and as the bugle notes sound the charge their nostrils dilate and their flanks swell in sympathetic impulse with the dashing riders. "Forward," shouts the commander. Down the lines and through the columns in quick succession ring the echoing commands, "Forward, forward!" As this order thrills through eager ears sabers flash and spurs are planted in palpitating flanks. The madly flying horses thunder across the trembling field, filling the air with clouds of dust and whizzing pebbles. Their iron rimmed hoofs in remorseless tread crush the stones to powder and crash through the flesh and bones of hapless riders who chance to fall. As front against front these furious riders plunge, their sweeping sabers slashing edge against edge, cutting a way through opposing ranks, gashing faces, breaking arms and splitting heads, it is a scene of wildest war, a whirling tempest of battle, short lived, but terrible.—General John B. Gordon in Scribner's.

The Revolution In a Nutshell.

The following contribution to historic literature on the American Revolution was made by a little lady to a short story competition in a Philadelphia newspaper. The writer, a schoolgirl of ten years, epitomizes the whole Valley Forge experience in the following terse sentences:

"There was a Revolutionary war. The British revolutioned Philadelphia. So Mr. Washington took a lot of soldiers to Valley Forge. Mr. Washington haden't any thing for the soldiers to eat, so they had to go barefoot. Mr. Washington felt very bad, so he asked Benjamin Franklin. Benjamin Franklin felt bad, to, so he asked the king of France. The king of France sent a lot of soldiers, so we licked the British."

A Famous Bell.

One of the biggest bells in the world is in Cologne cathedral and is known as the "Gloriosa." It was cast from twenty-two French cannon captured in the Franco-Prussian war and was presented to the cathedral by the kaiser. It bears the German arms and two inscriptions. One, in Latin, expresses the emperor's gratitude for the divine mercy in granting him victory. The other, in German, declares: "I am the emperor's bell, and I proclaim his glory. I fill a sacred post, and I pray heaven to grant peace and prosperity to the German empire."

Reciprocity.

"Sure," said Patrick, rubbing his head with delight at the prospect of a present, "I always mane to do me duty."

"I believe you," replied his employer, "and therefore I shall make you a present of all you have stolen from me during the year."

"Thank yer honor," replied Pat, "and may all your friends and acquaintances trate you as liberally."—London Telegraph.

A Curious Royal Custom.

When any Spanish sovereign dies, the body is at once submitted to the process of fossilization, nor can it be placed in the royal pantheon until the body has been absolutely turned into stone. Curiously enough, the period required for fossilization varies considerably. Some royal bodies have become solidified in a very short period, while others have taken years before the fossilization took place. It took exactly thirteen years to convert the body of the father of Alfonso XIII. of Spain into stone.

Naval Discipline.

The force of naval discipline is shown in this true story of the captain who, fatally smitten with cholera, was being taken ashore to the hospital. The story is told in "Sport in the Navy." The captain's men were rowing as slowly and gently as possible in order not to disturb him. The dying captain beckoned the midshipman in charge of the boat and whispered these last words:

"Ten days' black list for the crew for not giving way!"

Sleep Methods.

It is said that hours of sleep can be regulated by two simple methods: First, never allow yourself to be awakened, but insist on being undisturbed until you awaken naturally; second, get up the minute you are awake. The hours of sleep will soon become adapted to the requirements of your constitution.

Largest Hanging Bell.

What is perhaps the largest hanging bell in the world is to be seen in Mandalay. This is the Mingun bell, on the right bank of the Irrawaddi, almost opposite the city of Mandalay. This immense bell measures as follows: Height to crown, 12 feet; diameter of the lip, 16 feet 3 inches; thickness of metal, from 6 to 12 inches. It weighs about eighty tons and is suspended on three massive round beams of teak placed horizontally the one over the other, their ends resting on two pillars of enormous size, composed of masonry and large upright teak posts. This bell was cast at the end of the eighteenth century under the superintendence of the reigning king.

The British government has proposed a plan for reducing the number of Irish members of parliament. Perhaps it is thought that this would be less cumbersome and more expeditious than sending them to prison.

There was a large geathering of people at Gully on Sunday to witness the Indian celebration and war dance. Owing to unfavorable weather there was not as many people turne out as there would had it been a clear day. There was about two hundred Indians present and a large number of them took part in the dance dressed in their native costume. The party was accompanyed by a number of the Agency business men who took part in the howery dance in the evening.

THE GUN WAS LOADED.

A searious accident happened at the residence of Hans Johnson in Pine Lake Township on Tuesday afternoon, by which a young man named Andrew Toft, is carrying a bullet in his thigh. Mr. Johnson and young Toft was trying to load a target rifle and the shell got stuck in the harrel, when young Toft plced the muzzle against his thigh and told Johnson to try and drive the shell in with a hammer. At the first stoke of the hammer the shell exploded and the ball psseb through the bone of Tofts thigh and huried its self in the flesh on the opposit side.

A telephone messag was sent to Fosston for Dr. Mckinnon who came up and dessed the wound but was unable to get hall out; but will preform the operatio today. The Dr. says the hall pased witin one half inch of the artery, which if it had cut young Toft would have bled to adeath before medical aid could have reached him.

ANIMAL SWIMMERS.

The Squirrel Is Very Swift and the Rabbit Is Oddly Awkward.

Almost all animals know how to swim without having to learn it. As soon as they fall into the water or are driven into it they instinctively make the proper motions and not only manage to keep afloat, but propel themselves without trouble.

Exceptions are the monkey, the camel, giraffe and llama, which cannot swim without assistance. Camels and llamas have to be helped across water, and giraffes and monkeys drown if they enter it. Now and then both of the latter species manage to cross waterways when they are driven to extremities, just as human beings occasionally can keep themselves above water through sheer fright.

A funny though able swimmer is the rabbit. He submerges his body with the exception of head and tail. The latter sticks away up into the air, and his hind legs make "soap suds" as he churns the water madly to get away. But with all his awkwardness he is a swift swimmer and is only beaten by the squirrel among the land animals.

The squirrel swims with his heavy tail sunk away down in the water and his head held high. He cleaves the waves like a duck, and a man in a rowboat has all he can do to keep abreast of the swimming squirrel.

One thing that none of the land living animals does is to dive. No matter how hard pressed a swimming deer, rabbit, squirrel or other purely terrestrial animal may be it will [illegible] water. [illegible] and otter dive immediately.

The Very First Lightning Rod.

Almost everybody believes that Franklin was the inventor of the lightning rod, and in this one particular nearly everybody is mistaken. The first lightning conductor was not invented by the genius who is said to have "caught the lightning wild and played with bolts of thunder," but by a poor Bohemian monk who lived at Senftenberg, who erected his lightning catcher on the palace of the curator of Preditz, Moravia, on June 15, 1754. The name of this inventive monk was Prohop Dilwisch. His apparatus was composed of a pole surmounted by an iron rod supporting twelve curved branches and terminating in as many metallic boxes filled with iron ore and inclosed with a wooden boxlike cover. This was traversed by twenty-seven iron pointed rods, the bases of which were connected with the ore boxes. This entire system of wires was united with the earth by a large chain.

The enemies of Dilwisch, jealous of his success, excited the peasants of the neighborhood against him, claiming that his invention was the cause of the dry weather that was ruining their crops. When the inventor laughed at them and refused to remove it they put him in prison and then destroyed his work.

M. Melsen used a triple pointed rod years before Benjamin Franklin ever thought of a lightning rod.

The King Snake's Prowess.

The most relentless exterminator of reptiles is a member of the family itself—the beautiful, lithe, yellow and black king snake, the friend of man and the avowed enemy of anything that creeps or crawls regardless of size or poison fang. A native of our own south, the king snake is between five and eight feet long and no thicker around than a man's thumb. Built in every muscle and bone for speed and tremendous constricting power, there is not another snake on earth that can withstand his assault. He is immune to the poison of the cobra and of the rattler alike, and the strength of a thirty foot python has no terrors for him. Within five minutes from the opening of the fight the king snake could kill the biggest python that ever lived. Ferocious as the little constrictor is toward his own kind, toward man he is friendly and rarely tries to escape when met afield.—A. W. Roker in McClure's.

Modern Sun Worshipers.

In Europe several persons now sedulously pay homage to the sun, and in a learned journal, entitled L'Ecole Nouvelle, one of them maintains that the sun should be especially honored at Christmas.

"Christmas should be regarded as a festival for the benefit of humanity," he says. "In this way we can once more become united with the Aryans, our ancestors, who worshiped fire and who celebrated the birth of the divine constellation, who is the father of light, of heat and of life."

He then suggests that the following prayer be said daily:

"O thou who causest lies to vanish, who drivest away the evil influence of prodigies, of malignant predictions, of dreams and of wicked apparitions—O thou who bringest to naught the plots of the wicked, to thee we pray, Lord Sun, since thou art the light of the world."

An Orchid Tragedy.

Perhaps Madagascar has claimed more orchid hunters' lives and been the scene of more revolting acts of cruelty than any other place. Some years ago a German orchid fancier, while seeking some specimens in the forests of this island, was captured by some of the native priests, who, after covering him with oil, burned him alive. Another collector who was seized by some of the same priests was allowed to choose between being burned alive or himself setting fire to some fagots on which lay another prisoner, also an orchid collector, and thus saving his own life. He chose the latter alternative and died six months later a lunatic.

Antiquity of Wrestling.

Probably the first authentic record of a wrestling match is in A. D. 1222, when chivalry on the European continent was undergoing a change for the better. During the reign of Henry III. of England a match took place in St. Giles' field, London, between citizens of Westminster and the city of London proper. Wrestling was, however, popular as a pastime in England at a much earlier period, and from that country many of the different styles originated.

New York's High Grade Teachers.

"At a recent teachers' meeting," says a visitor who just "happened in," one of the speakers made the statement that the male teachers of New York city public schools were all specialists of exceptional ability; that they were just such men as one finds outside of the city in the positions of superintendents and principals of high schools. This statement seemed to me to be worthy of verification by something more reliable than the words of an enthusiastic partisan, so I set to work making inquiries about those male teachers in the school nearest my home. The following are the data given me by the principal of this school, which, I am told, is by no means more favored in the way of appointments than the others in the system: 'Out of ten male teachers all but three could boast, if they desired to do so, the possession of a bachelor's degree. Two of the seven are masters, with some work done toward a Ph. D., and nearly all are doing some postgraduate work either at Columbia or at the State university. The three spoken of are ex-high school principals from up state cities.' My respect for the New York city school teacher has been wonderfully increased."—New York Times.

Marriage Performed by Signature.

There are always a number of marriages on board the cooly ships which ply between Calcutta and the West Indies. The coolies are very fond of marrying before entering on their period of servitude. Sometimes as many as a hundred of them will want the nuptial knot tied.

The captain of any British ship has legal power to marry people, but the master of one of these cooly vessels has grown tired of reading the Anglican service fifty or sixty times a voyage. So he has had a number of forms printed with the essential parts of the service. The bride and bridegroom step into the cabin, sign one of these forms, have it witnessed and become man and wife. No questions are asked. They simply sign their names.

It is the quickest kind of marriage on record, but the British authorities have declared it to be perfectly valid.

Hearts and Heels.

Many good stories have from time to time been told of Rev. Thomas Hunt, the temperance orator who was a well known figure in the early history of Wyoming valley.

During the civil war he enlisted and served as chaplain in one of the regiments of infantry raised in the valley. One day, in the midst of a fierce battle, the major rode up in front of the regiment and to his amazement found Father Hunt at the head of the ranks.

"Chaplain, what are you doing here?" he asked.

"Doing?" echoed the old minister briskly. "I am trying to cheer the hearts of the brave and look out for the heels of the cowards."

Foolish Fear of the Opal.

Many people to this day have a superstitious dread of wearing opals, because they really believe ill luck is attached to this beautiful stone. Three centuries ago the opal was an exceedingly fashionable gem, and the Roman goldsmiths particularly favored its use for their most exquisite settings.

The opal was at the height of its popularity when the plague broke out in Venice. Some especially observant individual discovered that when a plague stricken sufferer was at the point of death the opal, if he wore one, would grow brighter, and after his death it would grow dull. The reason for this appears to have been that the burning fever warmed the stone and that after death the damp and chill of the body dulled it. But many deduced from this a belief that it was the opal that had brought death and misfortune, and with the spread of this superstition the opal declined in popular favor.

Many persons would on no account whatever even accept one as a gift, much less wear what they foolishly deem the unlucky opal.—New York Press.

Club Benefits.

The Lime Juice Island.

Nearly all the lime juice used in the world comes from the tiny island of Montserrat, in the British West Indies. The lime grows wild in many West Indian islands, but only in Montserrat is it used commercially. That island is one vast garden of lime trees, and nowhere in the world is there a finer sight than its thirty miles of orchards, laden with the fruit of the lime or fragrant with its blossoms.

The fruit is gathered by negro women, who carry it down the hills to the shipping port in big baskets on their heads. Like all West Indians, they are remarkable for their ability to carry heavy weights in this manner. Once the company which controls the lime juice industry sought to lighten the burden of its laborers by introducing wheelbarrows.

The negroes filled the wheelbarrows readily enough, and then carried them on their heads as they had been used to carry the baskets. Many a negro woman will carry a hundredweight of limes on her head for a distance of a mile or more.—Indianapolis News.

Naming the House.

The custom of naming a ship when it is launched with the breaking of a bottle of wine on the prow is a survival of an ancient practice which had many forms. In early times, when the frame of a house was raised, the bottle of wine was broken on the ridgepole. The usage is mentioned in McLellan's "History of Gorham, Maine."

It was the custom at a raising to break a bottle of spirit on the ridgepole and to repeat some rhymes, "naming the frame," as it was called. When, in 1889, Jacob H. Clement of West Gorham raised a stable, John Phinney, an old Revolutionary soldier who was present, repeated the following lines which he said were used in naming the frame of Captain John Stephenson's house and barn, which were raised about 1775:

FOR THE HOUSE FRAME.

Cursed is the Tory's heart
Which from the congress laws depart;
If the laws they do not fear
I hope they will not prosper here,
And if the laws they do obey
I hope they will prosper in corn and hay.

Chair Postures.

It is one thing to have a chair and another to know how to sit on it. The ideal of a graceful sitting posture has varied in the different ages of the world. The Egyptian sat bolt upright, the knees and feet closely pressed together. It was the ceremonial attitude. The Greeks and Romans, when they were at liberty to forget their dignity, sat stooping, with one or both elbows supported by the arms of the chair.

The Chinese ideal was with the knees and feet wide apart. They have maintained that attitude in sitting for 400 years. The Saxons and early Norman kings are represented in old manuscript and on coins in the same position. Down to a date comparatively recent, kings and queens received sitting stiffly on their thrones, any marked change of posture being thought to derogate from the royal dignity. They now receive standing.

A Legend of February.

Here is the pretty legend which tells why February has only twenty-eight or twenty-nine days. Long ago, they say, February was a gambler, and he was so unlucky that he soon lost all his money. Like other gamblers, he tried to recover it, and he said to his companions that if they would lend him some money he would give them as security one of his days. January and March, who were naturally associated with him more often than any of the other months, accepted his offer, and as poor February soon lost the money which he had borrowed each of them acquired one of his days.

That is why January and March have each thirty-one days and February has only twenty-eight in ordinary and twenty-nine in leap years.

Ungrateful Girl.

"Miss Pechis," began Mr. Klose, "if you marry me you can be assured that"—

"I'm sorry, Mr. Klose," the girl interrupted hastily, "but it is impossible. I can never marry you."

"What! Well, if that ain't ingratitude. Didn't I bring you a box of candy last week?"—Philadelphia Press.

Nothing More Doing.

The Mistress—How long were you in your last place?

The Mistress—And why did you leave?

Cook—Sure, ma'am, all the dishes were gone.—Detroit Free Press.

What He Didn't Mean.

Mr. Blunder—Why, your mother looks as young as you do, Miss Stale.

Miss S. (stiffly)—That is not very complimentary to me, Mr. Blunder.

Mr. B. (confusedly)—I—I didn't mean that. I—I mean you look as young as your mother.

A True Philosopher.

The greatest thing we ever saw in the way of a philosopher was a one armed man in a manicure establishment who gloated because he got his work done for half price.—Washington Post.

Another club woman, Mrs. Haule, of Edgerton, Wis., tells how she was cured of irregularities and uterine trouble, terrible pains and backache by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"A while ago my health began to fail because of female troubles. The doctor did not help me. I remembered that my mother had used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound on many occasions for irregularities and uterine troubles, and I felt sure that it could not harm me at any rate to give it a trial.

"I was certainly glad to find that within a week I felt much better, the terrible pains in my back and side were beginning to cease, and at the time of menstruation I did not have nearly as serious a time as heretofore, so I continued its use for two months, and at the end of that time I was like a new woman. I really have never felt better in my life, have not had a sick headache since, and weigh 20 pounds more than I ever did, so I unhesitatingly recommend Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. May Haule, Edgerton, Wis., President Household Economics Club. — $5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

VALUABLE LAND.

Homesteader "Ran In" Half His Claim on an "Innocent" for Good Measure.

Through the hot, dusty roads of Kansas a would-be homesteader was pursuing his way to the Cherokee strip in search of one of Uncle Sam's free homes. He had his family and goods in a shaky wagon, which was drawn by two feeble horses near dissolution, says the Kansas City Journal.

"Whar you bound?" asked a farmer at whose house he stopped for water.

"Fer a hundred an' sixty acres o' government land in th' strip," responded the traveler, bombastically.

A few months later the same man stopped again at the Kansas farmer's for water, this time traveling north.

"Watcher done with yer hundred an' sixty acres?" asked the farmer, with a note of suspicion.

"See them mules thar?" queried the homesteader, pointing to a fine pair of animals which were harnessed to the prairie schooner. "I traded 80 acres o' my claim fer 'em."

"Watcher do with th' other 80?"

"Don't give it away till I get farther off. Th' feller was an innocent, an' I run th' other 80 acres in on 'im without his knowin' it."

MINNESOTA NEWS.

County Exhibits.

One of the most valuable features of Minnesota State Fair has developed from the offer of the management of special premiums for county exhibits. Competition has been keen among the counties in the last two or three fairs and at the fair of 1903 it promises to be still more attractive. More counties than ever will participate in the display, and building on the experience of former years, the exhibits will certainly be finer.

The fair management offers $1,200 for county exhibits to be divided pro rate among the county exhibits scoring seventy points or more, and in addition makes these offerings:

The fair opens Monday morning, August 31st with an address by U. S. Senator Fairbanks, one of the great orators of the upper house of the congress.

Revising the Laws.

The work of revising the statutes of Minnesota is progressing steadily, and the revision commissioners expect to have the work done at the opening of the next legislature.

The method employed is to take up a chapter of the old statutes at a time and from this a revision is made into sections. Chapters are assigned to different members of the board, and as the work is completed the board as a whole passes on it.

The scheme of the revision will be different from that of most compilations. The statutes will be divided into chapters, and the entire work will be subdivided into sections, the numbering commencing at the beginning of the book. The distinctive feature is that of making of the title instead of the chapters the primary division. When completed the revision will be submitted to the legislature in the form of bill.

Wants a Bounty.

State Auditor Iverson got a letter from a man in Little Falls, who has heard that there is a bounty for a family of seven sons straight, and is anxious to collect. He says in the letter:

"Some one has told me that if a man in the old country had seven sons born to him in succession and no females at all he got a reward from a king, and he has told me that he heard they get it here, too, so I drop these few lines to you asking you to answer if I could get such reward, as a case of that kind has happened to me."

Mr. Iverson does not know of any such bounty, and has not heard that the state prefers a straight family of boys to a mixed collection.

Turned Back.

Thirty laborers who arrived in Duluth from Port Arthur on the steamer America were turned back by the local customs officials as the men were brought in in violation of the contract labor laws. The party was composed of eighteen Italians, ten Austrians and Polanders, in charge of L. Riola, the foreman of the gang. They were on their way to Montana to work for a railroad, under contract to work for $2 per day as shovel men and $2.25 per day for rock men.

W. F. Street Shot to Death.

W. F. Street, president of the White & Street Townsite company, and widely known, was accidentally shot and killed at Bemidji by his brother-in-law, Louis Bland, 15 years old. A charge of bird shot from a single barrel, hammerless gun entered the small of Mr. Street's back at close range. Mr. Street, his wife and the boy were berrying two miles from town. Mr. and Mrs. Street were married six weeks ago.

Fatally Injured.

James Nasinie, employed as an edger at the Shevlin-Carpenter sawmill in Minneapolis, was fatally injured and died a few hours later at the City hospital. He was in charge of an edger and was struck in the side by a piece of wood which flew off from the machine and was driven nearly six inches into his body. The stick was about the size of a scantling and inflicted a deep wound.

News Notes.

A hold-up in jail of a prisoner by two other prisoners is the latest thing in Minneapolis criminological circles, and occurred at Central police station.

The 3-year-old son of O. H. Ronads, 737 Carroll street, St. Paul, while playing in the woodbox in the kitchen of his home, slipped and fell in such a manner that his back was broken. The lower part of his body was paralyzed, and convulsions, resulting later in death.

While stowing away hay, Mr. L. Noren, an aged gentleman, and father-in-law of John W. Anderson, a prominent farmer near Kensington, fell from the hay loft, fracturing both bones of his left leg between the knee and ankle.

Extradition papers were issued by Gov. Van Sant for Frank Gorman, said to be wanted in Chicago on a charge of forgery. It is charged that Gorman held a check payable to himself for $35, which he raised to $135 and cashed it. He was arrested at Minneapolis.

Eugene L. Snyder and Elmer E. Bardwell, both of St. Paul, have been discharged in bankruptcy.

SUCH A MISUNDERSTANDING!

The Man Who "Rubbered" Was Not Familiar with Talk of the Railway.

"When I saw that she was almost beyond my control," said the railway engineer, "I threw her over—"

"Brute!" ejaculated a gentleman wearing eye glasses and grassy whiskers, who was unintentionally straining his ears to overhear the conversation, relates Judge.

"It didn't do any good," continued the engineer, "so I shut her off; but still she was jumping pretty hard and sliding around—"

"Infamous!" said the grassy-whiskered man.

"Sliding around; so I give her air—"

"Ah, then you have some little instinct of kindness," growled the incensed listener.

"But it wasn't any use, and so I jumped and got away just when she began to smash things."

"And I don't blame her one bit!" asserted the man with the eye glasses and the grassy beard. "It's a pity she didn't smash you, so you couldn't come here and boast of your cruelty. I am not surprised at the number of divorces nowadays."

What Was It?

Fairpoint, Miss., Aug. 3rd.—One of the strangest cases ever reported occurred here recently. The son of Mr. G. L. Butler was very ill. The doctor said he had some disease of the spinal cord, and treated him for two months, but he grew worse all the time, and finally the doctor told Mr. Butler that he did not know what was the trouble.

The boy would wake up in the night and say that he was dying. He would be nervous and trembling and want to run out of the house, saying he saw ugly things which frightened him.

His father was very much discouraged till one day he saw a new remedy called Dodd's Kidney Pills advertised, and he at once bought some and began to give them to his boy.

He used altogether eight boxes before he was entirely cured. He has not been troubled since. Mr. Butler says:

"I feel it my duty to tell what Dodd's Kidney Pills have done for my boy. All this remedy needs is a fair chance and it will speak for itself."

"Red Tape" by the Yard.

One of the soldiers who had been reported killed in a certain battle in South Africa and against whose name in the regimental books a note to that effect had ben made, afterward turned up and reported himself. Then the sergeant made another note in the book: "Died by mistake." The man was placed in the hospital, and a few weeks after succumbed to the injuries he had received. This fact was communicated to the sergeant through the colonel of the regiment, and then a third note was made: "Re-died by order of the colonel."—London "V. C."

One Railroad's Method.

Now that the different railroads are announcing low rates to the Pacific coast it is interesting to note the different styles of advertising and the arguments adopted by the various lines to attract the attention of the public. The Great Northern railway has announced a round trip rate to Seattle and other Puget Sound points of $50.00 from Chicago and $45.00 from St. Paul, the passenger being granted liberal stop-over privileges and diverse routes returning. These tickets will be on sale Aug. 1 to 14 inclusive, with Oct. 15 as the final return limit. An additional charge of $11.00 is made for return through California.

No other railroad offers more inducements to the sightseer or is favored with more scenic attractions than the Great Northern railway. Nevertheless, while all the other lines are exploiting their health resorts and scenic attractions, the newspaper advertisements and a very handsome leaflet published by the Great Northern treat wholly on the industrial conditions and opportunities offered by the state of Washington. This advertising of of the Great Northern certainly bespeaks the policy of that company, and if other western railways would follow Mr. Hill's campaign of industrial education it would be far better for the West and undoubtedly be an indirect and lasting benefit to the railroad companies.—Milwaukee, Wis., Sentinel, July 21, 1903.

Molly Pitcher.

Molly Pitcher was bravely serving the gun after her husband had fallen.

"This will make your name famous," cried the enthusiastic soldiers.

"Yes," returned the heroic girl; "in time it may become as well known as a baseball pitcher."

On the High Seas.

At the bow of the steamer sit the two happy young people.

"How sweet it seems to-night!" sighs the girl. "How sweetly solemn is the view spread before us! Even the sea seems to be sleeping placidly ahead of the boat."

"Yes, love," agrees the young man. "It is asleep in front of the boat, but it is a wake behind."—Judge.

No Free Advice.

"I'm afraid my hay fever is coming on," said Kloseman, trying to get some medical advice free of charge. "Every once in awhile I feel itching in my nose and then I sneeze. What would you do in a case like that doctor?"

"I feel pretty sure," replied Dr. Sharpe, "that I would sneeze, too."—Philadelphia Press.

KIDNEY COMFORT.

Summer is a good time to treat Chronic Kidney, Bladder, and Urinary troubles with Doan's Kidney Pills; they conquer the most stubborn cases.

Aching backs are eased. Hip, back, and loin pains overcome. Swelling of the limbs and dropsy signs vanish.

They correct urine with brick dust sediment, high colored, pain in passing, dribbling, frequency, bed wetting. Doan's Kidney Pills remove calculi and gravel. Relieve heart palpitation, sleeplessness, headache, nervousness, dizziness.

Mrs. James Beck of 814 West Whitesboro Street, Rome, N. Y., says: "I was troubled with my kidneys for eight or nine years; had much pain in my back; as time went on I could hardly endure it; I could not stand except for a few moments at a time; I grew weak and exhausted; I could not even do light housework; I could not stoop or bend; my head ached severely; I was in pain from my head down to my heels; centering in the kidneys it was a heavy, steady, sickening ache; I could not rest nights, and got up mornings weak and tired. I thought I was about done for, when I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised. Within a week after commencing their use I began to improve, and from that time on rapidly grew better. I used five boxes in all and was cured."

SARTO ELECTED PONTIFF

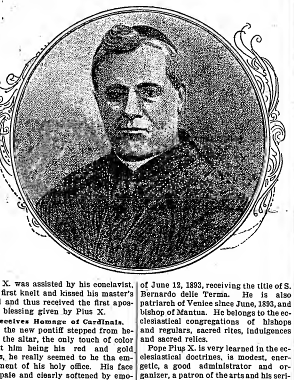
Choice of College of Cardinals Falls on the Patriarch of Venice—Leo's Successor Assumes Title of Pius X.

Rome, Aug. 5.—The conclave after being in session for four days, on Tuesday elected Giuseppe Sarto, patriarch of Venice, as pope to succeed Leo XIII., and he now reigns at the vatican and over the Catholic world as Pius X. At night all Roma was illuminated in his honor.

The election of the patriarch of Venice was unanimous. After Monday's ballot it was a foregone conclusion that he was the only candidate sufficiently acceptable to all to secure the necessary two-thirds, which the laws of the church require. One of the cardinals said that he believed Pius X. would follow the broad lines of Leo's policy, although not likely to accentuate it. This voices the general feeling here, which is one of satisfaction.

Dons White Robes of Office.

While Prince Chigi, the master of the conclave, was drawing up the official act of the election and acceptance of the newly elected pope, the latter, surrounded by his friends, disappeared into a small room near the altar, where he donned, with who can say what feelings of triumph and humility, the white robes of his office.



Pius X. was assisted by his conclavist, who first knelt and kissed his master's hand and thus received the first apostolic blessing given by Pius X.

Receives Homage of Cardinals.

As the new pontiff stepped from behind the altar, the only touch of color about him being his red and gold shoes, he really seemed to be the embodiment of his holy office. His face was pale and clearly softened by emotion. He paused a moment, as he came before the expectant cardinals, then seated himself on the throne with a hurried movement, as though he had suddenly grown weak. His back was to the altar and he was enthroned to serve the so-called "first obedience" of the cardinals.

All kissed his hand and feet, while he saluted each on the cheek with the kiss of peace. Then all broke into the Te Deum with such effect that scarcely an eye was dry.

Blessing of New Pope.

Pius X. then rose and in a voice at first tremulous, but gradually becoming full and firm, administered the papal blessing to all of the members of the sacred college. It was received with bowed and uncovered heads.

The fisherman's ring not yet having been found, a new one designed by Camerlengo Oreglia was placed on the pontiff's finger as a symbol of renewed power and evidence that the Catholic church has once more a sovereign head.

Joins His Court.

After a short rest, imposed by the fatigue and emotion of his election, Pius X. joined his court in the ducal hall for the solemn benediction which he was about to give to the people of Rome. The procession traversed many noble halls, until it approached the window looking into St. Peter's. From below rose a murmur of voices, which, although subdued by distance, denoted the presence of a large concourse of people. The pope was seen to grow pale, and then, turning to Cardinal Bacilieri, who stood beside him, he said:

"Now I understand the emotion Pope Leo always showed when going into St. Peter's to have the eyes of a great crowd focused on him. It is almost terrifying."

New Pope Blesses People.

Standing forward in the window, the others having fallen back, he deliberately controlled himself and looked across the great basilica. Crossing himself, Sarto raised his hand, and in a voice palpably tremulous, he said, as soon as the cries from below gave an opportunity:

"Ajutorium nostrum in nomine Domini."

To this came in reply from thousands of voices the cry:

"Qui fecit coelum et terram."

In a thrilling voice the pope responded:

"Sit nomen Domini benedictum."

Then, raising himself to his full height, and leaning forward as much as possible, he intoned:

"Benedicat vos omnipotens Deus, in nomine Patri, et Filii, et Spiritus Sancti," which called forth such applause that several minutes elapsed before the pontiff could retire. He then drew back and, the procession reforming, turned to the ducal hall. At the moment of leaving the window Pius X. turned to Mgr. Bisletti, who happened to be beside him, and said:

"I shall never again feel just the same emotion."

SKETCH OF THE NEW POPE.

The Successor of Leo XIII. Said to Be a Man of Liberal Views.

Giuseppe Sarto, the new pope, was born in Riesi, diocese of Treviso, northern Italy, June 2, 1835, and was created cardinal by Leo XIII. at the consistory of June 12, 1893, receiving the title of S. Bernardo delle Terme. He is also patriarch of Venice since June, 1893, and bishop of Mantua. He belongs to the ecclesiastical congregations of bishops and regulars, sacred rites, indulgences and sacred relics.

Pope Pius X. is very learned in the ecclesiastical doctrines, is modest, energetic, a good administrator and organizer, a patron of the arts and his seriousness always has been proverbial.

Early in April Pope Leo, in a conversation with Father Perosi, the Italian composer, said in speaking of Cardinal Sarto:

"Hold him very dear, Perosi, as in the future he will be able to do much for you. We firmly believe he will be our successor."

He has been known for many years as one of the greatest preachers in the church.

Pius X. enjoyed great popularity in his diocese, and was honored by all for his purity, for the strict uprightness of his life and for liberal ideas. He is a modest and agreeable man, highly cultivated, kind-hearted, still strong and robust in spite of his 68 years. He has never taken much part in the political and public life of the church, but has divided his time between study and good works.

Although most faithful to the holy see, he was presented to the king and queen of Italy in Venice. He may be considered among the more liberal members of the Italian episcopate and sacred college. He is rather timid in expressing an opinion. It is said that Leo XIII. always thought very highly of him and sided with him on one occasion when Sarto disapproved of Rampolla's policy.

Pius Sees American Pilgrims.

Rome, Aug. 6.—Pope Pius X. Wednesday received the members of the American pilgrimage to Rome, led by Father McGowan, of New York. This constitutes an event of considerable significance, the American pilgrims being thus the first to be admitted to the presence of the new pontiff.

More Cardinals for America.

Rome, Aug. 6.—It is the gossip of Rome that the new pope will shortly create at least two, and perhaps four, more American cardinals. It is said with some show of authority that Archbishop Farley, of New York, is certain to be one of these, and Archbishop Ireland, of St. Paul, another. It is also reported that the cardinal's hat may be bestowed upon Archbishop Quigley, of Chicago, but there is less basis for this report. It is not improbable that a cardinal may be created for the Philippines.

ROUND ABOUT THE STATE.

A tramp was nearly killed by the cars at Hastings.

William Howatt, a farmer near Lake City, lost two stacks of grain by lightning.

Raymond Maybury was drowned in the Mississippi river at Winona. He fell from a raft.

Alfred Bion, stopping at the St. James Hotel, Minneapolis, was robbed of $280 while asleep.

The public school at Foley has been accorded a place in the list for graded schools of the state.

A man over at Blackduck broke up a religious meeting by rushing in and hugging the preacher.

An unknown man attempted to kidnap the five year old son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Horovitz, of Moorhead.

John Barfiend's house at Lake City was struck by lightning and he was knocked down but not hurt.

The annual convention of the National Horseshoers' Association will be held in St. Paul from October 12 to 22.

Work has begun on the new dormitory for boys at the state agricultural school and it will be completed about Dec. 1.

Authority has been granted for the organization of the First National bank of Farmington, with a capital of $25,000.

Wheat for September delivery sold above 80 cents in Minneapolis, the highest price recorded for three years at this time.

The twenty-second annual convention of the National Funeral Directors' Association will be held in Minneapolis Aug. 19 to 22.

Andrew Anell, a farmer aged 77 years, living on the Willow Creek road, ten miles north of St. Paul, was killed by a Soo train.

As the date of the state fair draws near the prospects for an enormous exhibit of agricultural products of the state grow brighter.

Herman Holt, a Western Union messenger boy, was injured at Fourth and Wabasha streets, St. Paul, by being run down by an automobile.

Edwin Houg of Rochester was beaten until unconscious and thrown in a slough on the island across the river from Red Wing by William Lind.

John Keller, a laboring man who claims to live in Chicago, was shot by two thugs who held him up in the Soo yards in Northeast Minneapolis.

Sixteen schools were recommended by A. W. Rankin, as additions to the list of accredited schools, at a meeting of the state high school board.

An explosion of gas in the vault of the Soo line freight office in St. Paul resulted in the severe burning of Daniel Desmond, 22 years old, a clerk.

J. D. Howard of Duluth has purchased 7,000 acres of prospective iron ore land in Ontario, east of the Gunflint range, from the Canadian government.

Peter Sterk, an Austrian about 19 years of age, while greasing a wheel where a wire rope extended near by, caught his head in the rope and was decapitated at Ely.

The mill owners here are making arrangements to rebuild the dam at the outlet of Otter Tail lake in order to regulate the flow of the river through Fergus Falls.

Frederick Deming Tucker, of the University of Minnesota, has been chosen the president of the Memorial University of the Sons of Veterans, which is situated at Mason City.

Peter Seebara, a workman in the planing mill at Little Falls was caught in the machinery and killed. Every bone in his body was broken and part of his head pulled off.

Wm. Schultz of the town of Lakeland was killed in a runaway accident. His team became unmanageable and ran against a tree, throwing him out and crushing his skull.

The board of state capital commissioners began condemnation proceedings in the district court to obtain possession of several lots which are desired for the approach to the capitol.

Adjutant General Corbin today wired General McArthur at San Francisco authorizing him to permit the use of a hundred cavalry mounts for the Minnesota G. A. R. in the parade Aug. 24.

The law passed by the legislature requiring all trading stamp companies to make their stamps read good for a cash value or a premium, at the option of the holder, went into effect Aug. 1.

Personal assurances have been received from Secretary Wilson of the department of agriculture that he will attend the meeting of the National Forestry Association in Minneapolis, Aug. 25.

The directors of the Chicago Great Western have declared a semi-annual dividend of 2½ per cent on the preferred "A" stock, which will be paid to stockholders of record Aug. 14, on the 31st inst.

As Pope Pius X was crowned on last sunday, we can now expect the dailey newspapers to return to giveing us the latest news about southern negro lynchings.

THE picture of Pope Leo has not yet been published as the user of Peruna. There is a lack of enterprise some place, or can it be he reached the age of 93, without the aid of, patent medicine.

AND now it is reported, that the vagabond element of the Negros, are moveing nortward to escape being lynched in the south, hut if they commit some of their horrible crimes up this way, Minnesotans would not do a "thing", to to them,

Crookston Times.—Why not run Grover Cleveland for vice president with Roosvelt on an anti-race sueside platform. The vice presidency would be an easy berth for the sage of Princeton and would give him plenty of time for fishing.

EDDY is not taken seriously as a candidate for governor, says the political reporter for the Crookston Times, "but is whipping the northern countys of the state in line for Duun."

We do not know where the afoesaid politician could have gained his imformation, but are quite positive, that F.M. Eddy will not be found in the northern part of this state working in the interest of Mr. Dunn, if he does not become an active candidate himself.

The Iron Pillar of Delhi.

The famous iron pillar of Delhi is dealt with in Cassier's Magazine. The pillar is a solid shaft of wrought iron, sixteen inches in diameter and of a length that is variously reported. The total length is from forty-eight to sixty feet under ground and above, including a capital of three and one-half feet. The pillar contains about eighty cubic feet of metal and weighs about seventeen tons. The metal is, of course, charcoal iron, made directly from ore in small billets; but how it was welded up no one can tell, as no record exists of any early method of dealing with great masses of wrought iron. An inscription roughly cut or punched upon the column states that Rajah Dhara subdued a people in the Surdhu, named Vahlikos, and obtained with his own arm an undivided sovereignty on the earth for a long period. The date of the inscription has been referred to the third or fourth century after Christ, but on this authorities are at variance.

Another Name For It.

"And now," said the inquisitive person who had been asking all sorts of impertinent questions of the rawboned mountaineer who sat at his cabin door smoking a corncob pipe—"now I will explain to you why I have been so inquisitive. I am a sociological investigator and I am doing this in the interest of science and humanity."

"Haow things do change!" remarked the mountaineer as he leisurely stretched himself. "Whenst I were a boy we called you kind o' people dern snoop nosed meddlers."—Baltimore American.

An Ardent Reader.

"Well," said the sheriff, with an air of satisfaction, "noospapers don't make no great sight out o' me, now I tell ye, for it's seldom ever I set down to look at one on 'em. I got a book up home there I take an' read out on, ef I ain't got nothin' better to do. The Lawyer's Rule.

"Ever since beginning the practice of law," said a Detroit lawyer, who begged that his name be suppressed, "I have made it a rule not to take cases in which I could not promise my client a percentage of gain over my fees. One day not long ago a business man came to me with a request to sue a debtor. I found it would cost far more than could be recovered and told him so. He was indignant and left vowing to get a lawyer to press the case regardless of expenses.

"A few weeks later he came to me again. 'Well,' said he, 'I took your advice and saved $250 by it. Now, I want you to take charge of all legal matters affecting the Blank corporation. Your retainer will be $2,000 per year.' I took it, it is needless to say."—Detroit News.

Toad and Not a Toad.

One of the queerest reptiles in the world is the horned toad of Arizona. In the first place, though it looks like a toad and is so called, it isn't a toad at all, but a lizard. It lives nowhere save in the desert and feeds on hard shelled beetles and other insects.

One of the oddest things about the creature is its way of fighting. Two horned toads will meet and fight like bulls by butting, not apparently with any notion of killing each other, but each trying to turn its adversary over. The toad that is finally upset goes away humiliated and hides himself.

The Friendly Catfish.

There is a species of fish that never looks at the clothes of the man who throws in the bait, a fish that takes whatever is thrown to it, and when once hold of the hook never tries to shake a friend, but submits to the inevitable, crosses his legs and says "Now I lay me" and comes out on the bank and seems to enjoy being taken. It is a fish that is a friend of the poor, and one that will sacrifice itself in the interest of humanity. That is the fish that the state should adopt as its trademark and cultivate friendly relations with and stand by. We allude to the bullhead. The bullhead never went back on a friend.

To catch the bullhead it is not necessary to tempt his appetite with a porterhouse steak or to display an expensive lot of fishing tackle. A pin hook, a piece of liver and a cistern pole are all the capital required to catch a bullhead. He lies upon the bottom of a stream or pond in the mud thinking. There is no fish that does more thinking or has a better head for grasping great questions, or chunks of liver than the bullhead. The bullhead has a fine little rubber skin that is as far ahead of hamstring material for strength and durability as possible.

PLANT EVOLUTION.

Cultivation Has Done Wonders For Fruit and Vegetables.

There are few more wrongly named things in the world than the Jerusalem artichoke. In the first place it never came from Jerusalem at all. And in the second it is not really an artichoke, but a sunflower with its tubers developed by cultivation.

Cultivation has done wonders for fruit and vegetables.

For instance, through its means peaches, apricots and nectarines have been developed from the almond, to which family all three fruits belong.

There is little apparent connection between the wild crab of the hedgerows and a Newtown pippin, but both are members of the same genus. Indeed, it is from this same wild crabapple that the whole of the 700 odd existing varieties of apples have been raised.

Technically speaking, too, the pear is an apple, and so are the medlar and the mountain ash, which latter is not an ash at all.

Is a turnip a cabbage? Yes, one variety at least of it is. This is the queer vegetable known as kohlrabi, which, although classed by scientists among the Brassica, or cabbage, family, has huge roots just like a turnip.

The cucumber is really a fruit and not a vegetable. The same remark applies to the tomato, which is really a fruit also.

The gooseberry is a currant. It is not the least like it in either appearance or flavor, yet both belong to the same family of Ribes.

The onion is a charming little flower, its various species bearing white, yellow, blue and rose colored blossoms, many produced in beautiful drooping clusters. Originally the onion was a flowering plant, but the cultivation of certain of its varieties has produced the now world famous vegetable.

When is a chestnut not a chestnut? When it is a horse chestnut. This is another of the curiosities of the classification of horticultural nomenclature. The horse chestnut is Æsculus, and the other kind Castanea.

CARE FOR SLEEPERS

A CLUB WHERE DOZING MEMBERS ARE NEVER DISTURBED.

There Is a Good Reason For This Custom, Which Is Not Allowed to Be Violated—A Short Sleep Which Culminated In a Tragedy.

There is an exclusive club in upper New York where the employees are forbidden from awakening any member who drops asleep in his chair in the library or sitting room. If a visitor inquires for him he is "out." Other members, if they see him, carry on their conversation in low tones or go to the smoking room or cafe. Very few new members are admitted to the club, but those who are fortunate enough to get in or those who bring visitors are reminded of this custom.

A physician who belongs to the club explained the reason of it. "It is wrong under any circumstances," he said, "to awaken a man who has fallen into a natural sleep. How do you know but it is the first time he has been able to sleep for hours or even days? This phenomenon of sleep is a very complicated one. There are many grades of sleep, and they affect different men in different ways. Dreams are the result of defective, or partial sleep, and their common occurrence in the lighter varieties of the state shows that the rest taken by most persons is not profound or continuous even while it lasts.

"Don't you know that scores of persons in New York take a long trolley ride in the evening simply to produce a feeling of sleepiness? If a man looks straight ahead of him or reads a newspaper his ride will do him little good. He might as well remain at home on his front stoop. But if he looks about him, constantly shifting his gaze from one scene to another, he gets into a state of drowsiness such as is brought about by artificial means when it is called hypnotism. That is why so many men feel like dozing in the club after they come in from a ride or a drive in the park.

"Sleep induced by overeating is not natural. That brought about by stimulants is nothing but blood poisoning and stupor. It may be desirable and even necessary in some cases to produce this stupor. But the state into which the brain is thrown is not sleep. If natural sleep follows, it is a contingency and not the effect of the stimulant. But I was going to tell you a story, not deliver a medical lecture. I must not mention names, but many old club men of New York will remember the tragedy.

"There was a man who was quite prominent, both in a business and social way, in the life of this city. A dreadful family misfortune brought on insomnia. He would sometimes go forty-eight hours without sleep; then after a normal night or two he would not be able to sleep for a week. All his life until his trouble came upon him he had been habitually a heavy sleeper. After two or three months of this insomnia attack his health began to give way. Physicians tried all the usual means of overcoming the difficulty, but failed. He was prescribed sleeping drafts until it became dangerous to continue them longer.

"Then he went to Europe, taking a competent young physician of my acquaintance as companion. Specialists abroad prescribed walking and mountain climbing, but they discovered that there is nothing to be gained by increasing the fatigue of the body when worry of mind will not allow the repose to which the limbs are entitled. The man came home little the better for his trip. He retired from business. His strength wasted away.

"Finally by one of those curious freaks of nature we occasionally caught him dozing at the club. All who knew his misfortune sympathized with him. We moved about as though in a sick chamber until he awoke. He seldom slept more than twenty minutes, and told us that his restlessness at night continued. One afternoon he came in positively drowsy. To a friend he said:

"'I feel as though I could sleep for a week, but I can't sleep in my own home—no. Find me a bed here.'

"We got him upstairs to a room and put a man on guard at the door, with instructions to see that no servant was allowed to disturb him or make a noise. An hour or so afterward an accident in the kitchen brought the fire engines up to the door. There was really no danger, but before a ladder could be raised poor Blank's body came tumbling into the area.

"He was killed. Suicide? No. It was the opinion of all of us that sudden awakening from the first sound sleep he had enjoyed for more than a year upset his mind and that when he was awakened by the noise he did not realize where he was. In a frenzy he leaped from the window."—New York Times.

Chinese Scandal Merchants.

In China there is a profession for ladies, strange because openly and handsomely remunerated in the current coin of the realm. It is carried on by elderly ladies, who go from house to house of rich people, announcing their coming by beating a drum and offering their services to amuse the lady of the house. This offer accepted, they sit down and tell her the latest scandal and the newest stories and on dits and are rewarded at the rate of half a crown an hour, besides a handsome present should some portion of their gossip have proved particularly acceptable.—London Tit-Bits.

Our school district is somewhat short of officials just at the present time. Richard Ohm and Burt F. Umland was elected for Clerk and director at the annual school meeting, pnt did not qualify, as the former Clerk Stephen Singer did not give them written notice of their election, as the law requires. It may pe necessary to call a special meeting of the voters to elect new officers.

"Anglo-Saxon English."

There is an old fallacy that Anglo-Saxon words are the best. The fallacy is based on the belief that words of Anglo-Saxon origin are more simple and vigorous than those derived from Latin. In point of fact, some Anglo-Saxon words are obscure and long, and many of our commonest, most simple words are from the Latin. The London News tells a story in point.

A barrister more remarkable for the vigor of his address to juries than for his learning was commenting on the proceeding of the other party in a case under trial.

"I do not know what class my learned friend is going to put upon this matter, but I will not mince my words: I denounce it as plain, downright Anglo-Saxon as a [illegible]."

A WESLEY INCIDENT.

First Methodist Lay Preacher Followed In a Year by Twenty.

The societies met on Sundays, but never at the hour of church service, and, when neither Wesley nor any other clergyman was present, spent the hour in prayer and religious conversation or exhortation. From exhortation before the society to formal preaching before it was only a step, but to Wesley it seemed a very long step.

While in Bristol he learned, one day in 1739, that one of his converts, Thomas Maxfield, had been preaching before the Foundery society. He hurried up to London to stop it. But his mother, who since the death of her husband had been living in a room of the Foundery building, met him with a protest, "John, take care what you do with reference to that young man, for he is as surely called to preach as you are." Admonished by this counsel from one whose caution on all churchly matters he knew to be quite equal to his own, Wesley reluctantly consented to hear Maxfield preach. After listening, he exclaimed: "It is the Lord's doing. Let him do as seemeth to him good." Convinced in spite of deep rooted disinclination, he sanctioned the first Methodist lay preacher. Within a year there were twenty.—C. F. Winchester in Century.

Professional Trust.

To any who regard the whole legal profession with suspicion I can only answer: "You are probably right in saying that if a lawyer had played the vulture he would not tell of it, yet in truth these evil birds of prey are not the majority in the law. If they were more than a small minority our profession could not sustain the almost boundless confidence it enjoys from the whole business world. Remember, a lawyer is judged day by day, and by his deeds he is justified or condemned. If a significant number of us were traitors to our clients or if by our hypocrisy we undermined the body of professional ethics, the keen and undeceived men of this generation would not be placing in lawyers' hands every day their most momentous interests and trusting implicitly in the honesty of their advice. Suppose we do have our little professional attitudes and poses and pomposities; those are but superficial mannerisms which may make us awkward and tedious when we, too, would write a popular article, but which have nothing under heaven to do with our faithfulness to our clients. On that faithfulness we meet our judgment day six times a week."—Everybody's Magazine.

Beecher's Application.

One Saturday afternoon two Brooklyn men were on their way over Fulton ferry to the City of Churches. Mr. Beecher happened to be on board. As the ferryboat felt its way into the slip Mr. Beecher seemed to be looking on abstractedly. As the boat struck the piling at the side, which creakingly yielded, Mr. Beecher's face lighted up. One of the men, who knew Mr. Beecher's method of sermonizing, remarked to the other: "There will be something about that in tomorrow's sermon. Let us go and see." The men were in Plymouth church the following morning as suggested. Sure enough, in the course of the sermon Mr. Beecher made some such reference as this: "There are in every community men who perform for society the service that yonder piling does in the ferry slip—when they are struck they gracefully yield, yet are not quite swept from their position. They stand for principle, but they tactfully yield in nonessentials. Those buffer souls are valuable members of society."

His Second Stomach.

Smugglers' brains are proverbially fertile, and a clever expedient was once adopted to import brandy into Paris without paying the octroi duties, says the Golden Penny. For several weeks a splendid elephant and his keeper belonging to a circus had constantly gone in and out of one of the Paris gates, when one day a custom house officer suddenly thrust his probe into the creature's side. The spectators were horrified, but the elephant did not appear to feel any pain, while from the wound fell four tiny barrels of brandy. The keeper, considering that a little extra size in the unwieldy shape of his charge would not be noticed, had encased its stomach in the old skin of a larger elephant and had filled out the space with brandy—a very profitable enterprise.

A Desperate Man.

It was in a restaurant, and the young wife looked anxiously at her husband as he devoured a double portion of lobster salad.

"I wish you wouldn't eat that, dear," she urged. "You know it never agrees with you, especially at night."

"It doesn't, but I don't care," he said as he tackled a huge mouthful. "It's my turn to take care of the baby tonight, anyhow."—New York Press.

A Fair Warning.

Mrs. Greene—Well, she'll get herself into trouble if she tries her coaxing little way on either of my hired girls.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"Eh? Had a falling out?"

"Not exactly. He married her."—Baltimore American.

FORKS AND FASHION.

A Young Girl's Embarrassment and a Token of Appreciation.

She had lived all her life in a country village, a daughter of the poorest of poor country doctors, and when the great surgeon who once had befriended her father visited him in his illness the pretty daughter was invited to a dinner and reception at his house. Aglow with excitement, the girl packed her "Sunday dress" and took the train for New York.

When the guests were all seated at dinner she hesitated at the shining array of silver beside her plate, then picked up her meat fork and began to eat her oysters. Glancing under her eyelids at the guest nearest her, she blushed crimson as she realised her mistake.

Her hostess, perceiving her embarrassment, quickly drew attention to herself by telling a story, which was drawn out to the length of the course. At the end of the story, in illustrating a point, she held up a fork, saying:

"And the stem of this wonderful flower was no longer than this fish fork."

The social novice was further relieved at the meat course when a fork was quietly dropped on the table by the same hand that placed the plate before her.

When the evening's entertainment was over, as she approached her hostess, the young girl, unobserved by any one else, took from her corsage a beautiful rose, which she laid in the white hand extended to say "Good night."—New York Press.

Eyes That Change Color.

Although the eyes of children may deepen or alter in color with their growth, the change of hue in the iris is principally due to the development of disease. The most marked changes are produced by an inflammatory disease known as acute iritis. The iris of the eyes of the sufferer from this disease entirely changes color, principally owing to the loss of distinctness in its fibers, with a consequent clouded appearance. The pupil is contracted, and small brownish white specks appear in it, produced by the breaking away of adhesions of the iris to the capsule of the lens.

The varieties of color in the eyes of different individuals and of different kinds of animals mainly depend upon the color of the pigment which is deposited in cells in the substance of the iris, and the eye can, therefore, only be said to change color when there is a change in the color of the iris. The color of the sclerotic coat, or white of the eye, is frequently effected by disease or accidents, of which the well known bloodshot appearance is most common.

"Original" and Actual Sin.

A wealthy Australian Scotsman named Allan died some years ago and bequeathed a considerable sum of money to provide perpetual prizes to the Presbyterian children of the commonwealth for proficiency in Scriptural knowledge. A report of the Allan bequest committee, presented to the Presbyterian general assembly in Melbourne, contained some entertaining reading. "What is the difference between original sin and actual sin?" elicited these answers among others: "Original sin is Adam eating forbidden fruit; actual sin is Cain killing Abel." "One is good sin; the other is bad sin." "Original sin is sin without murder, but actual sin is sin; meaning swearing." "Original sin is the things we ought not to do." "Actual sin means a want of obedience; but original sin is a work of Providence."

Treatment of Bunions.

Bunions are serious and hard to treat. About the only thing to do is to wear seamless stockings and shoes with kid or fine calf uppers. Avoid heating the feet and change the shoes frequently. Any sweet oil will heal the soreness of a joint, and sometimes anointing it with iodine will bring relief. When a bunion gets troublesome the best plan is to buy a stick of sulphate of copper, pare away the dead skin and cauterize the spot. The operation is a trifle painful, but it is only momentary, while the sense of relief that is sure to follow is like the "peace that passeth understanding."

"The High Seas."

By "the high seas" referred to in article 1 of the constitution of the United States is meant the open sea—that is, the waters outside the civil jurisdiction of any country whatever, which, according to the law of nations, is limited to one marine league, or three geographical miles, from the shore. Even the great lakes, beyond the limit designated above, are regarded as "high seas."

WHY NOT SPEAK ENGLISH?

The Use of Some Words in the Singular and Plural.

Is cherub an English word? If so its plural is cherubs, and not the Hebrew word cherubim. Is lexicon an English word, and criterion also? If so their plurals are lexicons and criterions, not the Greek lexica and criteria. Is appendix an English word, and index and vortex? If so the plurals are appendixes and indexes and vortexes, and not the Greek appendices, indices and vortices. Is memorandum an English word, and curriculum, gymnasium, medium and sanatorium? If so their plurals are memorandums and curriculums, gymnasiums, mediums and sanatoriums, and not the Latin memoranda, curricula, gymnasia, media and sanatoria. Is formula an English word and nebula also? If so the plural is formulas and nebulas and not the Latin formulae and nebulae. Is beau an English word, and bureau? If so the plural is beaus and bureaus and not the French beaux and bureaux. Is libretto an English word? If so its plural is librettos, and not the Italian libretti. Why not speak English?

Crisis is thoroughly acclimated in the English language, and so is thesis, and yet there are those who prefer crises and theses to the normal and regular crisises and thesises. Perhaps they are seeking to avoid the unpleasant hissing of the English plural; but none the less they are falling into pedantry.—Brander Matthews in Harper's Magazine.

Largest Hanging Bell.

What is perhaps the largest hanging bell in the world is to be seen in Mandalay. This is the Mingun bell, on the right bank of the Irawadi, almost opposite the city of Mandalay. This immense bell measures as follows: Height to crown, 12 feet; diameter at the lip, 16 feet 3 inches; thickness of metal, from 6 to 12 inches. It weighs about eighty tons and is suspended on three massive round beams of teak placed horizontally the one over the other, their ends resting on two pillars of enormous size, composed of masonry and large upright teak posts. This bell was cast at the end of the eighteenth century under the superintendence of the reigning king.

Sizing Him Up.

Young Wife—I want to buy a hat for my husband.

Hatter—What size does he wear?

Young Wife—I declare I forgot to find out! I know the size of the collars he wears, though. It's 15. He'd want about size 18 or 20 for a hat, wouldn't he?

Looking Ahead.

A little girl aged three asked her father for more candy, but was told to wait until tomorrow. Looking out of the window for a few moments, she suddenly called out, "Papa, it looks like tomorrow now."

Southern Europe.

A traveler writes: "I have often been struck by the ease with which people in Southern Europe are amused. In Paris 100,000 people go out to Longchamps for the Grand Prix race, and half a million people go out and line the roads on their return to see them come back. In Rome at the feast of the 'Divino Amore' 5,000 people go out on the Campagna to a spot where once stood a temple to Venus and hold a picnic, while 60,000 go out and line the Appian way to see them return. In Madrid this peculiarity is even more marked. On the Puerta del Sol about a thousand people stand around and do nothing outdoors, while crowds of people sit indoors or lean from balconies to watch them do it. And in Seville the idle rich sit in clubs and cafes on the Sierpes to watch the lower classes walk by, while the lower classes walk by to watch the idle rich sitting in the clubs and cafes on the Sierpes."

Butler's Actress Wife.

General Butler deprived the stage of one of its great beauties and a most brilliant and popular actress. It is a bit of forgotten biography that he fell in love with Sally Hildreth when she was twenty-one years old and had been on the stage five years. She capitulated to the young lawyer and retired from the histrionic field.

Did Not Mean It.

"Honesty is the best policy," sapiently said the commuter.

"My dear sir, you're wrong!" exclaimed the suddenly awakened insurance agent who had been dozing in the opposite seat. "My company has the best policy. We have also abandoned the other as out of date."

Its Good Point.

Gentleman (to house agent)—The great disadvantage is that the house is so damp.

House Agent—Disadvantage, sir! Advantage, I call it. In case of fire it wouldn't be so likely to burn.

ATTRACTING GREAT ATTENTION AMONG THINKING WOMEN.

Mrs. Frances Stafford, of 243 E. 114th St., N.Y. City, adds her testimony to the hundreds of thousands on Mrs. Pinkham's files.

When Lydia E. Pinkham's Remedies were first introduced skeptics all over the country frowned upon their curative claims, but as year after year has rolled by and the little group of women who had been cured by the new discovery has since grown into a vast army of hundreds of thousands, doubts and skepticisms have been swept away as by a mighty flood, until to-day the great good that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and her other medicines are doing among the women of America is attracting the attention of many of our leading scientists, physicians and thinking people.

Merit alone could win such fame; wise, therefore, is the woman who for a cure relies upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

JUST ONE WISH.

All our lives are some of longin'
Some are longin' for their youth,
Some for eyes that looked in their eyes,
Eyes alight with love and truth;
Some are longin' for the hilltops
That the sun of youth did gild;
But I'm longin' for a shortcake
Like Aunt Esther used to build!

For a great, big, thick, old shortcake,
Like what she knew how to do;
With the top crust brown an' flaky
An' the berries peekin' through
'Tween the upper crust and under—
Let them long for youth! I'll take
For myself another shortcake
Like Aunt Esther used to make!

It must be just inspiration
That helps people cook like that!
Helps them mix the dough and knead it,
An' to slide it with a pat
In the oven in the kitchen,
An' to know how long 'twill take—
Swear, I'm longin' for some shortcake
Like Aunt Esther used to make!

If a fairy'd sometime whisper:
"Here's three wishes, bud, for you;
Wish for three things you want hardest
An' they'll ev'ry one come true."
I'd say: "You keep two, your own self;
One is all I care to take;
Just one wish; give me some shortcake
Like Aunt Esther used to make!"
—J. M. Lewis, in Houston Post.

HEROES OF THE ENGINE ROOM

"ONE of the real heroes of the sea," said the manager of a transatlantic line, as he nodded at the retreating figure of his visitor. "One of our engineers, and he and his kind save many a ship many a time at great personal risk, and are not even thanked for their efforts by the passengers.

"But that's because the latter don't know when or where or how the engineers preserve their lives, for their deeds are unheralded outside the engineers' mess and the captain's room. Yes, sir, it's true that

"They've words for every one but me—shake hands with half the crew,
Except the dour Scots engineer, the men they never knew."

The manger apondered a moment.

"I'll prove to you that these men are the real heroes of the ocean," he said, and these are the stories that he offered in proof:

A certain steamship in the Pacific trade had been sent out from her home port with the majority of her boilers out of commission. In midocean one of the few boilers capable of being fired got leaky tubes, and it became necessary, in order to keep the ship under headway in a hurricane-swept sea, to repair the boiler immediately.

The fire was pulled out from under it, the manhole lid was unscrewed and removed, and the first engineer, wrapped from head to foot in a thick coating of asbestos, crawled into the hot boiler, and with chisel and hammer began tearing out the defective tubes.

For two minutes he worked, and as he worked held his breath, for a single gasp of the fiery air in his lungs would have killed him. Then he crawled to the manhole and was pulled out by stokers.

Five minutes later he again went into the boiler. This time, after nearly two minutes' work, he succeeded in cutting away two tubes. On the third entry he removed three, and after that he spent another five minutes resting.

Then came the task of reaming in new tubes, and to do this he was compelled to enter the boiler five times. In each case he stayed inside nearly two minutes, and as he crawled out the last time he barely had breath and strength enough to say to his chief before he fainted dead away:

"It's done, sir."

As a result of his experience in that helt of heat, the man was laid up in the ship's hospital for over a week. And to this day his sleep is constantly disturbed by dreams in which he is roasted in red-hot furnaces.

This same engineer was in the boiler room one day when suddenly a valve, in among a great coil of pipes above the boilers, began leaking badly and filling the room with scalding steam. Instantly, and regardless of his own safety, he scrambled upon the pipes and breathlessly began making repairs.

He had almost finished when, as unexpectedly as the valve had got out of order, a pipe joint, below the one on which he was standing, broke, and a stream of hissing steam enveloped his foot. When he endeavored to pull it away, he found it to be tightly wedged in the joint.

He had on low shoes, and before his cries brought aid his shoe and sock were burned off and his foot and lower leg were parboiled. He was unable to resume work for three months, and today he walks with a perceptible limp. Yet he looked upon it all as a part of the day's work, and uttered no complaint.

Ten years ago, just around Christmas time, the Umbria broke her thrust shaft and floundered helplessly in midocean. The part that broke was 26 feet long and weighed tons.

Under the direction of the chief engineer, the pieces were secured and suspended by chains from the top of the shaft tunnel, and then, although the shaft threatened to fall on him at any moment, he crawled into the tunnel, found that the shaft was broken off square, so that it could not be riveted together, and spent hours in taking measurements for a collar to be fastened over the break.

He spent other hours in making and putting on the collar, all the time either lying on the flat of his back or working in a squatting position, so small was the space. All told, he labored unceasingly for two full days.

After that he slept two hours, and the 22 hours following he worked without pause until at last he had bolted the jacket in place.

The job was finished late Monday night, and the ship was got under way. Early Tuesday morning the head of a bolt broke off, the jacket slipped, and once more Tomlinson had to crawl into the tunnel and make repairs.

Again the ship got under way and again after an hour of running, snap went two bolts. And once more Tomlinson risked life and limb in the shaft tunnel.

To make a long story short, Tomlinson was crawling into the tunnel continuously until the voyage ended, but while the passengers did not know of his heroism until they landed and read of it in the papers, Tomlinson had the satisfaction at least, of knowing that his work had prevented the shaft from knocking a hole into the ship's side and leaving the vessel helpless and in peril of a stormy sea until tow should chance along.

It was a Scotchman who pried open a safety valve and prevented a serious explosion on a liner that is sailing the seas to-day.

For some reason or other the donkey engine, used for hoisting cargo and luggage, had been started at sea and a fireman put in charge of it. An hour or so later the second engineer, whose watch it was, distinguished an unusual noise among the multitude of sounds of the big ship—so keen is an engineer's sense of hearing.

He located it as coming from the donkey engine, and rushed thither. As he got near he realized that the safety valve had stuck and after he had slid down the narrow, oily companionway, he found not only the safety valve stuck tight, but the fireman asleep at his post, and the boiler all but ready to explode.

In less time than it takes to tell it, he grabbed a crowbar and was up among the pipes, frantically trying to pry open the valve. How long he worked he does not know—"it seemed years," he said; but he finally got the valve open in the nick of time and prevented an explosion, which would surely have blown a big hole in the ship's bottom.

Not infrequently the engineers are compelled to work in water up to their knees. The plates of many a ship, when she straddles a sea, move and cut at their rivets and leak mightily. Then the engineer must wade around in an engine-room flooded from port to port and give heed to nought but the welfare of his engines.

He must not think about the manifold dangers of sailing in a "leaky old tub," or of rheumatism, or other ills that will come to him from working for hours in brine and bilge water. It is a trite saying of the sea that wherever there is a ship engineer there also is a bad case of rheumatism.

It is only when a cylinder head bursts or a large valve gives way, filling the engine-rooms with scalding steam before the opportunity can be seized upon to repair the damage, that an engineer is forced to leave his post. Then it is that he has to charge for dear life up steep, narrow companionways, made slippery by engine oil, to a place of safety. And all the time he climbs upward, the steam pursues him, for the companionways are in the only opening leading out of the engine-rooms.

But it is not often that escaping steam gets ahead of an engineer, for he is a man trained to act like a lightning flash in emergencies. The emergency is not always below decks.

An English tramp once came into New York harbor showing the queerest-looking funnel imaginable. While several days out a storm carried away the funnel, and to keep their ship from having to be towed in, the engineers rigged up a funnel out of pieces of old sails, twine, rope ends, flattened out tin cans, and all other kinds of junk that they could make to serve their purpose.

This wonderful work they held in position by lines made fast to the masts, and so well did it fulfil the duty for which it was constructed that the tramp made port only a day or so late under her own steam, refusing all offers of assistance and thus saving to her owners thousands of dollars in salvage money.

"And such instances," said the manager, are almost of everyday occurrence."—N. Y. Sun.

ARID ACRES RECLAIMED.

Vast Section of Idaho to Be Opened for Settlement Because of New Irrigation Canal.

Seventy-five thousand acres of arid land will be reclaimed and opened for settlement in Idaho as the result of a deal just made by an irrigation company. A big canal is to be constructed from the Snake river, about 12 miles above the town of Blackfoot, in Bingham county, and it will run southwest 58 miles. It terminates just below the American falls, Blaine county, where it discharges its surplus water back into the Snake river.

The country that will be traversed by the canal is considered one of the most fertile valleys along the river, and for years has been an object of envy to agriculturists. The canal will be 85 feet wide at the top, 60 feet wide at the bottom, and capable of carrying six feet of water, a river in itself. It will have the capacity of irrigating 75,000 acres of land.

Ten thousand acres of school land will be watered under contracts made by the company with the state of Idaho.

The Snake river has a watershed of over 10,000 square miles. At the time when the greatest amount of water is required for irrigation purposes there is the greatest amount of water available. When the river is the lowest there is five times more water available at the point of diversion than can be carried in the canal. The amount of water appropriated, if placed upon the land at one time, is sufficient in quantity to cover the entire tract to a depth of over six feet.

ACCORDING TO CABBY.

The Trips of a Woman Philanthropist Must Be Arranged with the Deity.

A Brooklyn woman whose philanthropic efforts are mainly directed toward making life happier and better for the little folks of the crowded sections of the borough tells a good story on herself, says the Eagle, of that city. As her field of endeavor is not confined to one section of that borough, she generally travels around from settlement to mission or recreation ground in a cab. One day she was on her way to a gathering of her proteges when she espied a masculine acquaintance who had, on a previous occasion, manifested some interest in her work, and invited him to accompany her. He accepted, and they traveled down lanes and through byways heretofore unknown to him. In one of the narrowest and most crowded streets in a down-town quarter the fair philanthropist stopped to pay a visit. When she entered the cab again the man said:

"You have an arrangement with the Deity as well as the cabman when you come on one of these expeditions, haven't you?"

"What do you mean?" was the astonished reply.

"Well, your cab driver says that only the Lord knows where you good ladies are going when you start on trips of this sort."

She Didn't Care.

Maplehill, Ia., Aug. 10th.—"I felt as though I didn't care whether I lived or died, I was so miserable all the time."

In these words does Miss Nellie Barfoot, of this place, describe her condition. Every woman who is, or has been, sick and suffering will understand and appreciate just how Miss Barfoot felt, and there are no doubt many thousands of similar cases.

It is truly an awful thing when a woman gets so low that she can say "I don't care whether I live or die."

But Miss Barfoot tells a different story today, and her words should guide every suffering woman to the path of health and happiness.

"I used Dodd's Kidney Pills, and I am cured. I feel like a new person, and I would say to every woman suffering as I did, give Dodd's Kidney Pills a trial, and you will not be disappointed. They are worthy of the highest praise."

What She Thought.

A freshly made bride and bridegroom sauntered down Broadway, and the bride became angry because they attracted so much attention. The bridegroom suggested that she carry the suit case and the satchel, explaining that this was a sure way of averting suspicion. The bride figured awhile, and, after consulting the thermometer, came to the conclusion that she preferred the publicity.—N. Y. Letter.

Get What You Ask For.

When you see an article well-advertised in the newspapers, you may be sure it's a good article, for advertising only pays if the goods are honest and possess merit. The people who make a specialty of one advertised article, like Cascarets, Candy Cathartic, for example, stake their whole business existence on its doing what they say it will. They must "make good," as the saying is. Readers of this paper are urged to be sure that they get what they ask for, when they ask for an advertised article, for it's the good thing that is imitated and counterfeited. Don't accept substitutes! Insist on getting the genuine!

Didn't Like to Boast.

"How are you getting on with your music, my dear?" inquired a lady of her niece.

"Well, of course," replied the niece, diffidently, "it wouldn't be proper for me to compliment myself, but some of the neighbors have told me they have staid awake at night for hours, listening to my playing."—Stray Stories.

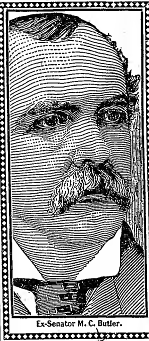
U. S. SENATOR FROM SOUTH CAROLINA

Recommends Pe-ru-na

For Dyspepsia and Stomach Trouble.



Ex-Senator M. C. Butler.

Catarrh of the Stomach is Generally Called Dyspepsia---Something to Produce Artificial Digestion is Generally Taken.

Hence, Pepsin, Pancreatin and a Host of Other Digestive Remedies Has Been Invented.

These Remedies Do Not Reach the Seat of the Difficulty, Which is Really Catarrh.

EX. U. S. Senator M. C. Butler from South Carolina, was Senator from that state for two terms. In a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Co., from Washington, D. C., says:

"I can recommend Peruna for dyspepsia and stomach trouble. I have been using your medicine for a short period and I feel very much relieved. It is indeed a wonderful medicine besides a good tonic."---M. C. Butler.

The only rational way to cure dyspepsia is to remove the catarrh. Peruna cures catarrh. Peruna does not produce artificial digestion. It cures catarrh and leaves the stomach to perform digestion in a natural way. This is vastly better and safer than resorting to artificial methods.

Peruna has cured more cases of dyspepsia than all other remedies combined, simply because it cures catarrh wherever located. If catarrh is located in the head, Peruna cures it. If catarrh has fastened itself in the throat or bronchial tubes, Peruna cures it. When catarrh becomes settled in the stomach, Peruna cures it, as well in this location as in any other.

Peruna is not simply a remedy for dyspepsia. Peruna is a catarrh remedy. Peruna cures dyspepsia because it is generally dependent upon catarrh.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advise gratis.

TYPOS CLOSE CONVENTION.

Annual Session at Washington Adjourns Sine Die—Resolution Regarding Eight-Hour Law.

Washington, Aug. 17.—The forty-ninth annual session of the International Typographical union, which was convened in this city Monday, came to a close at noon Saturday. A vast amount of business was rushed through the morning, including the consideration of a number of committee reports, among them being those on label, allied trades, and the eight-hour question.

The last named committee noted the progress made during the last year in the eight-hours' movement, and favorably reported the following resolution, which was adopted by the convention:

"Resolved, That the committee on eight hours' day be instructed to notify local unions which have not already obtained the eight hours' day or made contracts binding them to its provisional institution, that it is the sense of the International Typographical union that they make effort on January 1, 1905, to obtain the eight hours' day, according to plans deemed most expedient by such local unions in their several localities."

E. J. Bracken was elected fourth vice president and P. S. Nuernberger was elected delegate to the American Federation of Labor. With the adoption of the usual vote of thanks, President Lynch announced that the convention stood adjourned sine die.

Forest Fire Raging.

Baker City, Ore., Aug. 17.—A forest fire which has destroyed millions of feet of timber and is threatening the large sawmills and ranches is raging in the mountains near Sparta. The fire has been burning for a week, but it did not reach serious proportions until Friday. If it continues to spread at the present rate the timber in the Cornucopia range is doomed.

Passes Good Night.

London, Aug. 17.—It is announced that Lord Salisbury passed a comfortable night and was rather stronger Saturday morning.

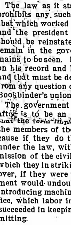
TOLD IN WASHINGTON

Semi-Newsy Gossip from the Seat of the National Government.

CONTROVERSY OVER MILLER.

Magnificent Pillars of the Treasury Building Are Crumbling—How Gen. Davis Won Fame—The Son of Ben Wade.



W. A. Miller.

Washington.—William A. Miller has become a national character all of a sudden. A few days ago he was simply a former assistant foreman of the bindery of the government printing office — discharged at that. Nothing heroic or attractive about a figure like that and no particular reason apparently why he should be forced into the public eye.

But Miller was fortunate enough—or unfortunate enough—as others may prefer to regard it—to have incurred the enmity of the Bookbinder's union, of which he was a member, and to have had it entered on the records that his dismissal from the government printing office was due to his expulsion from the union. Then he became a national figure. President Roosevelt, to whose attention the matter was called, looked into the case and came to the conclusion that no organization had a right to dictate to the United States government what sort of men should be employed, and that the only expression on that subject must come through a duly enacted law of congress.

The law as it stands now expressly prohibits any such discrimination as that which worked to Millers detriment, and the president ordered that Miller should be reinstated. Whether he will remain in the government service remains to be seen. It depends altogether on his record and his conduct in office; and that must be determined quite apart from any question of his relations to the Bookbinder's union.

The government printing office hereafter is to be an open shop, with all [illegible] the members of the union to strike, because if they do they cannot get back under the law, without the special permission of the civil service commission, which they in striking would defy. Moreover, if they were to strike, the government would undoubtedly meet them by introducing machines in the printing office, which labor influence has hitherto succeeded in keeping congress from permitting.

But, aside from that question of worldly interest, there seems to be little disposition on the part of the union workers to quit work, much as they dislike the idea of working by the side of a man who has made himself obnoxious to their organization.

Treasury Building Crumbling.

Hundreds of Cracks and Fissures.

The pillars of the United States treasury are crumbling. That is not so startling a statement as it seems on first reading; because the pillars have nothing whatever to do with the financial stability of the concern. They are the sandstone columns on the east front which for a generation and more have presented to the view of visitors to Washington the finest Doric architecture in this country.

There are 30 of them, each of them about 40 feet high, and taken together they create an imposing facade, which has won the admiration of architects the world over.

But, imposing as they are in appearance, there is a note of insincerity about them. They are built in pieces, each pillar containing seven separate sections, and they are built of sandstone. The columns on the north front of the treasury, on the contrary, are solid monoliths of Quincy granite, and while they are not so many in number, they are more impressive for that very reason.

Last summer Secretary Shaw bethought himself to clean the sandstone pillars on the east front, and he put to work on them a sand blast machine that in a few weeks had peeled from the surface the accumulated dust and grime of 30 years. The cleansing process has had two results. It has revealed to the most heedless eye the lines of division between the sections of the columns, and it has disclosed hundreds of cracks and fissures which hitherto had not been suspected. Some of the columns are cracked in scores of places like sun-baked mud, waiting only for water to settle and freeze there in order to wreck the entire column. In other places fragments of stone can be pulled out which crumble between the fingers like dry bread. It is proposed now to coat the columns with nicolite, a preparation which it is said will seal up the pores in the stone, rendering it impervious to water and acids. It is reckoned that this process may preserve the columns for 30 or 40 years longer; but sooner or later they will all have to be replaced by granite.

Feat of Gen. Davis.

Major General Davis.

Maj. Gen. George W. Davis, who has just been retired for age, has a splendid record as a soldier in two wars and as commander of the department of the Philippines, but probably he will be remembered longest in the service on account of his feat in connection with the completion of the Washington monument.

In 1884, when congress made an appropriation of $100,000 toward the completion of the monument, the chief of engineers examined that part of the shaft which had been standing for half a century and discovered that it was out of plumb. But just how much out of plumb nobody could say. The shaft was 197 feet high and looked like a factory chimney, and it didn't stand straight. That was sufficient to cast doubt on the possibility of raising it over 300 feet higher in the air, but nobody in the engineer's department could get at the problem.

Davis happened to be stationed in Washington and he said he could fix it. He was not an engineer, but an infantry officer, but they gave him a chance to try. The difficulty was in causing the plumb bobs or weights at the end of a string 197 feet long to remain perfectly steady while the observations were being made. Davis very simply got a barrel of New Orleans molasses and poured it into a glass vessel of the same size. The consistency of the molasses kept the weight at the end of the string from swaying in the air; while the glass and the fluid were transparent enough to enable the variations to be accurately observed. It was found that the shaft was five feet out of plumb. Then came the question of straightening it and again the engineers were at fault. Again the infantry officer came to the rescue, and the president asked him to undertake the job. He straightened the shaft.

To Succeed Davis.

Senator Ben Wade Was Aggressive.

Davis' successor in the Philippines will be James F. Wade, now a major general who is interesting if for no other reason because he is the son of old Ben Wade, the militant senator from Ohio, who was president pro tem. of the senate when Andrew Johnson was president and who would have succeeded to the presidency had the single vote been forthcoming that was needed for Johnson's impeachment.

Wade has been regarded as one of the most fortunate officers in the army. His promotion for many years was exceedingly rapid and there was more or less jealousy among other officers for that reason, as it was inevitable there should be. But about the time of the war with Spain Wade's luck seemed to go back on him. He remained a brigadier general while others were promoted above him, until it really began to be talked of in the army that Wade was being shabbily treated.

He has the reputation of being a good, thorough officer, and he had a fine record in Cuba, but he is quite the antithesis of his distinguished father. Ben Wade was a stalwart, aggressive fellow who always seemed to be eager to get into a fight. The son is a quiet and modest gentleman, a good soldier, but not a born scrapper.

Weeping Animals.

It is true that some animals really shed tears. Ruminants, in particular, are noted for crying very easily. All hunters know that the deer can weep. But also of the bear it is claimed that he sheds tears when he feels that his last hour has come. The dog weeps easily, and so does the ape. It is well known that the elephant weeps when wounded or unable to escape the hunter. Some marine mammals are also said to weep. Thus the dolphin is said to shed abundant tears in his hour of death. But we must not imagine that these tears are due to emotion or fear of death. They are merely a connection between the wounded part of the body and the lachrymal glands, which are strongly developed in many animals.—N. Y. Tribune.

A Good Time.

Mr. Bensonhurst—Willie, did you have a good time the week you spent at your grandfather's?

Little Willie—Rather! He let me go out to play without calling me back every time and saying: "Willie, have you got a clean handkerchief?"—Brooklyn Citizen.

ROUND ABOUT THE STATE.

The business men of Mora will organize a commercial club.

James H. Berry, chief of the fire department of Mankato, is missing. He came to Sioux City a week ago.

C. E. Miller, whose residence is unknown, was found dead in the Oriental room of the Y. M. C. A. building at Minneapolis.

The county commissioners denied the petition for a new schoolhouse district with a school house at Minnetonka Beach.

W. L. Darling, chief engineer of the Northern Pacific, has resigned to accept a similar position with the Rock Island.

The school board of Le Sueur is in confusion over the resignation of the superintendent of schools, F. W. Haft, who has accepted the position of principal of the Brainerd High school.

The state dairy and food commission has received information that a woman in Minnesota is manufacturing a preservative called canning compound, which consists almost entirely of borax, and which, if consumed in sufficient quantities, means sudden death.

One of the school districts of Todd county will not receive the regular apportionment of the general school fund, which will be made next October, because some of the teachers did not hold legal certificates.

While attempting to remove a pot of burning paint from the stove Mrs. Alex. Erickson, of St. Paul, was severely burned about the chest and abdomen. Her husband smothered the flames with a blanket, and saved her life.

A factory where sugar will be manufactured from pumpkins is being put in at Foreston. H. P. Stanchfield is president of the company and inventor of the new process. Operations will begin Sept. 1.

Figures given out by Secretary George H. Lamphere of the Minnesota Soldiers' Home showed that since the soldiers' relief fund was instituted in 1887, $709,146.82 has been paid for relief to veterans.

The public baths of St. Paul were visited by 103,465 bathers during the month of July, of which 82,160 were of the male sex and 21,305 were females. The receipts of the baths during the month were $3,617.15.

Minneapolis people who visit the next state fair will find one of the companies of the Minneapolis fire department housed in what is probably the most complete fire station ever put up on any state fair grounds.

Jonas Sarff, seventy-nine years of age, living at Branerville, dropped dead while working in a hay field. He was a pioneer settler of Todd county, and he is the third brother who has met such a death in the last fifteen years.

Dan Austin, arrested for drunkenness, at Minneapolis, made two attempts to hang himself in cell 13 at Central station and, failing in this method, butted his head against the bars until his scalp was badly cut in several places.

To Dr. C. Straub and his associates franchises were granted to construct single track trolley lines from Minneapolis to Anoka, via Robbinsdale, Osseo and Champlin and to Shakopee via Lyndale Avenue and Richfield. An acceptance must be made within thirty days, work commenced by May 1, 1904, and the lines completed within 2 years.

Statistics compiled by J. J. Lomen, chief of the state bureau of statistics, show that Minnesota is fast becoming a great honey-production state. Returns from more than half of the county assessors show an increase of from 10 to 100 per cent in the number of hives and the pounds of honey produced in 1902 over 1898.

Several university boys are spending the summer at Camp Content, on the west end of Big Island, Minnetonka, were the victims of a clever burglary the latter part of last week. The thieves went to the camp in broad daylight, while the campers were away fishing, and took everything of value.

Mrs. George Aiton, living at Minneapolis, is just now in receipt of a letter addressed with her maiden name, Mabel Niles, and mailed to her at Rochester, twenty years ago.

Harold H. Witherstone, a railroad construction engineer from Manchester, England, was driven out of Calvary Baptist church, Minneapolis, by a common house fly.

The police are beginning to think that an organized gang of bicycle thieves are at work in Minneapolis. During the last two weeks ten or a dozen wheels have been reported missing every day.

An additional appropriation of $399,543 will be needed to complete the government dams in the Mississippi river between Minneapolis and St. Paul.

A girl, apparently a stranger, 13 years of age, was arrested at The Leader, at Red Wing, for shoplifting.

The state fair managers have decided that next year the fair will be held a week earlier than usual in order to permit the school children of the two cities to attend the exhibition.

Professor J. P. Hall of Macalester will leave the college to accept the position of instructor at Princeton.

Who is the next lucky man to jump into the governors duck pond.? They will all be ducked, except one.

They are asking: "Who is Frank Eddy running to help?" Let us do Mr Eddy the honor to think he is no stoolpigeon, but is working honestly for himself.

—Duluth News Tribune.

"I am a republican candidate for governor of Minnesota in the interest of the people." F.M.Eddy.

This had ought to be plain enough to the people that Mr. Eddy wants to be their next governor of Minnesota. Now it rests with the people to say, if they want to except his offer.

We like the ring of Mr. Eddys announcement, as we was always of the opinion, that what is not worth asking for is not of any value.

Editor Foss, of the Thirteen Tows gives the citizens of McIntosh a ripping up the back in his last weeks issue for posting signs showing McIntosh many miles nearer than Fossten he says. "From the N.W. corner of Section 36 Twp. of Hill River to McIntosh by section or quater line or road, is just 11½ miles; by the sign board recently put up by McIntosh parties, it is only 9 miles. The same holds good on about four other signs recently posted in the towns of Hill River and Eden."

This is cetainly a new method of advertiseing a town, but the law makes it the duty of the town board of supevisors to erect and maintain guide boards, to direct strangers through the country, but as [illegible] to have neglected to attend to it McIntosh parties helped them out, in order to save the expense of printers ink.

The McIntosh Times, in their last weeks issue, publishes an article from The Preston Times, Fillmore County) which says." The newspaper campaign aginst the re-nomination of Judge Mills for railroad commissioner is already on." We wonder what business it is of the Preston Times, a newspaper that is published in the southestern part of the state, if the people of the Red River vally desire to re-nominate Judg Mills for railroad commissioner.

It is a showing of very little gratitude on the part of the McIntosh Times to copy "rot" against Judge Mills, in view of the fact that he came to the rescue of your Village and the farmers tributary thereto, by promptly raising the wheat blockade that was on there in 1895. But we suppose that Mr. Lenman has forgotten all about that, if he knew any-thing about it, but his subscribers have not, and he will not gain friends for himself, or his paper in that locality by attacting Judge Mills.

Judge Clifford in the Gregory county court of New York, rejected sixty applications for naturalization papers the other day, and afterwards said: "I will compel them to answer questions regarding their age, place of nativity, when they arrived in the United States, and any other questions which I deem essential to good citizinship. and if they do not make satisfactory answers I will refuse to grant them the necessary papers. when a man has been in this country five years and is unable to talk our language in my opinion he is not fit to be admitted to citizenship and I will act accodingly This is undoubtedly a step in the right direction but at the same time it is and will be hard hard for those who come to this country and settle with a colony where nothing but their native language is spoken.-

No Reptiles in Newfoundland.

Everybody knows that there are no snakes in Ireland, but very few know that Newfoundland is just like Ireland in that respect, and there is no record that Newfoundland had a St. Patrick to drive the snakes off either. There is plenty of game in Newfoundland, but not a reptile of any kind—snake, toad, frog, lizard or even turtle. Another queer thing about the province is that while some wild animals are abundant there no one ever saw a squirrel, porcupine, mouse or lynx anywhere within its boundaries. This is all the more singular because the adjoining provinces of Nova Scotia and Cape Breton have all these animals and many kinds of snakes and other reptiles.

An Achievement.

WISE MEN'S MISTAKES.

Some of the Queer Blunders Made by Famous Writers.

Now and then one meets with passages in the works of the most celebrated authors which display an ignorance of things that every schoolboy is supposed to know.

Sir Walter Scott in his "Heart of Midlothian" speaks of his heroine as having "the merit of those peacemakers to whom it is pronounced as a benediction that they shall inherit the earth." Born and bred and passing his life in Bible reading Scotland, Sir Walter was yet ignorant of the fact that it was to the meek that the inheritance of the earth was promised, and the benediction of the peacemakers was that "they shall be called the children of God."

Dickens in his "Tale of Two Cities" says "the name of the strong man of old Scripture descended to the chief functionary who worked the guillotine." One does not have to be a profound student of the French revolution to know that the notorious executioner who chopped off heads in the Place de la Revolution was named Sanson and not Samson.

The lowest pupil in the lowest class in history in the public schools knows that it was Balboa who discovered the Pacific ocean, yet Keats in his immortal sonnet "On First Looking Into Chapman's Homer" makes Cortez the man who stood "silent upon a peak in Darien" and saw the great "south sea" stretching away before him.

The great Gibbon, who was so intolerant of the errors of other men, speaks in his "Roman Empire" of "the Oxus and the Jaxartes, two rivers of ancient renown which descend from the mountains of India toward the Caspian sea." Yet every school geography shows that the two rivers flow into the sea of Aral, and the Jaxartes most certainly rises in no "mountains of India."

Shakespeare wrote of "the coast of Bohemia," and in his "Gertrude of Wyoming" Campbell had tigers prowling through the jungles of Pennsylvania. Such "ignorance in high places" cannot be excused, for, with ordinary ease, Gibbon, Shakespeare and Campbell could have ascertained the facts.

WOMAN.

Woman is the masterpiece.—Confucius.

Shakespeare has no heroes, only heroines.—Ruskin.

Women teach us repose, civility and dignity.—Voltaire.

Woman is the most perfect when the most womanly.—Gladstone.

If woman lost Eden, such as she alone can restore it.—Whittier.

There is a woman at the beginning of all great things.—Lamartine.

Woman is last at the cross and earliest at the grave.—E. S. Barrett.

A handsome woman is a jewel; a good woman is a treasure.—Saadi.

The sweetest thing in life is the unclouded welcome of a wife.—N. P. Willis.

For where is any author in the world who teaches such beauty as a woman's eyes?—Shakespeare.

Heaven has nothing more tender than a woman's heart when it is the abode of pity.—Luther.

Early Mention of Niagara Falls.

The first historical notices of Niagara falls are given in Lescarbot's record of the second voyage of Jacques Cartier, in the year 1535. On the maps published to illustrate Champlain's discoveries (date of maps either 1613 or 1614) the falls are indicated by a cross, but no description of the wonderful cataract is given, and the best geographical authorities living today doubt if the explorer mentioned ever saw the falls, Brinton's work to the contrary notwithstanding. Father Hennepin is believed to have written the first description of the falls that was ever penned by one who had personally visited the spot.

Going Too Far.

ROPES AS FIRE ESCAPES.

An Experience Which Shook One Man's Confidence In Them.

"Yes, I know that most of the boys carry a rope around with 'em," said the commercial traveler, "and the time was when I would not have taken the road without one, but I gave mine to my wife for an extra clothesline three or four years ago. I read occasionally of a rope saving somebody from a burning hotel, but I don't care to be saved that way."

"But you don't want to be burned with the hotel, do you?" was asked.

"Of course not, but if I can't get down by the stairs or the iron fire escape I'll take my chances on a mattress or a firemen's ladder."

"But what's the matter with a knotted rope?"

"I didn't think anything was the matter for many years. I used to go to bed feeling as safe as a baby in his crib, and if I found a traveler who didn't carry a fifty foot rope in his grip I set him down as a very reckless man. One day when I was in an Indiana town a lot of us got to talking about ropes and burning hotels, and a wall eyed bluffer offered to bet me $5 to $1 that I couldn't slide down my rope from a third story window and not half kill myself. Of course I jumped at the bet, but he knew what he was talking about. I hadn't lowered myself six feet before the rope burned my hands and I let go and broke a leg. The trick was tried by three others and though they escaped broken bones they were badly shaken up and tongue bitten. After my leg mended I bluffed everybody I met on that rope business, and I never found a chap who could slide down two stories and feel good for a month after. A sailor could do it, of course, but I'm no sailor, and if ever I'm cut off by fire I'll take a header for the sidewalk and hope to hit a fat man as I come down."—Exchange.

PAPERING THE PINS.

An Ingenious Operation That Is Performed by Machinery.

The first pins made in this country were very crude indeed, merely a bit of wire twisted into a knot for a head at one end and sharpened to a point at the other. Their successors of today undergo a surprising variety of operations before they are considered fit for use.

In comparison with the size of the object manufactured the operations seem bewilderingly numerous, but if there be one process more remarkable than another it is "papering the pins." The papers, having been passed through an ingenious machine which, at regular intervals, according to the size of the pin, pinches up a fold and pricks a hole in it, are ready to receive the pins.

For this purpose there is another machine, worked by two children. One feeds the pins, the other the papers. The first part of the machine is a box about twelve inches long, six broad and four deep. The bottom is composed of small square steel bars, sufficiently far apart to let the shank of the pin fall through, but not the head. These bars are just as thick as the space between papered pins. The lower part of the bottom of the box is made to detach itself as soon as the row of pins is complete. Row after row, at regular intervals, is received and passed down a corresponding set of grooves until it reaches the ready pricked paper. By the nicest possible adjustment these pins come exactly to their places and are pressed into them. By this method two little girls can in one day put up many thousands of papers.—Kansas City Star.

The Early Catbird.

At 4 o'clock the catbirds have it all to themselves, and they will not only sing their hearts out into the trees and the sky, but they will give us imitations and will sing over again all the sounds and melodies they have heard. My nearest neighbor, who builds in the Tartarian honeysuckle, comes near to me with evident comprehension of my admiration and undertakes to tell me that he is not like other birds, but understands human folk. He jumps about the limbs near to me and with whistle calls back and forth, I envying his musical ability and he possibly wondering somewhat about my books and my balconies. I should be very lonely in the country without the catbird. He only has the power of companionship with us.—Independent.

The Visitor (sotto voice)—Why do you ask your wife in French to shut the window?

Mr. Potts (ditto)—Because you are here. If I asked her in English she wouldn't do it, as she won't take instructions from me before visitors. But if I say it in French she gets up and does it at once, so as to let you see that she understands the language.—London Pick-Me-Up.

Hard Hearted.

"What's the trouble now?" asked Dicer.

"She not only broke the broomstick over his head, but made him go to the store and buy another."

THE FOOL WHO WON.

Horace Greeley's First Experience in New York City.

When Horace Greeley first went to New York city, a green, awkward country boy, he met with discouragement. For two days he tramped the streets, visiting two-thirds of the printing offices in the town and always receiving a cold refusal of his services.

His biographer, Mr. W. A. Linn, says that by Saturday night Greeley was satisfied that the city offered him no hope of a living. He decided to leave for the country on Monday, before his last dollar was gone.

It happened that some acquaintances of his landlord, who called on Sunday, told him of an office where a compositor was wanted. Greeley went there Monday morning before the place was open. His appearance was so uncouth that he would have been rejected there also if the foreman had not had difficulty in getting a compositor for a piece of work he wanted done.

This was setting up a small New Testament with narrow columns, the text interspersed with references to notes marked in Greek and other unusual characters. So complicated was the task and so little could the compositor earn at it that several men had abandoned the work almost as soon as they had begun it.

The foreman offered the work to Greeley, believing that in half a day the boy would prove himself incapable of performing it. When the proprietor saw Greeley at work he asked the foreman why he hired that fool and said, "Pay him off tonight."

But the foreman did not pay him off. This boy had worked on a New England farm, had cut wood in the winter cold and in summer had worked in the fields under the noon sun. He was not afraid of toil. He set that Testament. When the foreman examined the first proof he found that Greeley had set more type and set it better than any one else who had tried.

SHOPS OF CANTON.

The merchants' alleys are the paradise of the stranger who visits Canton, China. The shops have open fronts on either side the narrow lane, and every art and industry, the homeliest trade and the most fascinating pursuit, thrives in the dark passage. Black swinging signboards proclaim the business in characters of red or gold. Pandemonium triumphs in a series of yells as the chairmen scream for pass room. The poles hit the pedestrian in the eye, and the mandarin joggles the stranger. The native tilts his huge hat sidewise to avoid a crush, and often the coolies swing aslant in the alley or duck into a store to avoid a catastrophe.

The Chinese as a people are modest in their dress. The person is rarely exposed. Women wear double breasted sacks which fit tight to the throat, and men are usually covered. But under the stress of hard labor the man at the forge is stripped to the waist, and in the foundry a nearly nude workman strides the iron seesaw like a horse in the treadmill. The butcher cleaves his flesher on the block amid dried rats and skins of fowls stretched taut on the rack. Next door the gold beater hammers in his cave. Beyond the kindling man piles high his forest of fagots. Near by the miller is beating the meal through coarse sieves. His neighbor skins fish and hopes to sell them from the box where they float under a feeble spurt of water. In the adjoining den beautiful embroideries are piled mountain high, with silks, satins and brocaded taffetas in wondrous designs of dragons and flowers. Hau Cheung Tai patiently transfers them by the hundred from shelf to table in the hope that some stray hit may catch the buyer's fancy. Feathers are an important industry, and fans, folding or open, line the next shop, painted in every fanciful conception.—Detroit Free Press.

Grotesque English.

No doubt purchasers in other lands have reason to smile at English attempts to worthily describe English wares in a foreign tongue. It is to be hoped, however, that our business houses do not send forth announcements quite so grotesque as some that come to this country. Here is a form issued by a very considerable continental firm: "Does your dressing case need, by chance, a superfine antiseptic soap, an energetic perfumed lotion, a delicious cream, an impalpable veloutine, a very delicate and lasting extract and unmatchlessly efficient dentifrice? Or do you wish to buy those articles to make a present, the most desirable one, to a very dear person on its saint's or birth day?"—London Express.

Origin of "Pants."

The words breeches, trousers and pantaloons are now used interchangeably, but originally the significations were quite different. Pantaloons were at first nothing but long stockings worn in Italy as a sort of religious habit by the devotees of St. Pantaloon. Breeches originally reached from the waist half way to the knee and finally to the knee, where they were fastened with a buckle. Trousers are the present style of leg gear, a combination of the former two.

SAFE OPENING TOOLS.

Implements of Which Burglars Never Even Get a Glimpse.

"We have tools for opening safes," said the foreman of the machine room of a safe factory, "that no burglar could imitate even if he got them. But it would be one of the most difficult things in the world for him to get even a sight of them. The tool room is guarded as closely as a bank vault. A watchman stays in it all night. We are very careful about employing our men. They must give bonds and have the best of references. The chance of a burglar getting into our employ for the purpose of learning our methods is scarcely worth thinking about.

"Very frequently we have hurry calls for a man to open a safe where the time clock has gone askew or where the clerk has forgotten the combination. You can readily imagine that with a bank or trust company it is an essential thing to have the safe open before business begins. When we send a man out he takes a wagon load of tools, for he must open the safe without ruining the lock, and he does not know precisely what the trouble is. He carries a photograph of himself with our credentials on it. Nor will he open the safe while alone. Some bank official must remain with him, no matter how long the job takes. That is for our own protection. Some very queer alleged robberies have been charged to men sent out to open safes.

"To mechanics in our business it is laughable to read that a full kit of burglars' tools has been found beside a safe. As I have said, it would require an express wagon to carry them, and burglars don't work that way. If they care to take chances by blowing up a safe with dynamite it is another matter; but those fellows nearly always get caught.

"A police officer told me that burglars make their own tools. The big crooks are all spotted and are afraid to go out and buy the material for them. Some of them send their wives and children."—Philadelphia Ledger.

POULTRY POINTERS.

The best way to feed corn to young chickens is cracked or crushed.

A good dust bath will go far toward keeping fowls in good condition.

Clear, raw corn meal wet with water is not a good feed for young ducklings at any time.

Destroy the nest of a sitting hen as soon as the chickens are a day old. Give her a new nest and burn the old one.

Separated early and raised up by themselves, pullets are worth at least 25 per cent more for use than if allowed to run with a lot of cockerels.

On the farm if more than one breed is kept it is necessary that they be kept separate, and one or the other must be kept confined part of the time.

It is important to keep the young turkeys dry until they are about eight weeks old, and even then they should be strong and well developed. Dampness is almost always fatal to young turkeys.

Religious Training of Japanese.

Little or no importance is attached to the religious training of Japanese children. Whether the parents be Buddhists or Shintoists it matters not, for in either case the children rarely take any part in the religious life of their parents or elders, and indeed usually grow up in blissful ignorance as to what it is all about. True, they may occasionally be taken to the temple and taught to rub their palms together, clap thrice and incline their heads toward the shrine as they toss their offering of rin through the wooden grating of the huge money till. They may have some vague notion that there is something meritorious in all this, but nothing more, although every Japanese home has a latticed niche, or kamidana, dedicated to the service of the household Lares and Penates, or Daikoku and Ebisu as they appear in Japan.

Cæsar Borgia.

Cæsar Borgia has been called "the greatest practical statesman of his age," and in a sense the remark is true, for at a time when practical statesmanship consisted of every deceit and every crime, when poison and the dagger were the usual implements of policy, and nothing was considered wrong provided that the object were attained, no man excelled him in the arts of public life.—William Miller, "Mediæval Rome."

HARPOONING A TARPON.

An Exciting Sport That Demands Coolness and Dexterity.

The harpoon is cast. There is a crash in the water and a big wave rolls outward. As the skiff is driven forward by your boatman you recover your harpoon pole. As you take it aboard your first spare glance discovers the line drifting rapidly over the bow.

The line is seized loosely and paid out hand over hand. If clinched tightly there will be torn and blistered fingers. If the line is hard twisted it will suggest red hot wire. It will tear the flesh; it will kink and squirm and writhe. Beginning gently, an increasing strain is put upon the line until the boat is in rapid motion. As the tarpon feels the strain a gyrating, glistening, silvery mass hurls itself six or eight feet clear of the water.

The sight of the skiff gives him new life. His next dash carries him through a narrow channel and you lose line to him. In making a sharp turn your skiff grounds on an oyster bar. By the time you are again afloat you have out nearly 300 feet of line, with not a dozen coils left. But the boat is soon under headway, the boatman pushing frantically and the stretching of the line helps. You have taken up the tarpon's gait, his speed slackens; once more you recover line and again breathe freely.

Fifteen minutes of alternate rushing, leaping and sulking, with bubbles of air rising more and more frequently to the surface, and the end comes. The great fish rises to the surface, and, rolling over on his side, surrenders as completely as he has struggled tenaciously.—Country Life in America.

Testing the Lungs.

Draw in as much breath as you conveniently can, then count as long as possible in a slow and audible voice without drawing in more breath. The number of seconds must be carefully noted. In a consumptive the time does not exceed ten and is frequently less than six seconds; in pleurisy and pneumonia it ranges from nine to four seconds. When the lungs are sound the time will range as high as from twenty to thirty-five seconds. To expand the lungs go into the air, stand erect, throw back the head and shoulders and draw in the air through the nostrils as much as possible.

After having then filled the lungs raise your arms, still extended, and suck in the air. When you have thus forced the arms backward, with the chest open, change the process by which you draw in your breath, till the lungs are emptied. Go through the process several times a day, and it will enlarge the chest, give the lungs better play and serve very much to ward off consumption.

Microscopic Penmanship.

The subject of microscopic workmanship really divides itself into two classes—penmanship and mechanical construction. History has handed down to us many examples of this form of calligraphic mania, of which the chief symptom is a desire to compress the greatest number of words into the smallest possible space.

Pliny the Younger declares that Cicero once saw the "Iliad" written so small that it could be inclosed in a walnut shell. This affirmation was regarded as improbable until the seventeenth century, when Huet, bishop of Avranches, France, an excellent Greek scholar, proved that it could be accomplished.

The gospel of St. John and the Acts of the Apostles were written within the circumference of a farthing in the sixth century by an Italian monk.

No Difference.

Young Criminal Lawyer—I have arranged to have the prisoner's wife and babies sit in front of the jury and weep all through the trial. Do you think it advisable to pick bachelors or married men for the jury?

Old Criminal Lawyer—Oh, it doesn't make a particle of difference. If bachelors they will sympathize with the woman and babies, and if married men they will sympathize with the prisoner.

Literary Diseases.

Many occupations have diseases which are more or less incidental to them, and literature is not exempt. The two most prevalent literary maladies are writer's cramp and swelled head. The unfortunate thing about writer's cramp is that it is never cured. The unfortunate thing about swelled head is that it never kills.—Exchange.

Good Teeth.

Don't fail to ponder occasionally on these facts: That without good teeth there cannot be thorough mastication.

Without thorough mastication there cannot be perfect digestion.

Without perfect digestion there cannot be proper assimilation.

Without proper assimilation there cannot be nutrition.

Without nutrition there cannot be health.

Without health what is life worth?

Hence the paramount importance of good teeth.

A Curious Royal Custom.

When any Spanish sovereign dies, the body is at once submitted to the process of fossilization, nor can it be placed in the royal pantheon until the body has been absolutely turned into stone. Curiously enough, the period required for fossilization varies considerably. Some royal bodies have become solidified in a very short period, while others have taken years before the fossilization took place. It took exactly thirteen years to convert the body of the father of Alfonso XIII. of Spain into stone.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

Do you experience fits of depression with restlessness, alternating with extreme irritability, bordering upon hysteria? Are your spirits easily affected so that one minute you laugh, and the next fall into convulsive weeping?

Do you feel something like a ball rising in your throat and threatening to choke you; all the senses perverted, morbidly sensitive to light and sound; pain in the ovaries, and especially between the shoulders; sometimes loss of voice; nervous dyspepsia, and almost continually cross and snappy, with a tendency to cry at the least provocation?

If so, your nerves are in a shattered condition, and you are threatened with nervous prostration.

Undoubtedly you do not know it, but in nine cases out of ten this is caused by some uterine disorder, and the nerves centering in and about the organs which make you a woman influence your entire nervous system. Something must be done at once to restore their natural condition or you will be prostrated for weeks and months perhaps, and suffer untold misery.

Proof is monumental that nothing in the world is better for this purpose than Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; thousands and thousands of women have written us so.

How Mrs. Holland, of Philadelphia, suffered among the finest physicians in the country, none of whom could help her—finally cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—For over two years I was a constant sufferer from extreme nervousness, indigestion, and dizziness. Menstruation was irregular, had backache and a feeling of great lassitude and weakness. I was so bad that I was not able to do my own work or go far in the street. I could not sleep nights.

"I tried several splendid doctors, but they gave me no relief. After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I soon began to feel better, and was able to go out and not feel as if I would fall at every step. I continued to take the medicine until cured.

"I cannot say enough in behalf of Lydia E. Pinkham's medicine, and heartily recommend all suffering women to try it and find the relief I did."—MRS. FLORENCE HOLLAND, 622 S. Clifton St., Philadelphia, Pa. (Jan. 6, 1902.)

Another case of severe female trouble cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, after the doctors had failed.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I was in poor health for several years. I had female trouble and was not able to do my housework alone. I felt tired, very nervous, and could not sleep. I doctored with several doctors. They doctored me for my stomach, but did not relieve me. I read in your book about your medicine, and thought I would try it. I did so, and am now cured and able to do my work alone, and feel good. I was always very poor, but now weigh one hundred and fifty pounds.

"I thank you for the relief I have obtained, and I hope that every woman troubled with female weakness will give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. I have recommended it to many of my friends."—MRS. MARIA BOWERS, Millersville, Ohio. (Aug. 15, 1901.)

Will not the volumes of letters from women made strong by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound convince all of the virtues of this medicine?

How shall the fact that it will help them be made plain?

Surely you cannot wish to remain weak, and sick, and discouraged, exhausted with each day's work. You have some derangement of the feminine organism, and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you just as surely as it has others.

Too Suggestive of the Past.

"Yes, but they are a little sensitive about hay fever. Their father used to run a feed store, you know."—Cleveland Plain-Dealer.

Merit Makes It the World's Leader.

Merit, greatest medicine ever put into convenient form for quick, easy, pleasant use—backed by the right kind of advertising, has given Cascarets the greatest sale in the world among laxative medicines. Over ten million boxes a year are now being bought by the American people. Great success always brings out imitators, and readers are warned that when it comes to buying medicine the best is none too good, and whenever a dealer offers to sell you something just as good, put it down as a worthless fake, put your money in your pocket, and go to a store where you will be treated fairly, and where, when you ask for Cascarets, you will get what you ask for.

People who tell you they would be great readers if they had the time are not lying about it. They are simply mistaken.—Washington (Ia.) Democrat.

COMPELLED TO USE A CRUTCH FOR EIGHT MONTHS. DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS CURED MRS. P. CONLIN, CARBONDALE, PA.

Mrs. P. Conlin, 63 Greenfield Avenue, Carbondale, Pa., says: "I suffered with backache, and, despite the use of medicines, I could not get rid of it. I was compelled to use a crutch for eight months, and a part of the time was unable to walk at all. I fairly screamed if I attempted to lift my feet from the floor, and, finally, I lost control of my limbs through weakness, as I could neither bend nor straighten up to my full height, and if ever a woman was in a serious condition, I was. My husband went to Kelly's drug store and brought home a box of Doan's Pills. I felt easier in a few days, and, continuing the treatment, I was soon able to walk. At the end of two weeks the pains in my loins left. When I had completed the treatment, I had not an ache nor a pain, and I have been in that condition ever since.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Forestry Convention.

The attendance at the sessions of the American Forestry association, to be held in Minneapolis Aug. 25-6, promises to include many persons of note in government and private forestry circles. Chief among these is Secretary of Agriculture Hon. James Wilson. Dr. Roth, formerly chief forester of the department of the interior, in charge of the forest reserves, will speak on "Possibilities of Reforesting the White Pine Districts in the Lake States." Mr. Edw. A. Bowers, conspicuous in his efforts to further national forest reserve legislation, will handle the subject of "The Future of the Forest Reserves." "Taxation and Private Forestry" will be discussed by Mr. Ernest Bruncken, late secretary of the Wisconsin forestry commission. Mr. Overton W. Price, of the bureau of Forestry, gives a paper on "Government Aid to Private Forestry." "Forestry Courses in Agricultural Colleges," will be presented by Prof. S. B. Green, of the state college of agriculture. Atty.-Gen. Douglas will talk on "Planting Pine at Itasca Park." Prof. C. W. Hall, of the state university, has a paper on "Geological Features of Water Control on the Upper Mississippi Valley."

Perhaps the most interesting subjects are the papers by Mr. Eugene Bruce on "The Plans and Policy of the Forestry Bureau on the Chippewa Reservations;" one by Mr. T. B. Walker on "Our Past and Future Forestry Policy;" and an article by Mr. B. F. Nelson, of the Nelson-Tuthill Logging company on "A Lumberman's Idea of Reforestration." These will be delivered on Wednesday morning.

At the mass meeting on Wednesday evening, at which Secretary Wilson will speak, short addresses will also be given by Gov. Van Sant, Hon. John Lind and others.

The Minneapolis Commercial club will entertain the visitors on Tuesday evening, Aug. 25.

Wheat Estimates.

H. V. Jones, of Minneapolis, who is an acknowledged authority upon crop reports, makes the following estimates:

The wheat production of Minnesota and the two Dakotas for 1903 is 28,000,000 bushels less than in 1902. This reduction is in part due to a decrease of acreage and in part to a decrease of average yield. The acreage decrease is about 800,000, which, on the basis of the computed average yield this year, is equal to 10,000,000 bushels; the decrease in average of yield is equivalent to 1.35 bushels an acre, or about 17,000,000 bushels, a total of 28,000,000 bushels.

The amount of old wheat carried over to the new crop is estimated at 3,000,000 less than for the previous year, or 7,000,000, thus reducing the available northwest supply to 30,000,000 less than last year.

The feature of interest in the northwest crop this year is the loss of wheat acreage. The total is computed here at 800,000 acres less than last year. The difficulty of arriving at a satisfactory conclusion on this point is admitted, but these figures are believed to be conservative and safe. The reduction of 1,000,000 acres last year is fully sustained by the distribution.

The area, condition, average yield and total yields promised are as follows:

	Area.	Cond'n.	Av. Yld.	Total.
Minn.	5,500,000	78	13.44	73,910,000
N. D.......	4,500,000	75	12.38	55,910,000
S. D.......	3,700,000	87	12.58	46,546,000
Total				175,366,000

Cattle at the Fair.

Livestock exhibitions of National importance have come to be a regular part of the Minnesota State Fair. For three years there have been successful shows of this class. If this year's show did no more than merely duplicate that of last no more would need be said of it to induce multitudes to go and see it. But everything indicates that the forthcoming show will excel all predecessors. The National Shorthorn and Hereford Associations will again make the Minnesota fair the only state fair for the exhibition of the choicest animals of these breeds under the direct auspices of the associations. And it is possible that other breeds will be represented in a similarly conspicuous manner. At all events, it is known that all breeds will be represented by many and most excellent herds and individuals. Public sales of cattle will be held, as last year, giving prospective buyers a splendid opportunity to combine business with pleasure; profitable business with wholesome, instructive pleasure. This fair has now become too prominent, too much of a national affair, to make the showing of ordinary specimens of cattle, or offering them for sale, desirable or profitable to their owners, hence a very high class exhibit may be expected. The fair opens this year Monday, Aug. 31st and closes Sept. 5th.

BEGGAR GIVES CREDIT.

But He Doesn't Relish the Practice That Some People Have of Putting Him Off.

Chekib Bey, the Turkish minister to Washington attended in Philadelphia the recent launching of the Turkish warship Medjidia at the Cramps' shipyard.

During the luncheon following the launch Chekib Bey animadverted for a moment to the beggars of Philadelphia, says an exchange of that city.

"You have here," he said, "an enterprising and intelligent collection of beggars. One of them approached me this morning. He told a moving tale of misfortune; then he asked me for a little money.

"I put my hand in my pocket, to find that I was altogether out of change.

"'My man,' I said, 'I have nothing for you now, but in an hour I shall be passing this way again. Then I promise you you shall get something from me.'

"'All right, sir,' said the beggar; 'but all the same,' he added, fretfully, 'you wouldn't believe the amount of credit I give in this way.'"

A Little Off.

A local artist of note tells an amusing story of his visit to an insane asylum in this state. Spending as much time as he could visiting an inmate, he started down the stairs on his way to catch the train back to the city.

At the foot of the stairs stood a large clock. Taking out his own watch to compare the time, he found there was a difference of several minutes. Turning to the doorkeeper, a young Irishman, he inquired if the clock was right.

"Right!" said the doorkeeper. "Do you think it would be here if it was right?"—Philadelphia Ledger.

A German Farmer's Case.

Rich Fountain, Mo., Aug 17th.—Rev. Jos. Pope, of this place, is widely and favorably known as a clergyman who has done and is doing much for his people. He is very much beloved by everyone for the faithfulness of his pastoral work.

Rev. Mr. Pope has given for publication a statement made to him by a German farmer, who is a member of his congregation. The man's name is George Hoellerer, and he has given Rev. Mr. Pope this letter:

"Last winter I suffered very much with Rheumatism. I could neither walk nor ride on horse back nor do any farm work.

"I took medicine from different doctors, but they did not do me any good. Then I tried Dodd's Kidney Pills procured for me by a good friend. After I had taken the first box I felt already a heap better; I was relieved of the pain and could walk and chop wood; and the contraction of my fingers began to resolve.

"Now since I have taken six more boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills I feel well again and am able to do all the work on the farm."

Misplaced Affection.

The Eskimos were very angry with the arctic explorer.

"What did he do?" asked the member of the relief expedition.

"He petted our dogs," explained the native.

"Is there any harm in petting your dogs?"

"Yes; their tails were frozen stiff, and when they went to wag them they broke off."—Stray Stories.

THE SALESWOMAN

Compelled to Be on Her Feet the Larger Part of the Day Finds a Tonic In Pe-ru-na.

Miss Curtain, of St. Paul, Gives Her Experience.

Miss Nellie Curtain.

MISS NELLIE CURTAIN, 646 Pearl street, St. Paul, Minn., head saleswoman in a department store writes:

"I have charge of a department in a dry goods store, and after standing the larger part of the day, I would go home with a dull ache, generally through my entire body. I used Peruna and feel so much better that I walk to and from the store now. I know Peruna to be the best medicine on the market for the diseases peculiar to women."—Miss Nellie Curtain.

Nothing is so weakening to the human system as the constant loss of mucus. Catarrhal inflammation of the mucous membrane produces an excessive formation of mucus. Whether the mucous membrane be located in the head or pelvic organs, the discharge of mucus is sure to occur.

This discharge of mucus constitutes a weakening drain; the system cannot long withstand the loss of mucus, hence it is that women afflicted with catarrhal affections of the pelvic organs feel tired and languid, with weak back and throbbing brain. A course of Peruna is sure to restore health by cutting off the weakening drain of the daily loss of mucus.

An Admirable Tonic.

Congressman Mark H. Dunnell, National Hotel, Washington, D. C., writes: "Your Peruna being used by myself and many of my friends and acquaintances not only as a cure for catarrh but also as an admirable tonic for physical recuperation, I gladly recommend it to all persons requiring such remedies."—Mark H. Dunnell.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O.

THE BULL DOG GERM

You know how a bull dog bites.

When he sets his jaw, hardly anything but death will cause him to let go his hold.

Same with a microbe; only more so.

Get rid of him, or he'll get rid of you. By degrees, as he continues to live and multiply, he will so poison your blood, as to make you very sick indeed.

The only way to drive out microbes, is to take some medicine which will go right into, and sterilize, the blood.

Nothing will do this like

Ozomulsion

It contains a germicide which is directly absorbed by the blood vessels, and which, while enriching the blood with vital particles, paralyzes and destroys all germs, parasites and microbes.

This done, the other ingredients of this great pharmaceutical preparation, principally cod liver oil, glycerine and hypophosphites of lime and soda, proceed quickly to build up the flesh and strength of the patient, and so make him well.

Literally and actually, Ozomulsion will feed you back to health.

Do not hesitate or delay. If you are out of sorts, under the weather, weak, tired, irritable, anxious, or suffer from pains, aches, stomach, liver or kidney disorder, weak heart, lungs, consumption, or have other indications of microbial poisoning

WASHINGTON STORIES

Glimpse of Life and People at the Nation's Capital.

HERNANDEZ, THE MAIMED ONE

Extraordinary Character of Venezuelan Minister—Mrs. Cushman K. Davis' Marriage Causes Stir—Marine Band Growing Old.

Washington.—Washington is to have an acquisition in its diplomatic colony this winter in the person of Gen. Jose Manuel Hernandez, the new minister from Venezuela, who has just arrived with his credentials. Hernandez is one of the most extraordinary characters in all South America. There is no man in all that turbulent continent who has had a more stormy career. He has gone through so many perilous experiences that he is commonly known in his own country as "El Mocho" (the maimed one). He has followers who would obey his slightest call even though he led them to death, and yet he has little impressive or inspiring about to the ordinary observer—just a plain, unassuming, rather shabbily dressed South American.

Gen. Jose Manuel Hernandez.

Hernandez has been a revolutionist ever since he was 20 years old. He got his first taste of powder away back in 1868, and there has been few years since then that he has not spent more or less time in the field. Venezuela has not had a president in all that period whom Hernandez has not tried to overthrow. His last attempt was against the present President Castro.

It was only two days after Castro ousted Andrade that Hernandez raised the standard of revolt against him, and less than a year ago the beaten leader was wearing 60-pound shackles and subsisting as best he could on banana peels while suffering the imprisonment that Castro had sentenced him to. Had it not been for the joint attack of Germany and England on Venezuela last summer Hernandez would probably still be in prison. But in the face of the country's peril he was liberated by Castro, and he is now regarded as one of the Venezuelan president's strongest supporters.

Mrs. Davis a Bride.

No happening in Washington in a good many months has caused more comment than the announcement of the marriage of the widow of Cushman K. Davis. For in the past 15 years there has been no woman in the capital who was more generally known and in whose personality greater interest was shown. The circumstances of her marriage to the late chairman of the foreign relations committee, the social feud which that marriage inspired, the political fortunes which it made and marred, all conspired to lend to it a romantic interest. Added to this was the interest which attached to the woman herself in the long period of her social prominence in Washington.

Mrs. Cushman K. Davis.

When the Davises went to Paris at the time of the meeting of the peace commission, of which the Minnesota senator was a member, Mrs. Davis became easily the most conspicuous of the women attached to the mission, and her doings were chronicled on both sides of the Atlantic throughout the time of the sittings. Her receptions were the most crowded, and the number of notables in her train was greater than that of any other American woman.

Marine Band Celebrates.

The oldest musical organization in the United States has just celebrated its one hundred and fifth anniversary—for that is the venerable age of the United States marine band, which comes very near to being for the American government what the various royal and court bands are for the different capitals of Europe. The Marine band has done more for the cultivation of the right sort of musical taste in a popular way than any other organization in America, and yet it has always been compelled to labor under the greatest conceivable disadvantages. It is stationed in Washington at the marine barracks.

"And the Band Played On."

Its members are all enlisted men in the marine corps, including the leader, who by special condescension, is allowed the pay and commutation of a lieutenant. They are all, including the leader, subject to the discipline of the corps, and with the exception of the leader none of them receives higher pay than a private in the corps—$13 a month.

The only way in which it had been possible to maintain for so many years the superlative quality of the organization is by the dispensation that members may secure engagements privately to eke out a beggarly income, and the musical unions have been so bitterly opposed to this that the band has had to fight its way against prejudice and narrowness for many years.

Newspaper Men and Scientists.

The interesting contest which has been going on down the Potomac between the newspapers and the scientists, who have been experimenting with Prof. S. P. Langley's aerdome, has had rather an exciting denouement. For a month the newspapermen have been on the quivive, and Prof. Langley, during the same length of time has kept himself and his machine as much a profund secret as possible. And now the machine has been seen and judging from its antics is more of a fish than a bird, for it made straight for the water after beginning its flight. Prof. Langley has been at work on his invention for over 20 years. He is an old man now and if after the damaged machine is repaired it should still refuse to fly it will prove bitterly disappointing to him. He has devoted his best energies and beside has spent $50,000 of a government appropriation made for military purposes in his endeavor.

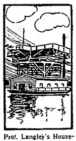
Scientist Fleeing from the Obtrusive Reporter.

About a month ago he sent his apparatus down the Potomac in the keeping of a party of scientists and machinists, there to make the all-important trial under the most approved conditions. They have a houseboat from which the machine has just made its disastrous flight and all sorts of other paraphernalia. In their trail went representatives of every important newspaper in the country. The scientists have devoted themselves to keeping out of the way of the reporters. They have been living at the Mount Vernon Ducking club, of which Prof. Langley is a member, and they have relentlessly driven out everybody who ventured too near the sacred precincts. Now it happens that there are other members of the club than Prof. Langley and they resented its monopoly by the scientists to the exclusion of everybody else. Consequently one of these, Truxton Beale, who was once United States minister to Persia, notified the professor of his intention to occupy the club with a few of his friends and the friends he chose were the newspaper reporters who had hitherto been kept out in the swamp. Then it was the scientists who had to shift for themselves.

So much for the contest which had almost eclipsed the interest in the flying machine itself.

Prof. Langley's Airship.

As for the latter much of the mystery—a mystery which has been purposely intensified by those having it in charge—has been cleared by the view which was obtained from the press boat which was not more than 20 feet from the houseboat when the aerdome left it in its aerial flight and submarine dive. It is constructed on the principle of the aeroplane, being equipped with four wings, two on each side. These wings are about four by six feet in dimensions, made of the finest oil silk and held upon delicate wooden rods. The wings are in the shape of a tent. The body of the machine consists of an intricate arrangement of fine steel rods, with the cylinders, motor and boilers carefully balanced thereon. Between the two sets of wings are placed the propellors, which are two in number. Each fitted with two blades. The steering gear is situated in the rear and is constructed from materials similar to that of the wings. The motor carried by the machine is supposed to generate something in excess of two-horse power.



Prof. Langley's Houseboat.

According to all the scientists there is no question about the ability of the machine to remain suspended in the air after it has once got a start. While the machine is being repaired the same profound atmosphere of secrecy, which even a newspaper man is not able to penetrate, prevails about Prof. Langley's houseboat, and the next flight is awaited with unabated interest.

How a Dying Man Feels.

Numerous experiments made in hospitals ond upon heroic scientists who have permitted tests to be made upon themselves right down to the moment of death, warrant these conclusions: That a dying man may be burned with red hot irons and yet not feel the least pain; that consciousness may remain in the dying almost to the moment of [illegible] people generally lose the power of thought long before death; that in cases of death where there seems to be extreme suffering, with writhing and spasms, such phenomena are generally due to reflex muscular action; also that fear weakens the muscular system and hastens death, while the reverse may prolong life.

Enemies at a Social Function.

Mrs. Lowe, wife of Robert Lowe, afterward Viscount Sherbrook, was a tremendous partisan whenever her husband was concerned. After the reform bill of 1867 Disraeli and the Lowes made no pretense to any mutual liking. At a dinner once at Lady Waldegrave's the guests had all paired off till only Disraeli and Mrs. Lowe were left. With his inscrutable smile and complete appreciation of the humor of the situation, Disraeli bowed and extended his arm, "I suppose there's no help for it, Mrs. Lowe," when both burst into hearty laughter.

Slightly Confused.

"What nonsense that man talks!" remarked Senator Sorghum as the department visitor closed the door.

"What did he say?"

"Something about a profit being without honor somewhere or other. I want to go on record as saying that there isn't a country on the map where a profit is not held in high esteem."—Washington Star.

Cruel.

"Ah, me!" sighed the forlorn Mr. Kallow. "I tossed and turned upon my bed last night, and I couldn't sleep a wink."

"That so?" replied the heartless maid. "What's the matter? Are you teething?"—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Flour and Teeth.

A valuable letter from a correspondent drew attention to an important and admitted cause of the national degeneration of physique which we have striven to emphasize in these columns: The roller mill has undoubtedly diminished the dietetic value of our bread. The entire wheat grain is of value—the husk (which is a valuable intestinal stimulant), the brown exterior and the white central core. Except for certain invalids white bread is an indefensible absurdity. Better is brown bread, consisting of all but the husk, and best is a whole meal bread, assuming such to be obtainable. The deficiency of salts in white bread is unquestionably related to the deterioration—also familiar to our readers—in the national teeth. We may illustrate this by an argument from Sir Thomas Lauder Brunton. "Why has America the cleverest dentists?" Answer: "Because she has the best flour mill makers." The better the mill is, the finer the flour, the poorer the bread, the worse the teeth and the better the dentists. Perfectly simple!—London Chronicle.

Told Out of School.

The infant terrible is always with us and in making trouble runs a close race with the wagging tongue of scandal. Accompanied by her young hopeful, a woman was calling on a friend who happened to live in one of a row of houses of exactly the same appearance.

"The great objection to living in a row of houses," remarked the hostess, "is the liability of making a mistake. Do you ever have any difficulty, my dear?"

"Oh, no," replied the little fiend, breaking in unexpectedly. "Ma says she can always tell your house by the dirty windows."—New York Times.

The Retort Courteous.

A young and popular member of parliament was addressing a meeting at which there was a considerable rowdy element present. Like the other speakers, he was frequently interrupted until; losing patience, he called for silence, saying, "Don't let every ass bray at once." "You go on, sir," said the ringleader, and the honorable member was left without a reply.—London Chronicle.

YELLOWSTONE CANYON.

At First Its Bigness and Barbaric Color Are Overpowering.

Imagine, if you can—but you never can—a mighty cleft in the level earth a third of a mile wide, its brinks sharp, precipitous, reaching over 1,200 feet downward, sometimes almost perpendicular, sometimes banked with huge heaps of talus or buttressed with spindling pinnacles and towers often surmounted with eagle nests, and all painted, glowing with the richest color—vast patches of yellow and orange, streakings of red and blue, with here a towering abutment of red and there another all of yellow. At the bottom [illegible] the top the dark green forest reaches to the canyon edge, and sometimes even rugged and gnarled pines, the vanguard of the wood, venture over the precipice to find footing on some ledge or to hang, half dislodged, with angular, dead arms reaching out into the mighty depths, a resting place for soaring eagle or hawk. The sides of the canyon being not of solid rock, but of crumbling, soft formation, have furnished plastic material for the sculpturing of water and wind, which have tooled them into a thousand fantastic forms. One's eye traces out gigantic castles, huge dog forms, bird forms, titanic faces—all adding to the awful impressiveness of the place.

For miles the canyon stretches northward from the lower falls. From numerous well guarded outlooks the spectator, grasping hard upon the railing lest the dizziness of these heights unnerve him, may behold a hundred varied views of the grandeur, looking either toward the falls, which seem to fill the canyon end like a splendid white column of marble, or off to the northward, where the stupendous gorge widens out, loses some of its coloring, admits more of the forest and finally disappears among rugged mountains.

Everywhere the view is one that places the seal of awed silence upon the lips. It never palls, never grows old. One soon sees all too much of geyser and paint pot; of this, never. At first the sensation of savage immensity is so overpowering that the spectator gathers only a confused sense of bigness and barbaric color, but when he has made the perilous descent to the canyon bottom below the falls, when he has seen the wonder from every point of view, he begins to grasp a larger part of the whole scene, to form a picture which will remain with him.—R. S. Baker in Century.

The Vision of Birds.

Birds have very acute vision—perhaps the most acute of any creature, and the sense is also more widely diffused over the retina than is the case with man. Consequently a bird can see sideways as well as objects in front of it. A bird sees, showing great nimbleness in consequence; a hawk long before it is visible to man. So, too, fowls and pigeons find minute scraps of food, distinguishing them from what appear to us exactly similar pieces of earth or gravel.

Young chickens are also able to find their own food, knowing its position and how distant it is, as soon as they are hatched, whereas a child only very gradually learns either to see or to understand the distance of objects. Several birds, apparently the young of all those that nest on the ground, [illegible] see quite well directly they come out of the shell, but the young of birds that nest in trees or on rocks are born blind and have to be fed.—Chambers' Journal.

Wealth is something that enables a millionaire to stand up in meeting and say it is no disgrace to be poor.—Chicago News.

A TEMPEST OF BATTLE.

Stirring Description of a Cavalry Charge at Gettysburg.

A cavalry charge met by a countercharge of cavalry is still, perhaps the most terrible spectacle witnessed in war. If the reader has never seen such a charge he can form little conception of its awe inspiring fury. Imagine yourself looking down from Gettysburg's heights upon the open, widespreading plain below where 5,000 horses are marshaled in battle line. Standing beside them are 5,000 riders armed, booted and spurred and ready to mount. The bugles sound the "Mount!" and instantly 5,000 plumes rise above the horses as the riders spring into their saddles. In front of the respective squadrons the daring leaders take their places. The fluttering pennants or streaming guidons, tent to each regiment, mark the left of the companies. On the opposite slope of the same plain are 5,000 hostile horsemen clad in different uniforms ready to meet these in countercharge. Under those 10,000 horses are their hoofs, iron shod and pitiless, beneath whose furious tread the plain is soon to quiver. Again on each slope of the open field the bugles sound. Ten thousand sabers leap from scabbards and glisten in the sun. The trained horses chafe their restraining bits, and as the bugle notes sound the charge their nostrils dilate and their flanks swell in sympathetic impulse with the dashing riders. "Forward!" shouts the commander. Down the lines and through the columns in quick succession ring the echoing commands, "Forward, forward!" As this order thrills through eager ears sabers flash and spurs are planted in palpitating flanks. The madly flying horses thunder across the trembling field, filling the air with clouds of dust and whizzing pebbles. Their iron rimmed hoofs in remorseless tread crush the stones to powder and crash through the flesh and bones of hapless riders who chance to fall. As front against front these furious riders plunge, their sweeping sabers slashing edge against edge; cutting a way through opposing ranks, gashing faces, breaking arms and splitting heads, it is a scene of wildest war, a whirling tempest of battle, short lived, but terrible.—General John B. Gordon in Scribner's.

The Revolution In a Nutshell.

The following contribution to historic literature on the American Revolution was made by a little lady to a short story competition in a Philadelphia newspaper. The writer, a schoolgirl of ten years, epitomizes the whole Valley Forge experience in the following terse sentences:

"There was a Revolutionary war. The British revolutioned Philadelphia. So Mr. Washington took a lot of soldiers to Valley Forge. Mr. Washington hadn't eny thing for the soldirs to eat, so they had to go harefoot. Mr. Washington felt very bad, so he asked Benjamin Franklin. Benjamin Franklin felt bad, to, so he asked the king of France. The king of France sent a lot of soldiers, so we licked the British."

A Famous Bell.

One of the biggest bells in the world is in Cologne cathedral and is known as the "Gloriosa." It was cast from twenty-two French cannon captured in the Franco-Prussian war and was presented to the cathedral by the kaiser. It bears the German arms and two inscriptions. One, in Latin, expresses the emperor's gratitude for the divine mercy in granting him victory. The other, in German, declares: "I am the emperor's bell, and I proclaim his glory. I fill a sacred post, and I pray heaven to grant peace and prosperity to the German empire."

Serpent Worship in India.

Serpent worship, once very widely diffused, survives in India. Sometimes when Hindoos find a cobra in some crevice in the wall of their house it will often be reverenced, fed and propitiated, and if fear or the death of some one bitten by it induces them to remove it they will handle it tenderly and let it loose in some field. When Hindoos are bitten, they have far more confidence in their magic spell or "muntra" than in any medicine, even if they do not scruple to make use of medical aid.

How the Forgetmenot Was Named.

Everybody knows the pretty little forgetmenot and likes the flower more perhaps because of its name than its beauty. How was it so called? The Germans account for it by quite a pathetic romance. It seems that once upon a time a knight and a lady were walking by the bank of the Danube when the latter asked her "gallant gay" to pluck for her a tiny blue flower which she saw growing in the stream. No sooner said than done, but the knight, overbalancing, fell into the river, and owing to the slippery nature of the bank and the weight of his own armor was carried away by the current. As he threw the flowers ashore to his lady he cried out with his last breath, "Vergiss mein nicht!" ("Forget me not!") And ever since the flower has been looked on as the emblem of fidelity.

A Long Felt Want.

Dr. Holmes had an odd liking for ingenious desk accessories in the way of pencil sharpeners, paperweights, penholders, etc. The latest contrivances in this fashion—probably dropped down to him by the inventor angling for a nibble of commendation—were always making one another's acquaintance on his study table. He once said to me: "I'm waiting for somebody to invent a mucilage brush that you can't by any chance put into your inkstand. It would save me frequent moments of humiliation."—Thomas Bailey Aldrich in Century.

HANGMAN'S PAY.

The Way an Oriental Executioner Helps to Fill His Purse.

In the east a hangman's trade is very profitable. As soon as a person is condemned to be hanged notice is sent to the executioner, who has the privilege of erecting the scaffold wherever he pleases, and at sunrise the next morning he begins his work. Accompanied by his assistants, who guard the condemned man and carry material for the scaffold, he goes to some prominant place in front of a large dwelling and there proceeds to erect the scaffold.

A few minutes later the owner of the large dwelling rushes out and implores him to go somewhere else.

"I don't wont to have a man hanged in front of my house," he explains.

"All right," says the hangman. "I'm willing to go elsewhere provided you pay me for my trouble in coming here and for the time which I have spent at the job."

Though the sum which he names is pretty large, the owner of the large dwelling pays it without a word, whereupon the hangman goes to another large dwelling, where a similar scene is enacted.

In this way several hours are spent by the executioner in extorting money from all the magnates in the neighborhood. When his purse is at last well filled he erects the scaffold in some dark wood, and soon the unfortunate man, who has been tramping after him all day, is at rest.—New York Herald.

The Kind of Ear That Is Rare.

The ear that Darwin illustrates in his "Descent of Man" as being allied to the pointed type belonging to our simian relatives is not as uncommon as many may imagine. It is my observation that this peculiarity of the fold in question is oftener to be observed in women, and in many of these cases the persistence of the wisdom teeth is also a characteristic. I have in mind two cases of this sort, one of a man, the other of a woman, both residents of one of our leading cities and among their social and intellectual forces.

The latter is a remarkable reversion to an earlier type in ear, in teeth, in length of arm, in painless childbirth, in flexibility of hand joints and in other marked characteristics. It appears to me that the ear, like the vermiform appendix, the suspension of the viscera, the position of the orifice of the bladder and the unprotected condition of certain main arteries, is yet in a transitional state and not fully adapted to the newer human conditions imposed by the erect position and the artificialities of civilization.—Science.

A Mortified Wife.

The Rev. John Mathews, who was a pioneer Methodist preacher of Alabama, has been remembered for his strict views and many peculiarities, according to Lippincott's. His wife, who was more liberal in her ideas, was fond of dress and once sold a bureau and with the money bought a new hat. The following Sunday Brother Mathews, being disturbed at the beginning of his discourse by several of the congregation turning to see the late arrivals, said: "Brethren and sisters, don't bother to look around any more; I'll tell you who comes in." This he did, calling each one by name, much to the mortification of the tardy members. His wife was among the last, and when she walked down the aisle he said: "Make way there for Sister Mathews. She is coming with a bureau on her head."

Philadelphia's First Book.

The first book of any kind published in Philadelphia was Atkin's Almanack for the year 1686. It was an unpaged pamphlet of ten leaves, only two copies of which are now known to be in existence. The first copy of the Almanack printed was sent to Colonel Markham, Penn's deputy, who reported to the council that the book had erroneously declared Pennsylvania to have been founded by "Lord Penn." The council disapproved such a high sounding title and directed the author and printer (William Bradford) to "forthwith and effectually blott out ye words 'Lord Penn.'" This had the effect of recalling the whole edition and the abolition of the obnoxious words.

Throwing the Slipper at a Wedding.

The throwing of the slipper after the bride comes apparently from barbarous times, when the relations of man and wife were really very much akin to those of master and slave, for it seems that the shoe was an emblem of authority, and at an Anglo-Saxon marriage a shoe was given by the bride's father to her husband in token of transference of power over her, the groom usually indicating his appreciation of that fact by tapping his new wife lightly on the head with it.

Coral From Italy.

Much of the costly red, white and pink coral used for ornamental purposes is obtained from the coast of Italy. Men go out in boats and drag the rocky bottom of streams with wooden frames or nets, in which the coral becomes entangled; but the delicate branches are crushed in this way. The finest coral is obtained by diving.

DIET AND DISPOSITION.

The Food We Eat Has a Direct Influence Upon Our Manners.

To say that food has a direct influence upon disposition is to utter a commonplace dietetic truism now accepted and acknowledged by every one who has even a rudimentary knowledge of physiology. If one is inclined to doubt this let him experiment upon the lower animals. Feed a pair of baby lions from the time they are born until they are as large as a fox terrier dog on nothing but bread and milk, and you will have a couple of docile, gentle and loving pets as playful and harmless as kittens. Take a pair of St. Bernard puppies, the gentlest of all the canine family, and as soon as their teeth come begin feeding them raw meat, and you will soon have a couple of snappish, snarling, quarrelsome dogs, inclined to fight each other and ready to pick a fight with every dog in the street. If the meat diet is persisted in they will become a menace to a whole neighborhood.

Is it any wonder, then, that some men and women are snappish, snarling and quarrelsome? We give much less attention to what we feed the human animal than we do to what we feed the lower animals. What does the growling, garrulous, grumpy old scold, who makes life a burden to his family, eat anyway? On what does the nagging woman feed? Why not look into these matters?—Pittsburg Chronicle.

The Sea Cook's Trick.

"Having tried every kind of female cook, I determined to get a man," said a portly millionaire. "It very naturally occurred to me that an ocean liner was the best place to find him. Everything is so clean about a ship's kitchen, you know. Well, I found a fine looking Swede and established him in my kitchen at $25 a week. He seemed to be all right, but presently my neighbors complained that he was throwing all the refuse out of the window. Old habit! He thought the window was a porthole on a ship. I could never break him of the trick and had to let him go."—New York Press.

The Iron Pillar of Delhi.

The famous iron pillar of Delhi is dealt with in Cassier's Magazine. The pillar is a solid shaft of wrought iron, sixteen inches in diameter and of a length that is variously reported. The total length is from forty-eight to sixty feet under ground and above, including a capital of three and one-half feet. The pillar contains about eighty cubic feet of metal and weighs about seventeen tons. The metal is, of course, charcoal iron, made directly from ore in small billets; but how it was welded up no one can tell, as no record exists of any early method of dealing with great masses of wrought iron. An inscription roughly cut or punched upon the column states that Rajah Dhava subdued a people in the Surdhu, named Vahlikos, and obtained with his own arm an undivided sovereignty on the earth for a long period. The date of the inscription has been referred to the third or fourth century after Christ, but on this authorities are at variance.

Another Name For It.

"Haow things do change!" remarked the mountaineer as he leisurely stretched himself. "Whenst I were a boy we called yon kind o' people dern snoop nosed meddlers."—Baltimore American.

HOLDING A CIGAR.

Points in a Man's Character the Act Is Said to Disclose.

Did you ever notice the different ways men hold cigars or cigarettes? Did you ever observe how you yourself hold one?

There are about a dozen different ways, and probably no two men hold their cigars exactly alike.

A judge of human nature may pick up interesting points as to character from watching smokers.

One man will hold his cigar firmly between thumb and forefinger. He is usually a resolute, tenacious man, strenuous or merely phlegmatic, as the case may be, but never lazy. His fingers are stumpy.

Another man holds the cigar loosely between his first and second fingers. He is apt to be graceful, lazy, irresolute, a man of artistic temperament, but not a hustler. His fingers are long and tapering.

A third man will carry his cigar with the lighted end turned in toward the palm, the hand held scoop shape around it. He picked up that trick when smoking on the sly as a boy, fearing papa might break suddenly into the game. He is usually of a secretive nature and not marked by any special tendency to frankness.

A fourth will hold his cigar awkwardly, nervously gripping it and often staring at it inquisitively to see how it is burning. He is not a "natural smoker," nor is he apt to be what is known as a "good fellow." He is usually anxious to conciliate others and has not great force of character.

A CHEAP SQUARE MEAL.

Successful Scheme That Was Worked by Two Hungry Men.

"One of the cleverest 'grafts' I ever saw was worked the other day in a quick lunch restaurant on Park row," said the Observer. "I noticed two men talking earnestly just below the place as I was going in to get my lunch. One of them followed me in and took a seat just below me at the table. A few seconds later the other entered and took a seat just opposite his friend, whom he did not appear to know. The first man ordered a very extensive dinner, commencing with soup and ending with charlotte russe and coffee. He got the very best that the place could afford, and his check for $1.35 was placed in front of him. The other man took his time about ordering, taking corned beef and beans—10 cents' worth. His check was placed in the center of the table, between the two men.

"Number one ate hastily and finished first. He got up, put on his hat and then calmly picked up the ten cent check that belonged to his friend. Without turning a hair he went to the desk, paid 10 cents and walked out. A few minutes later number two, who had been reading the paper, prepared to leave and took up the remaining check. He appeared greatly surprised and called the waiter, asking for an explanation. There was nothing for the knight of the napkin to do but give the man a new ten cent check, as it was very evident that he had not eaten $1.35 worth of food. I suppose that the two met outside and at the next place visited number two got the 'square' meal."—New York Mail and Express.

A Pocket Handkerchief.

In a book which has been published on that never failing topic, the vagaries of the English language, the strange meaning of the word "pocket handkerchief" is described.

A "kerchief" (couvrechef) means a small piece of cloth made to put on the head, so that a "pocket handkerchief" means literally a small piece of cloth to cover the head, to be held in the hand, to be put in the pocket.—London

Familiar Proverbs.

Mr. Churton Collins, in the New Liberal Review, traces the ancestry of some of our most familiar proverbs. "It is a wise child that knows his own father" is from the Odyssey; "Familiarity breeds contempt" is a saying of Plutarch; "Set a thief to catch a thief" is of Cato's coinage; "One swallow doesn't make a summer" is cited by Plato as already proverbial, as was "His bark is worse than his bite" when Quintus Curtius wrote it down.

Good Teeth.

Don't fail to ponder occasionally on these facts: That without good teeth there cannot be thorough mastication. Without thorough mastication there cannot be perfect digestion. Without perfect digestion there cannot be proper assimilation. Without proper assimilation there cannot be nutrition. Without nutrition there cannot be health. Without health what is life worth? Hence the paramount importance of good teeth.

The Question Answered.

Estill Springs, Tenn., Aug. 24th.—Many questions are being asked of Mr. C. D. Holt at this place in regard to his wonderful recovery. For two years he has been down with his back. He was so very bad that he could not even lace his shoes, and from this condition he suddenly appeared well and strong as ever.

It is no wonder therefore that his friends are asking him "How did you do it?"

He tells them all: "Dodd's Kidney Pills did it," and adds "This remedy is a genuine good medicine and one that I can heartily recommend to everybody.

"Everyone around here knows how very bad I was. I was so weak in my back that I couldn't do anything that needed stooping or bending over, and three boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills made me as you see, as well as ever I was."

"They certainly had a wonderful effect on my case."

Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has brought about, I somehow felt that it was what I needed and bought a bottle to take. How glad I am that I did so; two bottles brought me immense relief, and after using three bottles more I felt new life and blood surging through my veins. It seemed as though there had been a regular house cleaning through my system, that all the sickness and poison had been taken out and new life given me instead. I have advised dozens of my friends to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Good health is indispensable to complete happiness, and Lydia E. THE LOVE OF LATER YEARS.

What of the strong man's stubborn passion,
When Love comes singing sweet and low?
What of the long-established fashion
When Love comes pleading: "Let it go?"
From habits that enslaved before
He turns as one new-born, to sigh,
He dreams of wildwood haunts no more,
His gun and rod uncherished lie.

The thunders of applause that shook
The halls of state for him are all
Forgotten when she turns to look
And when he hears her softly call;
The wisdom that he had he lays
Aside, forgetting to be wise,
He craves no honor but her praise,
His universe is in her eyes.

What of the strong man's solid reason
When Love comes sighing: "Stray with me?"
To noble heights or down to treason
He follows on submissively.
From that which armies might have tried
In vain to move him he recedes,
And at a pensive woman's side
The strong man sighs and humbly pleads.

The dreams that young love dreams are fair,
The sighs that young love sighs are sweet.
Glad angels hover, watching, where
The lips of coy young lovers meet.
The skies above young love are blue,
The laughter of young love is gay;
To young love all the world is new
And all its troubles far away.

But send to me the sweeter, later
Love, blossoming where sorrows lie,
The deeper love the broader, greater,
That comes to flower but not to die.
For him, when youth's wild dreams are spent
And Time has withered many a hope
God's gifts are best if Love is sent
To lead him down the western slope.

—S. E. Kiser, in Chicago Record-Herald.

Tales from the Knob Country

"THE Knob country lost its leadin' and most valuable citizen when Uncle Jasper died," remarked the man from that storied part of the Pike county wilderness that lies back of Lackawack. "Why, Uncle Jasper could actu'lly smell hear, Uncle Jasper could! And when it come to wild cats, why, gosh all hemlock! he was like a prophet of old!

"One time I hadn't seen a wildcat in two months, and I wanted a couple the wust way. Seemed as if wild cats had all left the county. So, one day I was passin' along by Uncle Jasper's and I asked him where all the wildcats was.

"He said he hadn't thought nothin' about wildcats for a good while.

"'Why,' says he, 'do you want some?'

"'Only a coupla,' I says.

"'Lemme see,' says he. 'This is along in November,' he says.

"Then he looked around at the weather awhile, and seemed to be considerin' the leaves, how they was fallin', and then he says:

"'Well, Dan'l,' he says, 'I see by the way things looks that there's a couple o' wildcats down back o' the swamp yender,' he says, 'and I'm glad you come along,' he says, ''cause I wouldn't 'a' thought nothin' about wildcats if you hadn't come along,' he says, 'and them two would 'a' been up here and played hob with my chickens to-night, sure!' he says. 'I wish you'd go down and git 'em,' he says, 'but you won't git 'em both if you don't act right, for they ain't together.'

"'Go down just beyend the big tamaracks first,' he says. 'There, in one o' them tamaracks, or nigh it, you'll run agin one o' them wildcats,' he says.

"'It'll be the littlest one o' the two. Don't kill her dead,' he says. 'Jest wing her so she can't git away or jump on to you. Then she'll yell. Great Jupiter! how she'll yell!' he says.

"'Then you want to keep your eye peeled sharp, fer it won't be long before t'other un'll come tearin' along that way, from up yender in the laurels, where he's layin' about this time, watchin' fer a pheasant.

"'He'll hear them yells o' her'n,' says Uncle Jasper, 'and he'll tear down to see what's goin' on. Stand out good where he'll see you about the time he gits within a couple o' rod o' where t'other un's a yellin' and spittin' and squallin',' says Uncle Jasper. 'When he sees you he'll stop and squat. Then you let him have it.

"'And be sure you kill him. If you don't mebbe you'll be sorry you went down after 'em. So be sure you kill him.

"'Then,' says Uncle Jasper, 'you kin settle t'other un,' he says, 'and you'll have 'em both, and I am glad you come along,' he says, 'so's to set me to thinkin' about wildcats, and so's I could sort o' locate these two fer you,' he says. 'Them two is all there is in these parts to-day, 'cordin' to the signs,' he says.

"That's the way Uncle Jasper laid out the programme fer me that day as to wildcats, and I follered it out and got 'em both. A leadin' and valuable citizen Uncle Jasper was, and it was a big swat to the Knob country when he passed away.

"It was somethin' tough on him that he had to go, too, partic'ly as he had to leave setch a woman to be a widder as Hanner was. Why, whenever I remember Hanner and them three bears I almost have to set down and shed tears for Uncle Jasper to think he had to go and leave setch a woman a widder.

"Them three bears, the old she one and the two spring cubs, they come down into the corn patch at Jasper's clearin' jest about dusk one day, when the milk was in the corn, and laid out to have a high old feast on to it. They knowed, them bears did, jest as sure as you're born, that Uncle Jasper was 'way back o' the Knob, havin' the gun with him, and wasn't comin' home that night; but they didn't know that Hanner had so many p'ints about her.

"They had been rompin' around in the corn, tearin' off roastin' ears and havin' a good time gener'ly, before Hanner discovered 'em. There wa'n't no gun in the house, but Hanner didn't calc'late to let that bear family harvest that corn crop, gun or no gun.

"Uncle Jasper had both the dogs with him, too, but the little yaller whiffet was to home. So Hanner, she grabbed a pitchfork, and callin' the whiffet started fer the corn patch to attract the bears.

"The bears didn't see her till the whiffet begun to bristle up and bark, but when they did look up and see what was comin' they only sniffed, jest as if they considered that here was more fun than ever cut out fer 'em. But Hanner's dander was 'way up, and when the old bear riz on its hind feet and made a big showin' o' teeth, Hanner marched right on, and give the bear a jab with the pitchfork that made it holler.

"The whiffet attracted the bear in the rear at the same time, and the three of 'em scrambled away and shinned up a chestnut tree that stood in the patch.

"If them bears had an idee that by gittin' out o' the way o' the dog and the pitchfork in this way they was goin' to have the field all to theirselves when Hanner got tired o' waitin' fer 'em to come down and went away, they was terrible mistook. Eli's Sam lived only a mile from there, and Hanner could 'a' soon skited over and got him and his gun, but she wa'n't goin' to take no chances on them bears gittin' away, so she plunked herself down at the foot o' the tree and kep' the bears from gittin' down outen it, though they tried to do it more than a dozen times.

"Hanner knowed that Eli's Sam 'd be along by there early in the mornin', so there she sot and sot all night, jabbin' the pitchfork good and deep into the bears every time they'd think they had a chance to sneak down, and sendin' 'em back outen reach a'gin, hollerin' and grittin' their teeth.

"A little after daylight next mornin' Eli's Sam come along, on his way to his choppin', and as luck would have it he had his gun with him. He heered some one hollerin' to him, and he see Hanner standin' in the corn beckonin' to him with the pitchfork.

"'What's the matter, Hanner?' says Eli's Sam.

"'There ain't nothin' the matter!' Hanner hollers back. 'But I got a crop o' bears here, and I want you to help me gether 'em!' she hollers.

"Then Eli's Sam, he see the bears in the tree, and he trotted over there on the double-quick and picked off all three of 'em as easy as turnin' pancakes.

"A shame to leave setch a woman as Hanner a widder? Should say so; and leadin' citizen and valuable to the Knob country though he was, I wouldn't 'a' thunk Uncle Jasper would 'a' done it.

"But Hanner didn't stay a widder long. How could she? A lumber contractor with considerable money rescued her, and they tell me she's livin' at the county seat now, in a real board house with shingles on to it, an' hes a woman to do her washin'.'"—N. Y. Sun.

TO DETAIN FOOD IMPORTS.

Goods Arriving from Germany, France and Italy to Be Examined for Adulterations.

"Several cargoes of food products have arrived at eastern ports from Germany, France and Italy, suspected of being in violation of the new pure food act which went into effect July 1, and the collectors of customs at the ports of arrival are requested to hold the shipments until a chemical analysis can be made to ascertain whether all or any part of these cargoes can be admitted."

This is the substance of a letter received by the secretary of the treasury from the department of agriculture, and is the first step toward a test of the new law. Dr. Wiley, chief of the chemistry division of the agricultural department, has been engaged for months in making a careful analysis of all food products imported. He has carefully ascertained and noted the component parts of all commodities imported, and has prepared what may be termed the blacklist. Upon this list is a complete record of all commodities found deleterious to health, all that are forbidden to be sold in the country where produced, all which are restricted in sale in the countries in which made or from which exported, and all which are falsely labeled either in respect to place of manufacture or contents. These classes of goods under the new law may be excluded.

The suspected commodities mentioned in the letter from Secretary Wilson include canned goods, sausages, wines and liquors, olive oil and other food products. Instructions have been issued by the secretary of the treasury to the respective collectors of customs who have jurisdiction over the "cargoes" to detain them. The collectors will be required to forward at once to the secretary of agriculture samples of the goods. The "cargoes" that have been held are upon the agricultural department's blacklist, and Secretary Wilson, from the advices received from sources abroad, has reason to believe the entries must be excluded.

The new law is in large measure retaliatory, the result of foreign discrimination against American food products, and will be enforced by Secretary Wilson without regard to the protests it may bring forth from European governments.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Cannot Prove Impurities.

The state dairy and food department has decided to abandon the prosecution of dealers who handle impure maple sugar until the department can prove the impurity of product.

This is a result of a test made by a St. Paul wholesale firm, which sent a number of samples to the department and asked an analysis.

The chemists were unable to estimate the exact amount of maple and cane sugar used in the doctored samples and the department has decided that until it can do better work analyzing samples it cannot maintain a case in court.

The officials claim an unfair advantage was taken of the department and that the samples were cleverly doctored.

The commission is determined to conduct a series of tests to determine the exact standard of maple sugar and until such standard had been determined they would admit the sale of maple syrup which did not contain more than a half cane sugar.

Scheme to Fool Chinch Bugs.

The state experiment station has sent its entomologist to inquire into the chinch bug situation around St. Cloud, and see what, if anything, can be done next year to lessen the injury from these pests. He visited the farms of Bowing Bros., Harborn, N. P. Clark, Michael Bretz and others. He reports that conditions have not been exaggerated on Clark's upper farm. Last year chinch bugs took the young carrot crop.

Entomologist Washburn intimates that a strip of millet about the corn, planted at such a time that it would be about ten inches high when the bugs go from barley or wheat to corn, might induce them to prefer millet or pidgeon grass to corn. This would probably allow the corn to get ahead of them and they could be destroyed on the millet in various ways.

Diseased chinch bugs are no longer sent out by the station, it having been proved impracticable.

The School Fund.

The Minnesota permanent school fund has reached the $15,000,000 mark. No other state except Texas has so large a fund, and state officials estimate that it will not be long before Minnesota will lead them all. Of this fund approximately $6,000,000 is unpaid principal on land contracts, and of the remaining $9,000,000, $8,700,000 is invested in interest-bearing bonds. The average rate of interest is 4 per cent. Estimates of the amount that the fund will ultimately reach when all the lands are sold are put at higher figures by each succeeding state auditor. It seems that the human mind is incapable of appreciating the wealth of Minnesota's resources. Former State Auditor W. W. Braden created quite a sensation when he stated that the fund would ultimately reach $20,000,000. State treasury officials put the figure at $30,000,000.

Short of Money.

The state board of investment will probably be compelled to refuse numerous applications for county ditch loans in order to protect other and legitimate drafts on the permanent school fund. The board originally hoped to make a large number of small ditch loans, and at the same time be able to protect the school districts, townships and counties desiring authorized loans for other purposes. Marshall county took $100,000 for ditches, Polk $91,000 and Meeker $9,000, which leaves the board in a position practically compelling it to refuse or materially scale down the large number of applications now pending or expected.

Poultry at the State Fair.

The poultry exhibition at the Minnesota state fair of 1903 will be made under the most satisfactory conditions since the fair commenced, and it promises to be the largest ever seen on the fair grounds. Since the fair of 1902, the fair management has expended several hundred dollars in purchasing permanent show coops. The poultry building is now equipped with these coops and no other will be used. As usual, the poultry department is under the superintendence of that veteran poultry fancier, Leslie Purlin, St. Paul. This year's fair opens on August 31st, when Senator Fairbanks, of Indiana, will make a great speech.

New Creamery Maps.

The state dairy and food department has just issued a new creamery map of the state. It is a large map with all the creameries, skimming stations and cheese factories plainly marked. It shows clearly which are the heaviest dairy sections and also the spread of the creameries into the northwestern part of the state, where new land is being opened.

There are now 681 creameries, 73 cheese factories and 52 skimming stations in the state.

Empire State Express in Foot-Ball.

The New York Central's Empire State Express is recognized as the swiftest and surest train operated by America's greatest railroad, and considered the very best means to cover the ground in the time required. It is for this reason that the Harvard University football team named their best and surest play of the season of 1902 the "Empire State Express," for they believed it to be the most reliable play in their programme. It was successful throughout the season until it met Yale's "20th Century Limited" play, which was just as swift, safe and sure, but had longer endurance and was "limited" only by the size of the field. The names of the rival teams very correctly describe the difference in the famous trains, the "Empire State" running only from New York to Buffalo, while the "20th Century Limited" makes the 980 miles between New York and Chicago in twenty hours every day of the year. Great is the New York Central and great are the trains it operates—swift, safe and reliable.—From the Brooklyn Standard Union.

THERE IS NO SLICKER LIKE TOWER'S FISH BRAND

Forty years ago and after many years of use on the eastern coast, Tower's Waterproof Oiled Coats were introduced in the West and were called Slickers by the pioneers and cowboys. This graphic name has come into such general use that it is frequently though wrongfully applied to many substitutes. You want the genuine. Look for the Sign of the Fish, and the name Tower on the buttons.

FOREIGN.

Turks are reported to have devastated twenty-two villages in the Monastir district in Bulgaria, slaughtering the inhabitants and leaving the bodies unburied in the streets.

Spain is said to be on the verge of revolution. All classes have lost respect for the Madrid government.

A revolutionary band appeared at Tcherkeshoi, within six hours of Constantinople, and was vanquished by Turks. Three Bulgarian villages in the neighborhood were devastated and all the inhabitants killed.

One hundred and twenty persons lost their lives in a fire at Buda-Pesth, Hungary.

The big consolidated cigarette factory in Havana, Cuba, belonging to the American Tobacco company, was burned, the loss being $250,000.

The French steamer Admiral Gueydon was reported lost with 57 persons.

A vast tract of land in east Africa has been offered by Great Britain to Jews for colonization.

A column of lava 15 feet in diameter and 700 feet high was ejected from the side of Vesuvius and the stream has already advanced 3,000 feet. Residents are fleeing.

An appeal to the powers was issued by the Macedonian committee declaring that few Macedonians will be left to save unless intervention comes quickly. A list of 70 Monastir villages is given which Turks have destroyed.

The British offer of a site in East Africa for Jewish colonization was presented to the Zionist congress, which appointed a committee to make an investigation.

According to mail advices from Shanghai, several hundred lives were lost in recent great floods at Chefoo.

United States Vice Consul W. G. Mageissen was assassinated at Beirut, Syrian Turkey. President Roosevelt has ordered the European squadron, now coaling at points along the French coast, to proceed to the scene and enforce the demands of the United States for prompt reparation.

An express train between Buda-Pesth and Constantinople was blown up by a dynamite bomb and seven persons killed and 15 injured. Revolutionists are accused.

LATER.

Frederick Law Olmstead, landscape architect of the Chicago world's fair and many well-known parks, died in Waverly, Mass., aged 81 years.

William C. Magelssen, vice consul at Beirut, Syria, was not killed, as at first reported, but was shot at by an intending assassin. The European squadron will continue to Turkish waters, as a demonstration is believed necessary to assure safety of American citizens there.

Turkish troops sent to reenforce the garrison at Kirk-Kilissch, near Adrianople, were routed by insurgents, whose numbers are estimated at 6,000.

War with Colombia is a possible contingency should the canal treaty fail to secure favorable action. President Roosevelt and Secretary Hay conferred on the subject.

Trains collided near Adine, Italy. Twenty lives were lost and 80 persons injured.

High water caused two deaths at Omaha, Neb., one at Council Bluffs, Ia., and three at Nodaway, Ia.

Ira C. Bradley, aged 60, who had been trying to establish in Cuba an American settlement known as the "Bradley Colony," was murdered near Holquin, Cuba. The only motive ascribed for the murder was robbery.

With tremendous detonations heard for miles around a new fissure opened in the cone of Vesuvius, and from the new gap came pouring out tons of burning lava which flowed in the direction of the village of Ottajano.

WILL TAKE NO ACTION.

United States to Make No Move for the Present Regarding Isthmus Canal.

Washington, Aug. 31.—It may be stated authoritatively that for the present this government will take no action regarding an isthmian canal. The Spooner law prescribes a course for the president to pursue, which is to construct the canal by the Nicaragua route, in case satisfactory terms cannot be made with the Colombian government. But as the law did not specify a time when the alternative route should be selected, the president will not be hurried in deciding when negotiations shall be opened for that route. And while the matter is thus held in abeyance, nothing will be done.

Heavy Battle Reported.

Paris, Aug. 31.—A dispatch received by the foreign office from Morocco says that a large imperial force which was going to the relief of the troops commanded by the sultan has been surprised and almost annihilated by insurgents. The Temps publishes details of the engagement in Morocco, showing that the imperial troops numbered 3,000 men. They were ambushed with the result that over 1,000 of them, including seven native governors, were killed or wounded.

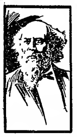
WASHINGTON PEOPLE

Entertaining Chat About Men Who, at Present, Are in Public Eye.

NAVY LOSES VALUABLE OFFICER

Splendid Career of Rear Admiral Melville, Who Has Just Been Retired—Sigsbee Promoted—Gifted Colored Man—Robb's Future.



George W. Melville

Washington—In the retirement from active service of Rear Admiral George W. Melville the navy loses one of the bravest men who ever wore its uniform and one of the most striking characters of the generation. For 16 years Melville has been engineer in chief of the navy. He has held the office under four presidents, Cleveland, Harrison, McKinley and Roosevelt; and during his incumbency the branch of the service to which he has belonged has advanced in prestige from a position of little consideration until to-day it stands as high as any other branch. That advance has been due in great measure to his power of concentration, clearness of observation and pride in his work. He has done more to break the medieval traditions and customs of the sailing age than any other dozen individuals in the service or out of it.

Up to the time he became chief of the bureau of steam engineering the engineers in the navy were looked down upon by the line officers as "greasers." That was the term of contempt which was usually applied in speaking of them. When looking over the complement allowed each warship the new chief discovered that the entire engineer's force was officially designated as "idlers." The officers above deck would not tolerate the idea that the men who were really responsible for the condition of the ship, its speed and control, should be given any consideration.

Melville changed all this. For years he worked for the proper rating and rank of the engineers, until under the personnel bill what he had fought for was won, and an engineer now has the relative rank to which he had long been entitled. It was Melville who forced recognition of the fact that, as Prof. Hutton said at Columbia university, when Melville was honored with the degree of master of science, "the achievements of our fleets are the result in great part of the thought, the planning and the capacity of those engineers who gave them their weapons and who operate for them the battle machines with which their work is done."

Heroism on Jeannette Expedition.

Hero of Viking Type

Melville, with his splendid great head and his bushy beard and hair, has often been compared to a Viking, and that description also fits his fine achievements while connected with the Jeannette expedition to the Arctic years ago. Melville is one of the strongest men who has held a commission in the navy for two generations. During the retreat of the crew of the Jeannette there were days when he carried for hours over hummocky ice a blind and helpless brother officer weighing 175 pounds.

With this man clinging to his sides he would move among the crew, directing affairs, and even helping to launch a boat where the footing was insecure and dangerous. He is heroic in size and shape. Every feature of his face denotes firmness of purpose, intelligence in action and surpassing powers of endurance.

He has been honored greatly for what he achieved on that famous expedition after finding the bodies of Capt. De Long and his companions in the Lena Delta. He was given receptions everywhere at the time, has been admitted to countless learned societies, and for his services in the Arctic ocean he was voted by congress a gold medal and advanced 15 numbers in the navy register.

He has done wonders in his insistence upon the perfection of the fighting machine. The machinery designed under his directions is economical in the use of steam, light in weight and durable even under severe conditions. It was through his persistence that triple screw vessels were built for the American navy. By his experiments he has furnished all the navies of the world with strategic and tactical information of the utmost value. It seems absurd that such a man should be retired for age. He is still good for many years to come.

Sigsbee to Be Promoted.

Charles D. Sigsbee

In the list of promotions to follow the retirement of Rear Admiral Remey occurs the name of Charles D. Sigsbee, who now becomes a rear admiral. It may be doubted, however, whether Sigsbee's new title ever sits easily on him. He won his place in the American roll of fame as Capt. Sigsbee, and thus he will always be remembered. Sigsbee is known all over the world as commander of the ill-fated Maine when she went down in the harbor of Havana, and he is perhaps the only officer in the history of any navy who received signal honor through the loss of his ship. Yet such was his conduct at that time when, in the midst of appalling disaster, he showed superb nerve and courage, that he has been accorded all the honor that usually comes to a sailor who gains distinction in battles.

It so happened that the fortunes of the war succeeding the blowing up of the Maine did not bring to Sigsbee the opportunity for further achievement in the active service, for he was placed in charge of a big fast steaming scout from which no serious fighting could be expected, but he is one of the men in the service who could be counted on for any emergency and who will be counted on in any emergencies which may come again.

Gifted Young Colored Man.

James J. Mattingly

At the papal legation in Washington is a colored messenger whose accomplishments have attracted the attention of many of the most prominent people in the capital. During the anxious days of Pope Leo's last illness this colored boy who attended the door astonished the attaches and under secretaries of the foreign embassies who called frequently to inquire about the pope's condition by replying promptly to each of them in his own language with all the purity and accuracy of idiom imaginable.

This colored messenger, who is only 20 years old and whose name is James J. Mattingly, is one of the most accomplished linguist in Washington. He speaks English, Latin, Italian, German, French and Spanish with equal facility, and, besides, he is a skilled musician. He not only sings and plays exquisitely, but he is a composer of no mean ability.

Such education as the boy had up to the time he was 13 he had acquired in the Washington public schools, but he is better educated now than nine-tenths of the graduates of universities. He also has an intimate knowledge of church affairs, as might be expected of so bright a lad who had grown up in a priestly atmosphere.

Robb and the Postal Investigation.

Charles H. Roob

Of all the men who have made reputations in the post office investigation none has deserved more credit than the young man who was selected to take the place of Assistant Attorney General Tyner when Tyner was dismissed. The young men's name is Charles H. Robb. He is a Vermonter and he is still some distance under 40. He looks as though he might have just come of age, for his smooth shaven face, with its clean-cut features and keen, flashing eyes, have all the characteristics of eager youth.

Young Robb was a subordinate in the department of justice when the postal scandals began. He had been working away there without any special desire to bring himself before the public for months, but the quality of his mind had attracted the attention of the attorney general, and when Postmaster General Payne asked Mr. Knox to detail somebody to the post office department to assist in the legal features of the inquiry the attorney general promptly suggested Robb. The young man had a feeling that in leaving the department of justice he was cutting himself off from association which would be of value to him in his profession, and he at first begged to be excused. But so great was the attorney general's confidence in him that both Mr. Knox and Mr. Payne insisted on his accepting the assignment, and he agreed.

It is doubtful, though, whether he demands the fulfillment of that agreement. He has displayed keenness, knowledge of the law, splendid judgment and courage. He has won the regard of everybody in authority and, unless all signs fail, he has lined out for himself a career.

LOUIS A. COOLIDGE.

ROUND ABOUT THE STATE.

The Ramsey County Territorial Pioneer association will hold a reunion in St. Paul next December.

Swan Hjelm, employed as a quarryman at St. Cloud, was seriously injured by the explosion of a blast.

Mark Kline, an engineer, has brought suit against the Minneapolis Iron company to recover $30,000 damages for alleged injuries.

A stock train was wrecked on the Northern Pacific railway west of Perham, delaying traffic for ten hours. No one was hurt.

The residence of August Durrenberger at Marshall was entered and $50 in cash taken. No trace of the thives has been located.

Frank D. Weston, a Minneapolis painter, has received word that he has fallen heir to a large fortune left him by a deceased uncle.

John Hurtig, a farmer living at East Union, was caught in a threshing belt and so badly hurt in the head that he is not expected to live.

Thomas Patterson, an employe of N. P. Clarke's Meadow Lawn farm, near St. Cloud had a foot nearly severed from a mowing machine.

Minneapolis' cut up to date is nearly 100,000,000 feet less than last year's run, this being due to the fact that none of the mills are sawing nights.

Judge William Loehren was presented with a past grand Commander's jewel, by the members of Darious commandery, No. 7, Knights of Templars.

The total assessed valuation of both personal and real property in Ramsey county, as returned by the county assessor, for the year 1903, is $95,270,561.

Investigation of the mysterious death of 17-year-old Dena Lind, who died at the St. Paul city hospital leads to the belief, that she was a victim of headache tablets.

An order has been issued extending the time for the removal of the timber on the Chippewa reservations of Minnesota. Operators will be given five years instead of two.

David Radcliffe, St. Paul, lost both eyelids in jumping from a moving Seventh street car. He was riding on a trailer and did not wait for the car to stop, but jumped when opposite his home. He was thrown upon his face and both lids were torn loose.

By an explosion of kerosene Lydia Joren, a 13-year-old girl employed at Lakeview hotel, at Redwood Falls, was fatally burned. Tracy Ferris, another hotel employ, was seriously burned and the hotel kitchen was damaged.

A. L. Thorpe, a prominent resident Dennison, who has been suffering from a complication of diseases, attempted suicide by stabbing himself near the heart several times with a pocket knife. His recovery is doubtful.

The officers at Fort Snelling have been notified that a forger is at large whose specialty is to imitate the signatures of army officers. A short time ago it is said he forged the name of Captain Sperry, who recently visited the fort on a tour of inspection.

The Master Barbers' association is having considerable trouble with a few St. Paul barbers who refuse to charge 15 cents for a shave and to close promptly at 7 o'clock in the evening.

Maj. George C. Lambert says that the federal inspection of some of the companies of the national guard was incomplete, and that this may explain the report that eleven companies failed to get 65 per cent and therefore are booked to be mustered out.

Northwestern railroads will carry coarse grain and flax from Minneapolis to Chicago for 7½ cents per 100 pounds, instead of 10 cents, which prevails at present. The proportional rate East will be only ten cents.

Postoffice inspectors arrested Zelmer Hoosline, a 20-year-old son of Postmaster Hoosline of Drywood. The boy has been trying to play the "green goods" scheme and has been operating under the name of Cook. He confessed everything.

"Check" Howard, wanted in Minneapolis for the theft of a gold watch and and a diamond pin from his roommate some time ago, is being held at Alton, Ill., pending the arrival of Sheriff Dredger.

Johanna Olson, who has been living alone in the vicinity of Pelican Rapids, was found running about naked in the woods, and Deputy Sheriff Leonard brought her to Fergus Falls to be examined as to her sanity. She was committed to the hospital.

The German agriculturists who visited St. Paul several months ago, in a letter to President Smith of the Commercial club, express thanks for the courtesy and hospitality extended by the citizens of St. Paul during their visit.

The police of Brainerd have arrested Mrs. Albert Williams, John Burrig and George Dill, on the charge of murdering Mrs. Williams' 3-year-old daughter.

George Nurenberg, of Perham, aged 10 years, was almost killed by being kicked in the face by a horse.

The Minnesota State Aid society will probably hold an annual exhibition of art and handicraft this fall in one of the larger cities of the state.

If the Turks don't kill that vice counsel of ours yet it will because they don't read the American newspapers to find how many things he ought to he killed for—from the Turkish standpoint. —Ralph w. wheelock, in Minneapolis Tribune.

Sir Thomas Lipton has proven himself to be such a nice gentelman that it is almost to bad to defeat him so badly in the race for the Amercian cup, hut he had ought to have known he could not win. He must learn to challenge someone he can beat. How would it do for him to try Spain?.

The latest news from the race track for governor, is that a handsome man is wanted to fit the new Capitol building and furniture. If this rule is to be adhered to Eddy will stand rather a poor show with Boh Dunn a close second, and we overheard one of the ladies say, when Gov. Van Sant visited this locality last fall that he was a very nice looking man.

The talk of political rings no longer deceives the people, as they have learned that the ones that make the most noise about rings are usaly the ones to for m them, und if they get the worst of it they cry "rıng." It is impossiable for a candidate for office to get nominated, and elected without the support of his friends, and the one that has the most of that necessary article, (no matter how he ohtains them), is sure to win.

The "bughare", of Jim Hill and Thomas Lowry seems to occupy a prominent place in the gubernational campaign, in fact it is the first attact that some of the newspapers make on any of the candidates who have been mentioned is to say, "they are backed by Jim Hill or Thomas Lowry", until it has become the custom of some of their readers to corect the children hy saying "Now Johnnie, if you don't be a good boy I'll set Jim Hill or Thomas Lowry after you".

When the report came, that U.S. Vice Consul Magelssen had been assassinated at Beirut Syria, on Sunday Aug. 23, the promptness of President Rossevelt in sending a fleet of war ships to envestigate will be heartily endorsed hy the American people, who do not stop to count the cost when one of their citizens that is sent to a foreign country to represent this country is reported to have heen assassinated.

This time it proved to be a mistake, and Consul Magelsson is alive and well but the Turks can have an opprotunity to look into the muzzle of the guns of a fleet of American war ships, and he given to understand that the representatives of the United States in Turkey must and will be protected.

There's a wolesome lesson in the story that is going the rounds of the press credited to "Ex," that fertile source of many good things in fact and philosophy, that is worth impressing upon people gennerally warrants its reproduction: "Willey and Johnnie set up a lemonade stand the other day and a gentelman was their first customer. Wilie's sign read, 'four cents a glass.. Johnnie's modest announcement was 'Two cents a glass,' the customer bought a glas of Johnnie's lemonade, paid the two cents due and casually enquired, 'why is yours cheper than your brothers? 'Caz,' said Johnnie, Mine is the lemonade the puppy fell into." And while the above little yarn is amusing it involves a world of thought and has a moral that should be fixed everlastingly in the minds of the patrons of mail order houses and other "something for nothing for nothing" concerns. The man who gets something for nothing these days, gets "what the puppy fell into" and he who looks for it is a sucker. —Crookston Journal.

Cost of False Noses.

People sometimes lose their noses by disease or by accidents, and some have lost them in war. For noseless persons the most appropriate organs are said to be made of wax, and the best ones cost about $175, though a really good one can be got for $75. A nose made of papier mache may be bought for $5. Noses made of this material are enameled and are deceptive, and for a poor man they are said to answer all the purposes that are required. Waxen and paper noses are, in case of disease, preferable to those made by the planting of flesh on the diseased part, for several cases have been known where the transplanting of the flesh of the nose has endangered men's lives.—London Tit-Bits.

A MAN OF MYSTERY.

Peculiar Life of Metastasio, the Celebrated Italian Poet.

Metastasio (1698-1782), the celebrated dramatic and operatic poet, spent fifty-five years in Vienna with the Martines family without ever learning German or wishing to learn it.

Besides his utter indifference to all speech but Italian, Metastasio possessed many peculiarities of character. None might mention death in his presence. Those who alluded to smallpox before him be made it a point not to see again. In all his fifty-five years in Vienna be never gave away more than the equivalent of $25 to the poor. He always occupied the same seat at church, but never paid for it. He took all his meals in the most mysterious privacy; his greatest friends had never seen him eat anything but a biscuit with some lemonade. Nothing would induce him to dine away from home. He never changed his wig or the cut or color of his coat.

Metastasio was to have been presented to the pope the day be died and raved about tha intended interview in the delirium of his last moments. Mrs. Piozzi (familiar to readers of Boswell's "Life of Dr. Johnson" as Mrs. Thrale) collected these particulars from the ladies of the Martines family, with whom Metastasio was so long domesticated without speaking or understnding a word of their language from first to last.

The Moon and Rain.

"When you see the new moon hangin' straight up and down, lookin' sort of sour like, you're not goin' to have rain for at least two-thirds of the month," said an old observer. "When she comes up lookin' like she wouldn't spill, then it's goin' to be good weather for two-thirds of the month.

"You can bank on that, boy. I've been watchin' the moon for weather more'n thirty years on land and sea, and the dip tells the story hetter than any weather prophet that ever called turns on the weather from headquarters down in Washington.

"Further than gettin' a cue on the weather," ba continued, "you can tell by the color of the moon whether it's goin' to be a warm or cold rain.

"If the 'wet moon' looks red it's goin' to be a warm rain. If it looks bright and silvery like it's goin' to be a chilly rain.

"I've been watchin' Luna, as they call her, come up over Jersey for a number of years, and I haven't found her sign to fail yat."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

The Munka Bride.

Here is a picturesque incident in the Munka wedding ceremony in India: The bride goes to a stream or well near by with her pitcher and, having filled it, raises it aloft on her head, steadying it with her hand. The bridegroom comes behind, as she turns homeward, and, resting his hand on her shoulder, shoots an arrow along the path in front of her through the loophole formed by her uplifted arm. The bride then walks on to where the arrow lies and picks it up with her foot, still balancing the pitcher on her head. Transferring it gracefully to her hand, she restores it to the bridegroom, thus showing that she can perform her domestic duties well, with hand and foot at his service. He in turn, by shooting the arrow in front of her, has shown his ability to protect her and clear her path of any danger that may beset it.

Brave and Brainy.

"The man I marry must be both brava and brainy."

"When we wera out sailing and upset I saved you from a watery grave."

"That was brave, I admit, but it was not brainy."

"Yes, it was. I upset the boat on purpose."—La Vie Parisienne.

An Excess of Nerve.

"I like to see a young man energetic and able to push himself," said the old banker sadly. "But when he borrowed the money from me to buy an automobile in which to elope with my daughter it was carrying things a little too far."

Her Superstition.

"Are you superstitious?"

"Not in the least," answered Miss Giggins. "I used to be, but, do you know, I found that whenever I got to believing in signs I had bad luck."—Exchange.

A STORY OF WHISTLER.

The Picture That Was His Even Though It Had Been Sold.

A certain Lady So-and-so, who admired Whistler's genius to tha extent of purchasing one of his pictures, never was able to obtain possession of her property. One day she drove to the studio in her victoria. Mr. Whistler went out to the sidewalk to greet her.

"Mr. Whistler," she said, "two years ago I bought one of your pictures, a beautiful thing, and I have never been able to hang it on my walls. It has been loaned to one exhibition or another. Now today I have my carriage with me, and I would like to take it home with me. I am told it is in your possession."

"Dear lady," returned Whistler, "you ask the impossible. I will send it to you when I have it again, but it is not here. You have heen misinformed." And so forth, and so forth, to the same effect, and the lady drove off without her picture.

After sha had departed Whistler commenced to poke around the studio, and, to the great astonishment of a friend who had heen an involuntary listener to the above conversation, he brought forth a canvas.

"Here it is," he said. "She was right about one thing—it is beautiful." And it was beautiful.

"But the impudence of these people," he continued, "who think that because they pay a few paltry hundred pounds they own my pictures. Why, it merely secures them the privilege of having them in their houses now and then! The pictures are mine!"—Harper's Weekly.

Weird Music of Moro.

Moro music is strangely unrhythmical to European ears, says a writer in Everybody's Magazine. It consists mainly of a monotonous reiteration of sound, even a supposed change of air being almost imperceptible to an ear unaccustomed to the barbarous lack of tone. The Moro piano is a wooden frame shaped like the runners of a child's sled, on which small kettledrums are balanced by means of cords and sticks laid horizontally. These rather resemble pots for the kitchen range than musical instruments, but each is roughly tuned, forming the eight notes of the scale. A man crouching on the ground before this instrument beat out a wailing sound from it with shaped sticks, while from larger kettledrums, hung by ropes from a wooden railing at one side, two men accompanied the piano, and one old woman in the background drummed out an independent air of her own on an empty tin pan.

Didn't Know That Trick.

"That's a werry knowing animal of yours," said a young cockney to the keeper of an elephant.

"Very," was the cool rejoinder.

"He performs strange tricks and hanties, does he?" inquired the cockney, eying tha animal critically.

"Surprisin'!" retorted the keeper. "We've learned him to put money in that box you see up there. Try him with half a crown."

The cockney handed the elephant half a crown, and, sure enough, he took it in his trunk and placed it in a box high up out of reach.

"Well, that is very hextraordinary—hastonishing, truly!" said the green one, opening his eyes. "Now, let's see him take it out and hand it back."

"We never learned him that trick," retorted the keeper, walking away.—Glasgow Times.

Curious Irish Marriage Custom.

A curious old marriage custom, called locally "the settling," still survives in County Donegal, Ireland, and in the Scotch districts of Kintyre and Cowal. After the marriage has been publicly announced the friends of the couple meet at the house of the bride's parents to fix a suitable date for the marriage. A bottle of whisky is opened, and as each guest drinks to their happiness he names a date. When each guest has named a date an average is struck and "settling" is complete. Neither the bride nor bridegroom ever thinks of protesting against the date so curiously chosen.

Frankfort Death Houses.

In Frankfort the body of the dead is removed as soon as life is extinct to "leichen hausen" or death houses, where it rests until the first signs of decomposition appear. Such a death house consists of a warder's room, with five death chambers on each hand. A ring on the finger of each body is connected with a bell, and should one rouse from a trance that had been mistaken for death he could summon the warder. Since Frankfort has had death houses several young girls have been rescued from being buried alive. Munich has a similar system.

The Day Did Come.

His chest heaved convulsively, and the veins stood out upon his forehead. In his anger he advanced toward the other with outstretched fist. But by a strenuous effort he controlled himself.

"No matter!" he muttered savagely. "The day will come!"

Sure enough, at dawn the next morning faint streaks of gray pencilled the east. Later, at its accustomed hour, the sun arose.

Thus was the prophecy fulfilled.

Under Water.

Ordinarily a diver is able to remain under water from one to two and a half minutes. James Finny, a professional diver, in London, stayed under water 4m. 29s. Professor Enochs stayed under water at Lowell, Mass., for 4m. 46s. Professor Beaumont of Australia made a record of 4m. 35s.

The habit of some people in eavesdropping on mutual telephone lines recieved a pretty hard lick in a court decision in an eastern state a fiew days ago, according to an exchange. The case originated by one man bringing a libel suit against another for haveing said in a talk over a line that he was dishonest. In reviewing the case the court said in affect that the conversation was supposed to be private and confidential, and if others along the line heard the bad story about the neighbor, they were eavesdropping—on the same principal as stealing into ones private conversation. The court holds a sensible view--that those who use a telephone are entitled to talk privaetly and confidentially. While others have power to listen, they really have no right to do so, and certainly no right to repeat such information to others.— Fertile Journal.

The Turk and the Grave.

In Russia many of the peasantry still bury their dead in grottoes and caves, just as their princes and noble men were accustomed to do centuries ago. In Constantinople, as in other Turkish cities, bodies are placed in the ground as soon as the last spark of life has fled. The Mussulman believes that as long as the body is unburied the spirit is in torment and that it is a crime akin to murder to molest a grave. Accordingly, the cemeteries around many oriental cities far exceed in extent the abodes of the living.

THE SOUL CATCHERS

A SINGULAR CUSTOM OF THE S[illegible] SEA ISLANDERS.

The Way the Natives In the [illegible]fore Civilization Had Fully [illegible] Them For Its Own Used to Get [illegible] With Their Enemies.

A little while ago while turning over some mementos of many years spent in the Pacific islands I came across a small circle of fine cane about two inches in diameter. From the side toward the center a delicate network of the fibers of some plant was constructed, leaving a small hole in the center large enough for, say, a bee to crawl through. The article weighed less than a quarter of an ounce; yet, small and harmless as it appeared, it is not so very many years ago that it and others like it were objects of deadly terror to the natives of many of the Pacific islands, particularly those of Manahiki (Humphrey island), for the simple looking thing was a "soul catcher"—that is, a destroyer of human life.

Manahiki is one of a group of low lying atoll islands to the north-northwest of Samoa, and its people today are about the best educated of all the Malayo-Polynesian people. They elect a king and parliament, have one of the most beautifully adorned churches in the Pacific islands, and nearly all the younger members of the community can now not only speak but read and write English. The island is—for an atoll—unusually fertile and the people a fine, stalwart, handsome copper colored race. The main industries are the making of "copra" (dried cocoanut) and diving for pearl shell.

"Soul catching" in the heathen days, prior to 1863, could be and was practiced by any one who desired revenge or the life of an enemy. Indeed, although the people were nominally Christians in 1873, it was still in vogue. The modus operandi is very simple. Say that two men, Rika and Tetoro, quarrel. Rika accuses Tetoro of going out into the lagoon at nighttime, lifting his (Rika's) fish traps and abstracting the contents. He therefore demands compensation. Tetoro denies the theft. The relatives of both men take sides, and the quarrel assumes all the elements of a feud with bloodshed. It may be that Tetoro is a man of means or chiefly rank and influence and treats his accuser with scorn.

"Very well," the injured Rika cries. "If I cannot get justice from you I shall snare your soul, and you will die of a wasting sickness."

Tetoro, even if he is innocent, begins to feel uneasy at this threat and, while vigorously denying the theft, offers Rika a present of a pig to end the matter. Rika's relatives at once clamor not only for their original demands, but for the pig as well. Possibly a free fight ensues, and Rika's people get badly used, and threats of "soul snaring" are heard on all sides.

Then Rika's wife makes the snare for Tetoro's soul. Taking her mat out into the village square or upon a well frequented road or path, she suspends the snare from the branches of trees or sticks placed in the ground in such a position that she can closely watch the orifice in the center of the square Rika's friends, male and female, come with her. They bring food and eat it and throw fragments under the snare to attract the flies, with which the island is infested. If but one fly crawls through the hole Tetoro is a dead man, unless he suddenly gives in and allows himself to be bled, for not only do Rika's people watch the snare, but his own as well. No one of them would dare to attempt to destroy the snare. The death of the interferer by occult power would certainly follow.

And so for hours and hours—sometimes for days—many pairs of eyes watch the little circle of cane, and Tetoro and his friends are now ready to yield, but feel that still more extortionate demands may be made. Then at last a fly is seen to crawl through, and a shout goes through the village.

"Un hopo te lago! Ua hopo te lago!" ("A fly has passed through.") Tetoro hears the cries and immediately imagines he feels ill. His wife and relatives crowd about him and try to cheer him up, but his face assumes a melancholy look, and as the time passes on he refuses his food. Perhaps he may confess that he did steal Rika's fish and tremblingly offer to make full restitution if Rika will catch a fly and make it go through the circle from the reverse side through which the first one entered voluntarily. Usually this is done, and what might have become a lasting family feud had Tetoro died of "funk," through being bewitched, ends up by the payment of so much property to Rika, and a feast for which both parties provide the viands.—Pall Mall Gazette.

EAT LETTUCE DAILY.

Then You Will Be In No Danger of Catching Smallpox.

Lettuce is an absolute preventive of smallpox. No one is in the least particle of danger of catching smallpox who eats a little lettuce every day.

Smallpox belongs to the scorbutic class of diseases. Sailors at sea, deprived of fresh vegetables, get scurvy. Scurvy is a typical scorbutic disease. Smallpox is another. Smallpox always rages during the winter season, when the poor people are deprived of fresh vegetable foods.

Celery and onions are good for this purpose, but there is such a long interval between their being gathered and being eaten that they lose most of their antiscorbutic properties. Lettuce is served shortly after it is picked, and hence contains the valuable properties which will prevent smallpox.

We say without the least hesitation or reserve that lettuce will prevent smallpox. It is a thousand times better than vaccination. It has no liabilities, like vaccination, to produce other diseases. We are willing to stake our professional reputation on the broad statement that any one who eats lettuce daily will not catch smallpox, whether he be vaccinated or not.—Medical Talk.

Birds as They Fly.

No bird can fly for any appreciable distance tail first. The nearest approach to such a movement is shown in the tumbler pigeon when that bird slews his wings forward and, suddenly turning back his head, throws a somersault, but this is not true backward flight.

When a bird wishes to reverse its motion it tilts its body laterally, as a railway carriage would be tilted in taking a curve, or increases the number of beats given by one wing as compared with the other or keeps one wing extended while the other is partially flexed. But a bird can no more fly backward than a ship can sail astern.

Some birds, however, and particularly the albatross, can fly half upside down—that is, with the wings pointed in a direction nearly perpendicular to the sea—and when turning quickly in this position the appearance is sometimes almost as though the bird were using its wings in a backward direction, though their structure is not really adapted to any such movement, and when poised, facing a strong wind, birds may seem to move astern.

Rossetti and Whistler.

Dante Gabriel Rossetti once showed Whistler a sketch for a painting and asked him how he liked it. "It has good points," said Whistler. "Go ahead with it by all means."

A few weeks later he asked how the work was progressing. "All right," answered Rossetti cheerfully. "I've ordered a stunning frame for it."

Happening in at Rossetti's in Cheyne Walk, Whistler asked to see the canvas, which was brought out beautifully framed.

"You've done nothing to it since I saw it, have you?" said Whistler.

"No," replied Rossetti, "but I've written a sonnet on the subject if you would like to hear it."

The former of course assented, and the poet-painter thereupon recited some lines of peculiar tenderness and melody. They were barely ended when Whistler broke in with:

"Rossetti, put the sonnet in the frame."

Indian Tribes of the South.

The Cherokees, as far back as the whites have any knowledge of them, occupied portions of northeast Alabama, southeast Tennessee, western North Carolina and a portion of northwest Georgia. They were essentially a hill people and their homes were among the mountain ranges. The Choctaws, on the contrary, occupied the comparatively level regions of middle west Alabama and eastern Mississippi. Between them and the Cherokees were the Creeks on the northwest and the Chickasaws on the north. The Cherokees and Choctaws were widely separated and were never neighbors, at least in historic times.—Montgomery (Ala.) Advertiser.

The Ocean Located.

The class in elementary geography was up for recitation. "What is an ocean?" asked the teacher. "You may answer, Janet."

"It is a large body of water situated near Norfolk, Va.," replied Janet, who had once visited her aunt at the seashore.—Kansas City Journal.

"Does Jawley chew gum habitually?"

"No. Why?"

"I never see him that his jaw isn't wagging."

To say silly things is about as bad as to do them.—Punxsutawney Spirit.

A WEAK STOMACH.

It May Be Strengthened by Wearing a Wide Flannel Bandage.

All who suffer from poor digestion should wear a ten inch width of flannel bandage next the skin, pinned fairly tight round the body over the stomach. No liver or digestive pill or pepsin preparation helps the stomach a twentieth part as much as his flannel prescription. A poor circulation in the stomach, causing that chilly, "miserable" feeling, is at the root of half the indigestion that mortals are heir to. That is why hot water drinking gives relief. It helps the circulation. A flannel bandage worn day and night all the year round cures the faulty blood circulation of the stomach; consequently it cures dyspepsia. Five hours' interval between meals, avoiding fried foods, made dishes and mixtures and observing three or four "Lenten meals" in every week are golden rules for good digestion. A good dinner at night is necessary for those whose pleasure or work keeps them up very late, but for ordinary folk who dine at 7 and go to bed about 10:30 only a light, wholesome repast should be taken at the end of the day, when the muscles and nerves are more or less exhausted. A "tired stomach is a weak stomach" is a golden rule to remember, yet how often one hears people say:

"I've been rushing about all day and am tired to death. I must have a big meal to make up for it." You may put the big meal into the stomach, but you cannot make the stomach digest it.—Exchange.

Killed Him In Cold Blood.

It was after dinner in the little cafe beloved by literary Bohemia and the diners at the end table were swapping stories of their most startling experiences. Each had told a thriller, and all eyes turned to the long haired poet who wrote only martial lays.

"I had a terrible experience once," he said. "The memory of it haunts me now. I inflicted the most awful fate possible to imagine upon a fellow creature. It was in Germany. I didn't know the language very well, and I suppose I must have made some blunder in addressing a fiery looking chap at a hotel there. What it was I don't know, but at any rate he declared he had been insulted and demanded a duel on the spot.

"'One of us,' he cried in tones of fearful wrath, 'shall never leave this room alive!'

"I knew him to be an expert swordsman. But was I afraid? No! 'So let it be,' I said. And then I rushed out of the room, locked the door behind me and left him there to die!"—New York Press.

A Boarding House Superstition.

"Speaking of bad luck," said a landlady the other day, "did you ever hear that it was bad luck to go back to a house you had once lived in? Well, it is. I heard some one say that when I was a little girl, and some way it has always remained in my mind. If any person who has lived in my house goes away and talks of coming back I always try to dissuade him. One young fellow scoffed at the idea, yet the day after he came back to live with me he lost his position and did not get another until he moved away from my house. He would have stuck it out only I told him I would have to have my room. So he went away, and at once secured another and better position than the one he had when he first came to me."

The Best Bargain on Record.

Probably never in the history of the world was a better bargain made than the purchase of the island of Grenada, in the British West Indies. It was bought by the French from the Caribs by a solemn treaty in the middle of the seventeenth century, and the price paid was two bottles of rum. Esau's mess of pottage was a good stroke of business by comparison. The Caribs soon regretted having sold their birthright and vainly tried to get the island back by force. It is now one of England's most prosperous colonies in the West Indies, with a population of over 50,000 and a big trade.

Why He Quit.

Hal—What, you've stopped calling on the girl with the plaid waist!

Tom—Yes; it's all over there.

Hal—Why? Father object?

Tom—Bless you, no! And I had nerve enough to dodge all her hints about popping the question also, but the last time I called she had the sign "Do It Now" stuck on the center table. That floored me, and I've quit.—New York Times.

Fight Until the End.

Life can be made a success. It is not a question of climbing above poverty; it is a question of understanding life. So many of us have been lured away and fascinated by what turn out to be phantoms and false gods! We have had to wheel back and begin over again and fight along against tremendous odds, and yet with all that life can be made a success, for success consists in doing right, in doing the best you can with what you have, of years of experience, of sorrows, of chances, of joys and of hope. Fight until the end.—Schoolmaster.

MIGHTY MEAN TRICK.

One Way of Scoring a Wife's Extravagance Without Raising a Family Disturbance.

He drew a letter from his pocket, glanced at it and hastily put it back; and there was something in the way he did it that attracted his wife's attention. He meant that it should, says the Chicago Post.

"I wonder," she said to herself, "what's in that letter? He certainly was mightily disconcerted when he took it from his pocket."

Later he changed his coat for his smoking jacket and left the coat conveniently near her.

The temptation was too great to be resisted, and when he was out of the room she slyly abstracted the letter from his pocket, as he had meant that she should do.

Her curiosity was satisfied. It was the bill for her latest gown, with comments on extravagance written across it. She wanted to answer them, but she could not without betraying what she had done. She was angry, but she dared not show it. When he returned she had to sit there and smile as pleasantly as she had before he left the room. Such a mean man!

The J. P.'s Agree.

Staunton, Ark., Aug. 31st.—News comes from Duff, Searcy Co., this state, that Mr. T. E. Reeves, a Justice of the Peace at that place, has written a letter recommending Dodd's Kidney Pills in which he says:

"I think Dodd's Kidney Pills can't be beat for Kidney Trouble, and I wish them every success."

The local J. P. Mr. E. B. Cox agrees with his brother Justice on this point for he says:

"I had a bad case of Kidney Trouble and was not able to do a day's work without great distress. I bought six boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills and after I had used three boxes I was all right. I am as well as ever, and I cannot praise Dodd's Kidney Pills too highly.

"I have given the other three boxes to some friends of mine who had found out what it was that had cured me so satisfactorily and quickly and they all speak highly of Dodd's Kidney Pills."

No one disputes this unanimous verdict.

Unavoidable Delay.

The irate heirs called at the general office of the life insurance company.

"We want to know," they said, "why you are so long in paying the $10,000 called for in the policy our deceased relative carried in this company. He died three months ago, and we were promised we should have it in less than 60 days."

"What was his name?" asked the president.

"Benjamin Franklin Louderschlagel."

"Ah, that is the reason, gentlemen," affably explained the president of the concern. "If it had been a short, easy name like David Jones or Thomas Johnson the matter would have been settled and you would have got your money long ago."—Chicago Tribune.

SUFFERED FOR FIFTEEN YEARS

Completely Restored to Health.

Mrs. P. Brunzel, wife of P. Brunzel, stock dealer, residence 3111 Grand Ave., Everett, Wash., says: "For fifteen years I suffered with terrible pain in my back. I experimented with doctors and medicines but got little if any relief. I actually believe the aching in my back and through the groin became worse. I did not know what it was to enjoy a night's rest and arose in the morning feeling tired and unrefreshed. My suffering sometimes was simply indescribable. Finally, I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised and got a box. After a few doses I told my husband that I was feeling much better and that the pills were doing me good. When I finished that box I felt like a different woman. I didn't stop at that, though. I continued the treatment until I had taken five boxes. There was no recurrence until a week ago, when I began to feel miserable again. I bought another box and three days' treatment restored me to health. Doan's Kidney Pills act very effectively, very promptly, relieve the aching pains and all other annoying difficulties. I have recommended them to many people and will do so when opportunities present themselves."

A Free Trial of this great kidney medicine which cured Mrs. Brunzel will be mailed to any part of the United States on application. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists, price 50 cents per box.

MY FRIEND.

Are you my friend?
When I in darkness and despair
Grope for the light, and everywhere
Is only darkness, until you
Bring to me joy and comfort, too;
Then, where was darkness, there is light,
And where despair, a hope so bright—
You are my friend.

Are you my friend?
A sacrifice you make to cheer,
Nor count no service ever drear
If aught you do in anywise
Dispel the gloom in my sad eyes,
And bring a ray of sunshine where
Was only misery and care—
You are my friend.

Are you my friend?
When sorrow comes and grief and woe,
You do not hesitate to go
And do what little mortal may
To smooth a rough and rugged way;
With kindly word allay my fears,
And with a smile drive 'way the tears—
You are my friend.

A SLIGHT MISUNDERSTANDING

By HENRY HUMISTON.

MANUEL, the fat bartender in the Cafe Paseje, looked sharply at the two Americans leaning against the bar, and when he was sure that he was unobserved he called his patron saint to witness, and then spit viciously in the direction of the hated Gringoes. Outside the white tropical sunlight danced in the deserted streets of La Sinceridad. A soldier was sleeping in a doorway, and a small child, very airily attired, peered curiously in at the door of the cafe at the two strangers. One of the Americans was tall and straight and well groomed. The other man's clothes bore mute evidence to having been slept in many times. The man himself looked badly in need of a shave; he was pale and nervous, and smoked incessantly, lighting one cigaret from the butt of the other.

"Bob," said the tall American, "I have heard all sorts of rumors. Did you sell me out? As man to man, as fellow countrymen, I beg of you to be square with me now if you haven't before. Let me know where I stand, what I am to expect. Have you sold me out?"

The man in the much worn Broadway suit shrugged his shoulders. "Didn't you get the rifles you bought of me?"

"Why, yes; my men have 1,200 Mausers now, thanks to you. But—"

"Didn't your gang get the cartridges I put ashore from the fishing boat last Tuesday?"

"Yes, we got the cartridges and the two rapid fire guns that you brought to us, too, although where you got them I can't imagine."

"You gave me an order for 1,200 rifles and 300,000 rounds of cartridges. I delivered the goods. You say you got 'em. What's the kick?"

"Simply this," went on the other man. "You delivered the goods you promised. But you are a filibuster. A filibuster I understand generally plays fast and loose. He takes money from all sides. I don't say you have done this, but I've been told so. You sold me guns. I'm told you've sold guns and cartridges to Col. Gonzales, too. Consequently he's ready to strike a blow, and I've got to fight, when I thought that by getting a well equipped little army together Gonzales would be afraid to start any trouble. I engaged you first. You were my agent. You had no right to go into the employment of Gonzales. But what could I expect a fili—"

"One man's gold is as good as another's, isn't it?" asked the filibuster.

"Yes," answered the tall American, sulkily, "to a man who doesn't know what honor is."

"In other words, a filibuster," said the short man.

"Exactly."

The disreputable man smiled sadly and lit a fresh cigaret.

"There comes your other master," went on the tall American. "There's Gonzales. He doesn't know, perhaps, that you have been playing fast and loose with us both. Why don't you tell him? It will make no difference, though. If he is ready to fight, he'll fight. I know what it means in the end. It means ruin to me, that's all. If I could have won out by that little trick I was planning to turn on him it would have settled everything. But anyhow, I played the man; I wasn't a sneak and a coward that—"

"Just cut that out for the time being," said the filibuster, "here's Gonzales."

The colonel entered the cafe blinking his eyes like an owl as he stepped from the brilliantly lighted street into the cool darkness of the cafe. He stopped in astonishment when he saw the filibustor and Bob Nelson together. The filibuster called him over.

"Colonel," said the filibuster, "my friend, Mr. Martin, thought I ought to acquaint you with the fact that I have sold him 1,200 stands of arms and cartridges to match."

The colonel shrugged his shoulders. "I know it," he said briefly, "For that I am glad. He has what you call bluffed. I shall call that bluff. There will be a pretty fight. I am the stronger. I shall win. Is it not so?"

"Colonel," said the tall American, "I am not a coward. You know that. I'm willing to fight you to the last ditch. But what's the use of killing off a lot of people? What's all the trouble about, anyhow? You are going to crush me because your daughter loves me and I love her. You want to force her into a marriage with a contemptible old octogenarian that she despises. You envy me the hold I have on the people here. You have a prejudice against me because I am an American, and you went to ruin me. Every cent I have in the world is invested here. I've got to fight for my rights if you force me to, but I would prefer some other way."

"There is," said the colonel. "There is. Leave the country. Go away. Never see my daughter again. Never come back."

"I'll not do that," said the American, shortly.

"Then to-morrow you will start your revolution? Very well. That is the way it shall appear. I have the favor of the president. Don Miguel, that my undutiful daughter refuses to marry, is what you call a big gun here. You will be crushed, Senor Martin. It is sad."

"I intended to start no revolution, Senor Colonel, and you know it. That scamp of a Miguel and you have fixed up a little conspiracy against me, and you know that, too. You were going to come down on my people suddenly, there would have been a fight, and when it was all over my pieces would have been in ruins, my people killed, and myself either dead or a fugitive. I tried to protect myself. I secured arms and when you came I was going to meet force with force. I had hoped that my forces would be so much stronger than yours that I could drive you back and force you to give it up. This filibuster here is the only man that can get arms into this country. I hired him first and thought that as you couldn't secure rifles from anybody else you would be badly off. But he has sold to you, too, and our forces won't be so badly matched. I'll give you a good fight, Senor Colonel."

The colonel laughed. "Yes," he said, "your countryman was so good as to sell me guns, too, and many cartridges. That is one nice thing about Gringoes. They will sell their souls, their friends, anything for gold. It is well."

The filibuster leaned wearily on the bar. "I haven't had my pay from you, either, Senor Colonel."

"No," said the colonel, "but you shall. Let me see. I bought of you 3,000 rifles and 500,000 of the cartridges."

"You bought," said the filibuster, "3,000 loaves of bread and 500,000 dried fish."

The colonel laughed. "I need not explain," he said, bowing mockingly to Martin, "you know it is the custom in these countries where governments do not like things like revolutions. We do not say rifles or cartridges. They are such wicked words. A spy may be hanging around and he might hear. That would be bad. So we say bread and fish."

"Extremely interesting," said Martin.

"I didn't understand your colloquialisms," put in the filibuster, lazily. "Your men came to me and ordered bread and fish. I filled the order. The bread and fish were unloaded from the schooner last night. Probably you have heard from your men today, or the boxes were not to be opened until to-night."

The colonel's face was white and he trembled. "You sold me fish and bread?"

"Yes," said the filibuster. "You should have been more explicit. Sometimes I am a little obtuse."

Martin's face was glowing. He grabbed the filibuster's hand and pumped it up and down. "Bully for you, old man," he gasped. "Senor Colonel," he said, "we will go on with the war. You must be careful in shooting that bread and those dried fish at us, though. Nothing is worse than dyspepsia. Go on, by all means, with your original plans. I intend to let events have their course. But by the time your arms have arrived the government will be overthrown and your old enemy and my friend Torres will be president."

"Senor Martin," gasped the colonel. "I am sure my daughter would be pleased to have you call on us this afternoon. Will you not do my poor house the honor of dining with us tonight? Ah, thank you, I will go and tell my daughter you are coming."

He walked hurriedly out of the cafe.

"I don't know what to say," gasped Martin. "You'll forgive me what I said, won't you? I didn't know. And it meant so much to me."

"O, it's all right," replied the filibuster. "I don't mind. I'm used to everything. It's all in the game."

"I'm sure of one thing," went on Martin, "and that is that blood is thicker than water. It must have been an American that said that."—Chicago Tribune.

German Pianos.

Germany heads the list of nations in the manufacture of pianos, not only in number and cheapness, but in average of quality. A very fine instrument may be bought there for $250. There are 435 piano factories in Germany, of which 140 are located in Berlin. In the past 20 years the value of exports has risen from $1,900,000 annually to $6,110,000. About 40 per cent. of these exports go to Great Britain. Argentine Republic comes next in order and then Belgium. Australia, Russia and Holland each import about $1,000,000 of German pianos yearly.—Trade Journal.

Water Slot Machines in Alaska.

Nickel-in-the-slot machines are in use in Dawson City, Alaska, for selling water in the winter. One can put in a nickel and get five gallons of water, but no more. It is so cold there that the water supply in the houses is shut off so that the pipes will not freeze every night.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

A Negro Fiend.

Struggling in the cruel grasp of a burly colored man, Ruby Steele, 13 years old, was carried from her home in Minneapolis at an early hour in the morning and released only when her abductor was forced by pursuers to abandon his intent.

Awakening from a sound sleep at 1 o'clock in the morning by a strong pressure over her face the young girl whose home is at 1414 Sixth street SE. Minneapolis was terrified by the sight of a negro sitting in the window.

She cried out in terror, and the intruder leaped to her bed and bearing her in his arms, ran to the window, striking down in his flight the girl's mother, who had rushed to the room, aroused by her daughter's cry.

A strong odor of chloroform permeated the atmosphere.

Hurling now the half conscious child to the balcony, the negro leaped from the room. He seized the girl and, gaining the ground, made off in the darkness.

The girl by this time had gained a better control of her senses, and screamed in terror, the negro striving, she says, to choke her into silence.

Neighbors were attracted to the scene by the child's crys, and her assailant abandoned her, disappearing in the night.

He was soon arrested and is sharply guarded.

Coal Is Found.

Reports from the the Coal country north of Pelican Rapids are to the effect that several shafts have been sunk in different places, and coal has been found in every instance, the veins being about three feet in thickness. The coal is of the lignite varirty, but of a good quality.

The announcement that coal has been discovered caused some excitement here a year or two ago, but very little has been heard of the matter lately, and it was generally supposed that the prospecting had been abandoned until the blowing up of an engine and the serious scalding of Engineer Peter Auduholm a few days ago called attention to the fact that work was still in progress.

There is difference of opinion as to whether it will pay to mine coal of this thickness at the depth at which it is being found, but some of the mining experts hold that it may pay well. The Duluth company which is pushing the exploration has recently compelled all of the men who enter its employ to take an oath to keep still about the discoveries.

To Benefit the Indians.

Major G. L. Scott, acting Indian agent at Onigum, has received from Washington authority to make considerable improvements on the property of which he is agent. Cass Lake school will be enlarged under the direction of Dr. Rodwell, agent at Cass Lake, and the school at Cross Lake will be enlarged, the saw mill will be re-established at Red Lake agency, horses will be purchased and the agency building repaired at Red Lake. A school house barn will be built. This work costing a few thousand dollars, Major Scott expects to have finished by fall. Several buildings have been recently been added to the Leech Lake agency and others are contemplated.

The report that the Indians are on the increase is misleading. The statistics show neither a decline nor an increase, but that the population is at a standstill, especially on the reservations.

Not Compulsory.

For the first time in many years the public schools of Minnesota will open this fall to all children without question regarding vaccination. The new statute which received Gov. Van Sant's signature in April last expressly forbids the compulsory vaccination of any child or the requirement of vaccination as a qualification for school attendance. Only in case smallpox becomes epidemic can vaccination of school children be required, and then only when a board of health and school board acting jointly enact such a rule. This bill was a compromise measure after the defeat of a bill prohibiting all compulsory vaccination which last spring passed the house and was rejected by the efforts of medical members in the senate.

Killed in Collision.

A wrecking car on the Seventh street line in St. Paul collided with truck No. 1 of the St. Paul fire department. Tillerman Patrick Fleming was fatally hurt, dying at noon, and Lieutenant Henry Langevin, Truckman Oscar Pederson and John Costella were painfully hurt. Captain J. J. Nnlerone and the other members of the truck company were more or less bruised and the truck was completely demolished. Louis Hoffman, the motorman, is under arrest.

News in Brief.

Ole Peterson, 435 Adams street northeast, Minneapolis, was found dead in bed.

During a storm lightning struck the barn of B. Fuchs, south of Perham. The building was destroyed, together with three stacks of grain and four head of cattle. The loss is partially covered by insurance.

Mrs. Hendrina Voorbeck of Le Sueur eighty years old, has been arrested and held under $200 bonds for chopping down a line fence near her residence.

Some one fired a shot which broke a plate glass window in the American National band, Sixth and Minnesota streets' St. Paul.

Wisconsin riflemen will not take part in the interstate competition of militiamen to be held at Lake City, Minn., next month.

Knute Nolson died at the age of 81 at Grand Meadow. He was one of the first white men who came to the Bear Creek settlement in 1852.

CATARRH DESTROYS THE KIDNEYS

Was Miserable—Could Not Stand Up or Walk—Pe-ru-na Cured.

Many Persons Have Catarrh and Don't Know It.

Mr. James M. Powell, 633 Troost street, Kansas City, Mo., Vice Grand of I. O. O. F., of Cherryville, Kan., writes:

"About four years ago I suffered with a severe catarrh of the bladder, which caused continued irritation and pain. I was miserable and could not stand up or walk for any length of time without extreme weariness and pain. I began taking Peruna and it greatly relieved me, and in eleven weeks I was completely cured and felt like a new man."—James M. Powell.

Hundreds of Dollars Spent in Vain.

Mr. Cyrus Hershman, Sheridan, Ind., writes:

"Two years ago I was a sick man. Catarrh had settled in the pelvic organs, making life a burden and giving me little hope of recovery. I spent hundreds of dollars in medicine which did me no good. I was persuaded by a friend to try Peruna. I took it two weeks without much improvement, but I kept on with it and soon began to get well and strong very fast. Within two months I was cured, and have been well ever since. I am a strong advocate of Peruna."—C. Hershman.

Peruna cures catarrh of the kidneys, liver and other pelvic organs, simply because it cures catarrh wherever located. No other systemic catarrh remedy has as yet been devised. Insist upon having Peruna. There are no medicines that can be substituted.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

The Bible and the Empire State Express.

A Bible student has recently been figuring on how long it would have taken the people to make the journey from Dan to Beersheba if they could have had the benefit in the olden times of the Empire State Express. He figured that the train would have made this journey in less than three hours, although from a reading of the account in the Bible one would think it was a long journey, and it was for those days with their limited means of transportation. Ezekiel, the Chaldean prophet, had in his mind's eye something like the Empire State Express when he uttered the words recorded in the first chapter of his prophecy. Look this up and see if you do not agree with the idea.—From the Troy Daily Times.

LOUIS PHILIPPE, CROWN PRINCE OF PORTUGAL.

As a result of the festivities at Lisbon, in connection with the recent visit of the American squadron under Admiral Cotton, the hope is freely expressed in the Portuguese capital that the young crown prince may visit the United States next year, but as yet no official announcement to that effect has been made. Louis Philippe is the elder son of King Carlos and Queen Marie Amelie of Portugal. He is styled duke of Braganza, and is a grandson of Louis Philippe, duke of Orleans. He was born at Lisbon in 1887, and reached his sixteenth birthday last March. He is described as a particularly bright and lovable youngster.

FISH THAT CARRIES WEAPONS.

Species That Has Skin Like Sand-Paper and Armed with Three-Cornered Files.

Two of the fish at the aquarium wear armor and carry concealed weapons. As the police seldom visit the aquarium and no complaints have been filed, the fish have not been disturbed in the possession of their armaments, says the New York Tribune. They are the orange filefish, which are coated with a skin that resembles sandpaper in the latter's most striking characteristic, and in a hollow on the top of the back they carry sharp three-cornered files. When not in use these lie along the back. When a grudge is to be settled the filefish literally gets his back up and viciously tickles the object of his hatred in the ribs.

The two specimens at the aquarium were secured a short time ago in Gravesend bay. The fishermen in the neighborhood of the bay have other names for them. "Old sow," "old maid" and "foolfish" are some of the designations which they apply to them when they sit over the fire and spin yarns. The shape of the head and mouth is responsible for these names. The mouth opens upward, the lower jaw protruding beyond the upper. Crustaceans are the diet of this fish, and the shape of the mouth and the sharp teeth within are for catching and destroying this kind of food. One would say, judging from their appearance, that their diet was not well suited to their needs, for they have a starved look. The other day a party of sightseers observed this look.

"Here's a fish trying the starvation cure," remarked one, turning to his companions. "There's something the matter with him. Don't you see how thin he is?"

Electricity in Dentistry.

It is proposed to use currents of electricity in place of anaesthetics for operations on the teeth. One pole is connected to an electrode molded to fit the tooth and lined with wet asbestos to counteract any heating effect on the tooth itself. Five minutes suffices to render insensible a tooth with a single fang.

CORRECTED HIS MISTAKE.

Klondike "Dentist" Got the Right Tooth Later On and Charged for It.

High prices often prevail in frontier towns, and those who live in new settlements become accustomed to the charges and think little about it. A man who recently returned from the Klondike tells a good story which is printed in the New York Tribune.

People get used to paying big money for trifles, he said, and two dollars for a box of sardines or five dollars for a pound of bad coffee came to be regarded as reasonable prices. But once I had the surprise of hearing an unexpectedly low price named. It was like this: I had a jumping toothache—was nearly wild with it—and went to a shanty where I was told there was a dentist. A rough-looking fellow told me that he was the dentist, and I asked him to draw my tooth. He looked me over, got his forceps fastened on my tooth and yanked it out after a couple of hard twists.

"How much?" I asked.

"Well, two dollars, I guess," said the dentist.

I paid him, although my jaw still ached badly.

"That's the cheapest thing I've seen round here," I remarked, as I gave him the money.

"Well," he said, "I thought I'd make it low, because on account of the bad light I pulled the wrong tooth."

I had to go the next day and have the bad tooth out, and he made matters square by charging me ten dollars.

Heated Clothing.

Clothing heated by electricity will be worn by the duke of Abruzzi during his next polar excursion. The heat will pass through a network of asbestos-covered wire arranged in the lining of his apparel. His bedding wil be warmed in the same way.

Baldness from Meat Diet.

A Belgian physician declares that early baldness is frequently caused by the excessive eating of meat. He asserts that he often checked cases of falling hair by combining with local treatment a diet of milk, eggs and fruit.

HARDY PONIES OF CONNEMARA.

Indian ponies of America are hardy little beasts, with much intelligence and fire, but their cousin, the Connemara pony, of Ireland, is a more placidly companionable creature, as this picture from the Detroit Free Press will serve to illustrate. The Irish nag is hardy and does his share of work with a good humor that is characteristic. It will take its master and mistress on a journey to town with never a thought of bucking. It will carry a heavy burden a long distance and feel well recompensed with a little food and a few words of "blarney," and is something of a philosopher in other ways.

ROUND ABOUT THE STATE.

The strike condition in Minneapolis is unchanged.

A. F. Kratsch, 80 years old, died at Mankato from the effects of a fall.

The Gold-Stabeck bank and the bank of Redwood Falls have consolidated.

Professor J. Thaler of Calmar, Iowa, has been engaged to instruct the Preston band.

O H Olson has secured the contract from the state board of control for the construction of a new cellroom addition at the prison to cost $22,000.

Rice and old shoes pelted in traditional godspeed at a West Duluth bridal party entering a carriage frightened the horses attached, and at the heels of a wildly racing team the bride and her maid of honor were dragged in a mad race through the streets. Very luckily neither was hurt.

The St. Paul school board has decided that pianos in schools are an unnecessary expense and has ordered them out. The saving will be about $1,000 per year.

Robert S. Ross of Colfax, Iowa, was struck by the engine of a passenger train in the Great Western yards in St. Paul and received injuries which may prove fatal.

As the result of an accident Miss Cassie Benjamin, 17 years old, one of the best known young women of southeast Minneapolis, died at her home of carbolic acid poisoning.

When the name of Ole Olson was called in the police court St. Paul to answer to a charge of drunkenness a big, strapping Sioux Indian stepped out of the "bull pen" and confronted Clerk Dix. The prisoner insisted that his name was Ole Olson, that he came from New Sweden, in Redwood county and was a visitor to the state fair.

Over one hundred loads of potatoes were marketed in Elk River in one day. Some of them were hauled from beyond Zimmerman, from the neighborhood of St. Francis and from near Anoka, and many from Wright county.

The people of St. Paul consume the least milk per capita of the three largest cities in Minnesota, according to the report of the milk supply of 200 cities received by the state dairy and food commission yesterday from H. E. Alvord, chief of the dairy division of the United States department of agriculture.

State Superintendent of Public Instruction Olson reports that the cost of maintaining 34 summer schools this year was $26,346, as against only $25,696, for 37 schools last year. The enrollment, too, fell off from 4,565 to 4,359.

Tory Nietzel, a 14-year-old boy was found guilty of stealing $5 from C. M. Cawzet's safe at Delano and was sent to the reformatory at St. Cloud. A comrade, O'Leary, was let go, the evidence showing that Nietzel took the money.

It is announced by the Duluth street car company that $40,000 will be expended before winter in the purchase of new motor equipment and that the power will be materially improved.

The state bank of Silver Lake, Minn., was robbed of $2,500 in cash and all notes and securities. The safe was completely destroyed. There is no clue to the perpetrators.

Ira Flemming was arraigned before Judge Page Morris in the federal court charged with making counterfeit fifty-cent pieces. Flemming admitted the charge.

Hugh Martin, employed by the St. Paul health department to remove dead animals, has been missing for three weeks.

Reichow Brothers of St. Paul will institute an automobile hack service from the St. Paul union depot to St. Anthony hill. An automobile hack service from St. Paul to South St. Paul is also to be started soon.

Lost in the woods for eight days and without food, was the experience of George Smith, who lives near Winton.

The supposed tramp who was shot by Chief of Police Ramage, escaped from the insane asylum at Rochester. He says his name is Anderson.

M. J. Hefiler and Lew Wilson were arrested at Luverne charged with robbing Mike Dwyer, a passenger on a Rock Island train.

Louis Hilstrom, janitor at the Colonial flats, St. Paul, Nineteenth St. and Park Ave., was slugged into insensibility by footpads.

Do not doubt that advertiseing pays. Bryn has made a fortune by being well advertised, and he has woked the news paper and got the advetiseing done for nothing. If a circus would s how at Crookston and Bryn, was to be at Grand Forks, he would get the bigest crowde, because he has been more extensively advetised.

With Eddy for governor and Young for attorney general the seventh district has made a fair start toward suppling the state ticket. Possibly Dowling could be induced to ask for something also.—Crookston Times.

That's it, all get into line from the northern part of the state and ask and some of them may recieve.

A Chariton Iowa, paper tell of a man who mortgaged his farm to buy his wife a pair of diamond earrings. The wife took in washing to pay the interest on the mortgage, but the first job she lost one of the "sparks" in the suds, whereupon she tried to hang herself in the barn, but the rope broke and she fell on a Jersey cow worth $150 and broke its back. Her husband then undertook to shoot the cow to end its misery, but the gun burst and destroyed his eyes and his wife ran away with a lightening rod peddler, and the mortgage is still on the farm.

Secretary of war Root will leave the cabinet Jan 1, and will be succeeded by Govoner William H. Taft of the Philipins. Judge Taft will in turn be succeeded as govoner of the Philipins by General Luke F. wright, the present vice-governor. The president could hardly make a better selection for the war portfolio than Judge Taft, who is one of the best public officials the country has ever produced The same may be equally said of General wright, his successor in the Philipins. General wright, though a democrat, has the entire confidence of the admiaestration, and his work has been of such a high order of merit that the president determined to make him governor of the island.

—Thirteen Towns.

LANDS TO BE OAPENED.

Congressman Halvor Steenerson will draw up a new Red Lake reservation bill and introduce it early in December. It will differ in many details from the one which passed congress at the last session, but which the Indians refused to ratify.

It will provide for payments to the Pembina Indians, and will include sections 16 and 36 in the area to be sold for the benefit of the Red Lake tribe. Under the terms of Senator Clapp's bill these seetions reverted to the state for school purposes. Mr Steenerson thinks a bill with these provisions would be satisfactory to the Indians.

It will not be a difficult matter to get the Indians to ratify a bill of this kind and we may expect to see this reservation oapened for settlement soon after the bill is passed.

Not Less Devoted.

"You used to sing 'Every Morn I Send You Violets' before we were married," said Mrs. Brimkin with a sigh.

"Yes," answered Mr. Brimkin, "but my devotion has taken a more practical form. Every month I pay the meat bill."—Washington Star.

Beside Herself.

The fair young thing was telling about how happy she was when she saw her brother's baseball team win the intercollegiate game. "Oh," she gurgled, "I was so delighted that I just hugged myself for joy!"

Here the grave professor of psychology looked up with an air of interest. "Hugged yourself?" he asked. "Indeed, you must have been quite beside yourself to have done that."—Judge.

The Proof of It.

Casey (after Riley has fallen five stories)—Are yez dead, Pat?

Riley—Oi am.

Casey—Shure, yer such a liar Oi don't know whether to belave yez or not.

Riley—Shure, thot proves Oi'm dead. Yez wudn't dare call me a liar if Oi wur aloive!—Judge.

The Real Thing.

"This," said the young Benedict, who was just realizing that he had caught a Tartar, "is what I call real married life."

"I'm glad you're satisfied with something," she snapped.

"Oh, I'm not. I merely meant to inform you that it is not ideal."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Why She Liked Him.

"Why do you like Harry?" asked one fair maid of another. "He kisses you most awkwardly, I've noticed."

"That's just why I like him," was the quick retort. "If he went about it in a graceful manner I would know he had been practicing before he met me."

She Could Spell Too.

While waiting in the reception room for their hostess some visitors were entertained by that lady's four-year old daughter. One of the callers remarked to the other:

"She is not very p-r-e-t-t-y."

A SCOUT'S HARD LIFE.

Some of the Hardships and Dangers That Must Be Faced.

An unfortunate, says Leslie's Monthly, was sent with a dispatch to one of the smaller outposts in the far northwest. It was toward spring, when the midday sun thaws the surface of the snow and the light frosts harden the melted crusts to a glace of ice as dazzlingly bright as the blinding flashes of sunlight from polished steel. The thaw had crusted over the trail, and the scout had to keep a sharp eye on the way not to lose the path altogether. Suddenly the midday sun developed extraordinary hues. Magenta, purple and black patches began to dance on the snow, alternately with wheels and rockets of cheese colored fire. Then the light went out altogether, though the man knew that it was broad day. He had become snow blind. The only thing was to give his horse the bit.

The horse stood stock still. By that time he knew that he had lost the trail altogether or the broncho would have followed any visible path. He wheeled the horse about. It still refused to go on, and then the man inferred that the crust of ice had been so hard that the horse could not follow back the way it had come. That night the trooper slept under saddle blankets, with the faithful horse standing sentry.

For five days the trooper wandered blindly over the prairies, losing all count of time, eating snow to quench his thirst and sleeping in the holes that the broncho had pawed through the ice crust to the under grass. The trooper was now too weak to mount and keep the saddle. As a last hope the thought struck him that if he unsaddled his horse and turned it loose it might find its way back to the fort, and so notify his friends that he was lost. He did this, but the faithful creature refused to leave the man lying on the snow and stood over him in spite of all his efforts to drive it off. On the sixth day the mail carrier found the pair. The trooper was severely frozen, but the rider and horse lived to see many another day's service.

The Way to Identify Her.

Agnes and Ethel are the kind of twins it is difficult for intimates of the family to distinguish apart. They are four years old and a source of despair to mere acquaintances.

A friend of the family met one of the twins on the street the other day and asked:

"Now, which are you, Agnes or Ethel? I simply can't tell you apart."

"I'm Agnes," gurgled the small maiden, and then she put one of her chubby little fingers in her mouth and mumbled: "You can tell me easy. I'm the one with the loose tooth."—New York Press.

BIT OF FRENCH HISTORY.

An Empire Lost For Want of the Right Sort of Riding Habit.

An old legend which makes no pretense to truth tells how a kingdom was lost for want of a horseshoe nail. But a volume of sober historical and biographical purpose, written by Count d'Herrison, makes it appear that the Empress Eugenie, after the battle of Sedan, lost the chance to preserve the empire of her husband by not possessing exactly the right sort of riding habit. It was tha evening of Sept. 3, 1870.

The news of the surrender of the French army and of the Emperor Napoleon at Sedan had spread about Paris. The city was excited and there was talk of a revolution and the banishment of the imperial family. At this juncture Emile de Girardin, a man who was trusted by the empress and who had had no little experience during the previous changes of government, arrived at the palace of the Tuileries. "If your majesty were to appear on horseback in the midst of the people," Girardin said, "and announce the abdication of the emperor in favor of the prince imperial, your own assumption of the title of empress regent and the appointment of Thiers as prime minister, the empire might be saved. Something must be done to turn the tide."

The empress accepted the advice. But when this leader of the world's fashion sought for a proper costume for her performance it could not be found. The only riding habit in the Tuileries was a fantastic one of green, embroidered with gold and silver, made for a festal hunting occasion, and the hat was a not less fantastic three cornered affair of the epoch of Louis Quinze. The empress felt that it would not do to appear in this garb on such an occasion. Her appearance in it might have the opposite effect upon the people from that which she intended. The plan had to be given up, the empress and the prince imperial were banished and the Napoleonic empire was at an end.

A NOSE FOR NEWS.

The Genuine Newspaper Reporter is Born, Not Made.

"Poets are born, not made," said the retired newspaper man to the New Orleans Times-Democrat, "and I might add that reporters come into this world in much the same way. For instance the 'born' reporter will get a story if there is one in sight, while he who only has what I would call a mechanical sort of training will skim over the same ground without ever discovering that anything out of the ordinary has happened. Not many years ago I was holding an important position on one of the principal journals of Chicago. I was one day put on the city editor's desk, and, wanting to test the ability of two new men on the stuff, I assigned both of them to the same story. Of course neither knew the other was in the neighborhood, and you ought to have seen their respective reports. One of them had a two column story that created a sensation from one end of the city to the other, while the other turned in about two 'sticks' of the driest stuff I ever remember to have read. I am satisfied that both the men covered the story to the best of their respective abilities. One of them simply had a 'nose for news' and the other didn't. As I said, reporters are born, not made by studying 'journalism' in the abstract. The natural born reporter is at home in a newspaper office, he can live on ink and can sleep soundly on the imposing stone. He sees little news in a dog biting a man, but he is quick to grasp the importance of an item telling about a man biting a dog."

A Puzzling Problem.

The man seemed to be very much excited

"We've made a bet," he said, "on a question of law, and we've agreed to leave it to you."

"I'll do the best I can to settle it," returned the great lawyer, gratified by this evidence of the opinion in which he was held. "What is the question of law?"

"Why, a two dollar cat belonging to Brown ate a ten dollar bird belonging to Jones, and we want to know who has legal title to the combination of bird and cat."—Chicago Post.

A Word In Season.

The playwright turned pale with excitement and a sudden rush of pride as he heard from his position in the wings the sound of stamping feet and roaring voices.

"They are calling for the author!" he cried feverishly. "What shall I do? Must I make a speech?"

The manager, who had not only heard but seen the audience, took him by the elbow.

"The best thing you can do," he whispered, "is to slip out of the stage door and escape while there's time."

The Eucalyptus Tree.

When the world's supply of coal is exhausted, which is not a matter for immediate worry, the eucalyptus tree may be grown as a substitute. This eucalyptus stores up more of the sun's energy than any other tree (1 per cent of that reflected on the unit of area), and in South Africa it has been found cheaper to raise it than to import coal. An acre of eucalyptus plantation will produce each year the equivalent of thirty tons of coal.

"Ebenezer, dear," cried the wife of the kindly old capitalist as he slouched heavily homeward in the dusk, with his toil worn hands begrimed with gold dust and his back bowed by heavy and laborious calculation, "hurry now and water the stock and then come in, dear, and we'll sit down cozily and cut coupons."

"And glad I will be to rest," sighed he. "I've been shearing lambs all day. Dum this life! Dodgast it anyway! I got half a notion to sell out and move away, I'm that tired out."

Standing on Treacherous Soil.

Snipe shooting on an Irish bog is an excellent test of a gunner's skill and enthusiasm. An experienced bog shooter if he finds himself going down throws himself flat on his side or back and at the same time throws his gun to his attendant, generally an unshod "gossoon," who rarely fails to catch it. The sensation of being bogged is very unpleasant, but if a man throws himself on his side or back there is strength enough in the bent to support his body.—"Forty-five Years of [illegible]

MEXICAN INDIAN MAIDENS.

They Take the Initiative In Love Affairs and Do the Courting.

The custom of Mexico requires the Indian girl to do all the courting. She is just as bashful as the young swain whom she wishes to fascinate, but she has to take the initiative in love affairs. The young people meet only at the feasts, and after she has got m[illegible] under the influence of the native beer that is liberally consumed by all she tries to attract his attention by dancing before him in a clumsy way up and down on the same spot. But so bashful is she that she persistently keeps her back turned toward him. She may also sit down near him and pull his blanket and sing to him in a gentle, low voice a simple love song, such as "Beautiful man to be sure." If occasion requires, the parents of the girl may say to the parents of the boy, "Our daughter wants to marry your son." Then they send the girl to the boy's home that the young people may become acquainted. For two or three days perhaps they do not speak to each other, but finally she playfully begins to throw pebbles at him. If he does not return them she understands that he does not care for her. If he throws them back at her she knows that she has won him. She lets her blanket drop and runs off into the woods, and he is not long in following her.—Carl Lumholtz in "Unknown Mexico."

Change of Air.

The quasi miraculous benefits which are associated with change of air in the popular belief are in reality derived when they accrue from change of environment, qua change of habits of life. In a great many instances the measure of benefit obtainable would be as effectually secured, and at much less expense, by mere change of habits, without the fatigue and inconvenience of change of domicile. The overwrought city clerk might advantageously take to driving a cab, while the cabman would find it a relief to discharge for a time the functions of caretaker of a deserted house. Many an overworked physician would experience a distinct improvement were he to qualify as chauffeur, with no other object in view than to cover space, and there are few domestic servants whose health would not be sensibly modified by a brief experience as milkmaid or gleaner should the season lend itself to that pursuit. The "literary gent," whose brain is sterile of new ideas, might recuperate his energies by usurping the role of a sick man and remaining in bed for a week or two.—Medical Review.

A Spider and a King.

On the ceiling of one of the rooms in Sans Souci, the world renowned palace of Frederick the Great in Prussia, is the painting of a huge spider with its web. The reason for this odd decoration is that one morning just as the king was about to drink his usual morning cup of chocolate in this room he turned aside for something, and when, a moment later, he took up the cup he noticed a small spider had fallen into it. Immediately upon giving an order for a fresh cup a pistol report was heard, and it was discovered that the cook had shot himself. The reason for this, it was later found out, was that he had poisoned the chocolate, and of course when a fresh cup was ordered he supposed his treachery had been discovered. It was in remembrance of this narrow escape that Frederick ordered a spider's web to be painted on the ceiling.

But we held a meetin' right after, an' the widder got our washin' fer the next year, so she never lost nothin' by it, an' she got her clotheshorse back too!"—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

TELLING TREES' AGES.

Only Accurate Way Is Said to Be by Girth Measurement.

"The only accurate way to estimate a tree's age is by the measurement of its girth," said a botanist. "The counting of the rings of exogenous trees can only be applied to such as are cut down in their prime, for these trees, when they begin to die, cease to add their yearly rings. Girth measurement is the only safe guide to the age of trees.

"Hence all over the world botanists have now for some years been measuring trees of known and unknown age, compiling thus a volume of statistics that will become more and more valuable as it increases in size.

"The yew is the longest lived of trees. Three feet a century, our statistics show, is its normal growth. According to this rule, the Fortingal yew of Scotland, which was fifty-six feet in girth in 1769, must have lived over 1,800 years. The Tisbury yew, in Dorsetshire, is thirty-seven feet in girth and should be, therefore, 1,200 years old.

"There is a table of the age of oaks that differs from this. It is not a very satisfactory table, but it was compiled from trees of known age, and therefore it is statistically very valuable. According to it, a 40-year-old oak had a circumference of 8 feet; 83 years, 12 feet; 100 years, 18 feet; 200 years, 20 feet; 250 years, 27 feet; 300 years, 33 feet."—Philadelphia Record.

Curly Shavings.

A shaving of wood curls up owing to contraction on one side and expansion on the other. This expansion is accelerated by what is known as the "back iron" or "cap iron" which is used in most planes.

The object of this "cap iron" is to break the shavings into short lengths and to prevent the "cutting iron" from tearing or splitting the fibers of the wood, which lie always more or less in a slanting direction.

The nearer the edge of the "back iron" is placed to the edge of the "cutting iron" the shorter the shavings are broken off. These are smooth on one side, and the serrations on the other correspond with the distance between the edges of the two irons.

All wood, too, is formed in circular rings, such as can be seen in the section of any tree trunk. It follows, therefore, that when the rings of wood are cut across, as they are to a certain extent in the act of planing, they are relieved from tension, and curl up in the endeavor to expand themselves.

Head Massage Saves Hair.

"The hairbrush is responsible for much of the baldness that we see," a barber said. "It irritates the scalp. It destroys the little, delicate, tender follicles of hair that are trying their best to get on in the world."

"What would you substitute for the hairbrush—the comb?" a man asked.

"By no means. I'd substitute rubbing with the hands—massage. A little massage morning and evening, with a shampoo once a week, would keep the hair in excellent condition. It would encourage new hair to grow, whereas the vigorous brushing that is so common scares and kills all the feeble new hairs as soon as they sprout out. The brush and comb should only be used to part and arrange the hair—for about half a minute, that is, daily."

Sarah's Gloves.

A family in the south had a coal black cook named Sarah, whose husband was suddenly killed in a quarry accident. For the time being her grief was allayed by the preparations for an elaborate funeral, and on the day of this event, so dear to negroes who desire to show their importance, she appeared before her mistress in deepest black, but on her hands were a pair of white gloves, such as soldiers wear at dress parade and guard mount.

"Why, aunty," exclaimed her mistress, "what made you get white gloves?"

Sarah drew herself up indignantly and said in the chilliest tones, "Don't you suppose I wants dem niggahs to see dat I'se got on gloves?"—Lippincott's.

A WEAK STOMACH.

It May Be Strengthened by Wearing a Wide Flannel Bandage.

All who suffer from poor digestion should wear a ten inch width of flannel bandage next the skin, pinned fairly tight round the body over the stomach. No liver or digestive pill or pepsin preparation helps the stomach a twentieth part as much as his flannel prescription. A poor circulation in the stomach, causing that chilly, "miserable" feeling, is at the root of half the indigestion that mortals are heir to. That is why hot water drinking gives relief. It helps the circulation. A flannel bandage worn day and night all the year round cures the faulty blood circulation of the stomach; consequently it cures dyspepsia. Five hours' interval between meals, avoiding fried foods, made dishes and mixtures and observing three or four "Lenten meals" in every week are golden rules for good digestion. A good dinner at night is necessary for those whose pleasure or work keeps them up very late, but for ordinary folk who dine at 7 and go to bed about 10:30 only a light, wholesome repast should be taken at the end of the day, when the muscles and nerves are more or less exhausted. A "tired stomach is a weak stomach" is a golden rule to remember, yet how often one hears people say:

"I've been rushing about all day and am tired to death. I must have a big meal to make up for it." You may put the big meal into the stomach, but you cannot make the stomach digest it.—Exchange.

Killed Him in Cold Blood.

It was after dinner in the little cafe beloved by literary Bohemia and the diners at the end table were swapping stories of their most startling experiences. Each had told a thriller, and all eyes turned to the long haired poet who wrote only martial lays.

"I had a terrible experience once," he said. "The memory of it haunts me now. I inflicted the most awful fate possible to imagine upon a fellow creature. It was in Germany. I didn't know the language very well, and I suppose I must have made some blunder in addressing a fierce looking chap at a hotel there. What it was I don't know, but at any rate he declared he had been insulted and demanded a duel on the spot.

"'One of us,' he cried in tones of fearful wrath, 'shall never leave this room alive!'

"I knew him to be an expert swordsman. But was I afraid? No! 'So let it be,' I said. And then I rushed out of the room, locked the door behind me and left him there to die!"—New York Press.

A Boarding House Superstition.

"Speaking of bad luck," said a landlady the other day, "did you ever hear that it was bad luck to go back to a house you had once lived in? Well, it is. I heard some one say that when I was a little girl, and some way it has always remained in my mind. If any person who has lived in my house goes away and talks of coming back I always try to dissuade him. One young fellow scoffed at the idea, yet the day after he came back to live with me he lost his position and did not get another until he moved away from my house. He would have stuck it out only I told him I would have to have my room. So he went away, and at once secured another and better position than the one he had when he first came to me."

The Best Bargain on Record.

Probably never in the history of the world was a better bargain made than the purchase of the island of Grenada, in the British West Indies. It was bought by the French from the Caribs by a solemn treaty in the middle of the seventeenth century, and the price paid was two bottles of rum. Esau's mess of pottage was a good stroke of business by comparison. The Caribs soon regretted having sold their birthright and vainly tried to get the island back by force. It is now one of England's most prosperous colonies in the West Indies, with a population of over 50,000 and a big trade.

Hal—What, you've stopped calling on the girl with the plaid waist!

Tom—Yes; it's all over there.

Hal—Why? Father object?

Tom—Bless you, no! And I had nerve enough to dodge all her hints about popping the question also, but the last time I called she had the sign "Do It Now" stuck on the center table. That floored me, and I've quit.—New York Press.

The British government has proposed a plan for reducing the number of Irish members of parliament. Perhaps it is thought that this would be less cumbersome and more satisfactory than sending them to prison.

Prosperity leads often to ambition, and ambition to disappointment.

Fight Until the End.

Life can be made a success. It is not a question of climbing above poverty; it is a question of understanding life. So many of us have been lured away and fascinated by what turn out to be phantoms and false gods! We have had to wheel back and begin over again and fight along against tremendous odds, and yet with all that life can be made a success, for success consists in doing right, in doing the best you can with what you have, of years of experience, of sorrows, of chances, of joys and of hope. Fight until the end.—Schoolmaster.

MOST IMPORTANT PART.

First Duty of a Newly-Elected President of a Large and Wealthy Business Concern.

The newly elected president of the great corporation hurried home, dashed into the library and seized a pen.

"Don't let anybody disturb me!" he said to his wife.

For several hours nothing broke the silence save the scratching of the presidential pen across the paper. Sheet after sheet was filled with writing and laid aside. The perspiration rolled from the presidential brow and ink was splattered all over his shirt front. Finally he laid aside the pen, leaned back and heaved a great sigh of relief.

"There! Finished at last," he exclaimed.

"What on earth have you been doing, dear?" asked his wife.

"I have been performing my first work since being elected president of the Consolidated and Amalgamated United States Pig Iron company," said he.

"What is it?"

"I have been preparing for the press the rules I have followed and by which I have worked my way from obscurity to my present high position. I have noticed that this is about the first thing the newspapers have about the men who are selected to manage big institutions."

An Old Soldier's Experience.

Dennard, Ark., Sept. 7th.—Mr. E. J. Hicks, merchant of this place, has written for publication, an account of a personal experience, which is very interesting.

"I am an old Federal Soldier," writes Mr. Hicks, "and shortly after the close of the war I was taken sick. I had aches and pains all over me, fluttering of the heart and stomach trouble. I just simply was never a moment without pain. I could not sleep at night, and I was always tired and fearfully weak.

"I took medicine all the time, but for a long time I was more dead than alive. Altogether I suffered for over twenty years, and I believe I would have been suffering yet, or in my grave, if I had not read of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I got an Almanac, which told me of this remedy, and I bought some of it. I started with three pills a day, but increased the dose to six pills a day. I had not used many till my pains began to disappear. I kept on, and now I can sleep and eat as well as ever I could, and I feel like a new man, with no pains or aches left.

"I will always recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills, for they are a wonderful remedy."

Chinaman's Repartee.

The editor of the Chinese Daily World, published in this city, is a graduate of Yale, and while retaining all the characteristic reticence of his race he is, nevertheless, rather clever at repartee, as was recently instanced when a rather dapper young fellow called at the World office to sell a certain grade of paper. The editor affects the American style of dress, and the paper house drummer thought he would be smart and opened the conversation by impudently asking: "What kind of a 'nese are you—Japanese or a Chinese?" The editor smiled blandly, and with a courteous bow retorted: "Before I answer your inquiry will you kindly inform me what kind of a key you are, and tell me if you are a monkey, a donkey or a Yankee?" The drummer fled in dismay.—San Francisco Wasp.

Radisson on the Chippewa.

A new town in Sawyer county, Wis., on the Omaha Road. Located on both the Chippewa and Couderay rivers, in center of a most fertile and promising hardwood district. Capable.

A very jaunty looking applicant for the position of stenographer and typewriter in the office of a gentleman in public life was told that it would be necessary for her to have a thorough knowledge of grammar. She gave proof of her entire proficiency by saying: "Well, I have always knowed how to spell, and when it comes to grammer I don't take no back seat for nobody, I don't."—Woman's Home Companion.

AN ITALIAN REPRISAL

By HELEN M. GIVINS

(Copyright, 1903, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

When Willis ran into St. Peter's to escape one of the sudden downpours so prevalent in Rome during the summer months, he was still possessed by the sense of injury that had been his ever since he had hurried down the slope of the Janiculum an hour before, and had failed to see little Rosetta leaning over the wall near Tasso's oak.

At their last meeting, as she told him, between the bursts of weeping, of her father's determination to have her wedding take place within a month, Willis had understood the necessity of putting an end to the romance an idle spring day and a peasants' fete had been responsible for.

It had all been idyllic and innocent enough. Being a good fellow in the main, and moreover, not wildly in love, Willis was capable of a sharp twinge of conscience when he realized the child's distaste for a marriage about which she had at first prattled happily enough. But Rosetta was so pretty, so full of distress! Who could resist the temptation of seeing her once more? Besides, had he not promised himself to speak wisely and firmly, as became mature 23 when advising inexperienced 17?

Such, however, is man's inconsistency, that when the trysting-place appeared, void of the trusting maiden, he experienced none of the satisfaction popularly supposed to reward the virtuous. It is one thing to confront a pair of beseeching black eyes, in the role of a stern representative of duty, and quite another to be anticipated; to find the play played out and the curtain rung down, without any of the plaudits so dear to self-sacrifice.

Now, avoiding a procession of damp pilgrims, in whom the odor of humanity predominated over that of sanctity, the young man strolled down the great nave with lowered head and thoughts bitterly intent upon the inconstancy of woman. Thus he did not notice a bucket dangling from the end of a rope until he struck sharply against it. As he recoiled it rose in the air and he saw it was a rude device for carrying water to some workmen who were repairing the mosaics ornamenting the dome. Willis' lip curled with English intolerance of such methods—his glance following the unwieldy contrivance until it reached a haven under a board stretched from side to side of the railing surrounding the dome.

"The signore might perhaps like to see the work nearer. It is very interesting," said a low-toned voice at his elbow, in Italian.

The young man turned quickly, encountering a pair of brilliant, shifty eyes, set in a handsome face of the better type of peasant.

"It is forbidden to enter the dome during repairs," he replied curtly in the same tongue.

"But I have a brother among the workmen. See, I am taking him the macaroni," holding up a small basket, as he spoke. Then, as Willis shook his head impatiently, he added: "The old sacristan is also my uncle, so, if the signore pleases, I will gladly conduct him to the dome."

Willis looked at the speaker with more interest. Rosetta had once pointed out the sacristan, speaking of his great age and of his relationship to her. Could this young man be the cousin lover against whom the girl rebelled? His good looks deserved a stronger hold upon her fancy.

"How did you know I understood Italian?" Willis demanded abruptly.

"I heard the signore speak to a beggar at the door."

Evidently the fellow had been following him. That he should wish to conduct him to the dome was a singular coincidence; but he dismissed as improbable the idea of any stronger motive than the hope of a possible fee, and, moved by an unexplainable impulse, he determined to accept the offer he had been on the point of declining.

Ten minutes later, stepping through the doorway opening upon the narrow platform surrounding the dome, he heard a sharp click behind him, and turned to see his companion coolly pocket the key he had just removed from the lock.

"The signore appears surprised," he said, regarding Willis with a smile of triumphant malice. "He has perhaps never seen a rat caught in a trap. To understand, he must first regard the scaffolding closing the platform on the left."

The other had mechanically turned to the point indicated. Certainly the left was completely blocked by the scaffolding; but no matter—they could pass to the right.

Still that smile of triumphant malice. Willis made a step forward, but recognizing rather late the value of discretion, paused before the steely glint of a stiletto. Nevertheless he returned the Italian's gaze without flinching, leaning against the wall, and thrusting his hands nonchalantly into his pockets.

"The signore will remain without stirring—or—" The gesture was significant.

"I understand. No need to illustrate," said Willis. "Besides there's nothing in my pockets, but the small change I keep for your compatriots. Now, if you will be good enough to explain—"

"There is nothing to explain, signore. I am Guiseppe Montanari, who was to marry Rosetta Nicoli."

"You have taken too much trouble, Signore—er—Montanari," Willis said, insolently civil. "Still, I am as yet in the dark. Is this perhaps part of the ceremony of announcement?"

Montanari's eyes gleamed. "I care nothing for the signore's words," he said; "it is with what he has done that I have to deal. Three months ago Rosetta and I were happy in the thought of passing our lives together. She danced and sang the whole day through. Now she weeps—she turns from me—she will hear nothing of marriage. This I owe to the signore. The debt is heavy."

Willis now moved uneasily. The pathos of this statement, simply made, planted a certain sting, and his mind engaged in a rapid reconstruction of the past, accused him of cutting a poorer figure than he cared to admit.

"Montanari," he said, "upon my honor there has been no—wrong—only—"

"I know that," interrupted the other with passion, "else the signore would not be standing there—alive. Yet, he mistakes—there has been wrong. Rosetta is spoiled for her own people—her simple home. She has become a dreamer of dreams. The Mother of God knows how it will all end."

"Well, what are you going to do?" Willis cried. "What's the use of bandying words?" He had opened the little penknife in his pocket, resolved that his adversary should not go unmarked.

"The signore is at least a brave man. For one chance of life would he swear to leave Rome?"

"And the chance?"

"To cross, by the plank, to the other side of the dome."

In spite of himself the young man drew back. A sudden paralyzing fear came over him. Two boards had been tied together by the workmen and fixed across the opening in the dome. They spanned an aperture nearly three hundred feet from the marble floor of the church; and this was the bridge he had been invited to traverse. To even contemplate such a passage seemed suicidal.

Willis glanced down at the lights glimmering on an altar far below. As he looked, a procession of priests crossed the nave, their chanting mellowed by distance. The sound recalled him to the necessity of action; restored his self-command. Turning, he measured his antagonist with his eye. There was no reassurance in the sight of the tigerish play of those splendid muscles, evident under the light, loose clothing. A hand to hand struggle with no weapon but a penknife, against that armed and supple strength, could end in only one way. To appeal to the workmen would be equally useless. Montanari would be upon him at the first call for help.

"This—chance," he said at length, with sarcastic emphasis. "Why do you give it?"

Montanari shrugged his shoulders. "There may be many reasons. If I killed the signore he would not suffer; but to cross the dome so—even if one arrives safely at the other side—"

The pause was sufficiently eloquent. Then he continued: "Perhaps it is my fancy; perhaps I may not wish to commit murder."

Willis laughed unpleasantly in appreciation of the other's possible irony.

Would you consider your hands clean if I should take a header off that board?"

Montanari ignored the question. "Let me urge the signore to hasten," he said. "It grows late. Every moment the passage becomes more difficult."

"What guarantee have I that you won't stick your knife under my ribs the moment I turn my back?"

"That is as the signore pleases to think. He has his choice, and he must take it—now."

"I suppose it makes no difference to you whether I leave Rome by the regular route or by the gate of the Protestant cemetery?"

"That also is as the signore pleases."

Willis fingered the knife in his pocket. After all—why not die like a man and not like a monkey capering on a tight rope. Yet—he hesitated; life is dear at 23—and there was a chance. So, summoning all his resolution, he made his choice, setting his feet cautiously upon the narrow pathway where return was impossible. Stepping carefully, yet firmly, he was surprised at the clearness of his head, the evenness of his heart beats. He could not have been more at ease crossing the floor below. Thus he advanced nearly to the middle of the planks. There they were roughly wired together, and with the weight of his body they began to sag. Feeling the support give under his feet, he involuntarily looked downward. There was an instant singing in his ears; a cloud of blackness—then of fire, spread before his eyes; an icy sweat started from every pore; his very soul seemed wrenching itself from his body. By an effort of will almost superhuman, he stopped, closing his eyes and striving to master the vertigo threatening him.

He heard the chant of the returning priests. It surged into his ears, deafening him. Reason departed from his racked brain, and imagination, no longer held in check, rioted. For measureless time he looked through space on a thread suspended from world to world, the sport of infinity. Then at last, from the darkness surrounding him, started the affrighted faces of the workmen, looming vague—monstrous through the gloom. Powerful hands seized him as he tottered at the edge of the railing—a creature from whose haunted face even little Rosetta would have shrunk, crossing herself.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Oxen Rapidly Disappearing.

The ox team found on nearly every Minnesota farm twenty years ago is rapidly disappearing from the state. The horse long since proved too strong a competitor for the ox, and now the automobile and the motor cycle have arrived to make his extinction certain.

If the ox is forced to retreat from as many counties next year as during the year just closed, it will soon be a serious question with the State Auditor S. G. Iverson whether a seperate column should be reserved in the personal property assessment abstracts for the exclusive benefit of the ox. A column has been so reserved since Minnesota became a state, but there are blank spaces opposite many counties. A new column just reserved this year for the automobiles is fairly well filled.

Goodhue county reported twenty-six oxen for taxation a year ago; there is none on the list this year. Grant county had twenty a year ago, but not a single ox can be found in the county to-day. The supply in Faribault has fallen off from twenty-three to five, and in Douglas from fifteen to eight. Beltrami county reported 125 in 1902 and forty-six in 1903.

The departure of the ox is coincident with the introduction of the piano. Every one of thirty counties examined has more pianos this year than a year ago, and in several counties the increase is remarkable.

Winter Wheat Experiments.

Prof. W. M. Hays, of the Minnesota experiment station, has issued a bulletin on winter wheat, in which he gives the results of experiments with several varieties. Prof. Hays concludes that the hardiest varieties can be grown successfully in southeastern Minnesota. Prof. Hays says in the bulletin:

"During the past several years the acreage sown to winter wheat in southeastern Minnesota has been gradually increasing. Several years ago the Minnesota experiment station began the testing of varieties of winter wheat from different sources. During the years 1900 and 1901 either no crops were secured or very poor ones, owing to winter killing. During the years 1902 and 1903, however, following winters less severe on these wheats, a number of the best winter varieties have yielded two-thirds more than the best spring varieties on the university farm."

Teach Early.

That Minnesota teachers begin their labors at an early age is shown in a statement issued by J. W. Olsen, state superintendent of public instruction. At the Moorhead normal school, for example, the average age of the teachers in attendance as pupils is seventeen years, and the average age at which they began to teach was sixteen years. Of the 4,359 teachers that attended the summer training schools not one began to teach after the age of nineteen years.

The enrollment at the summer schools included 1,137 graduates from common schools, 1'127 from high schools, 212 from normal schools, and 111 from colleges. First grade certificates are held by only 450 out of 4,359 teachers; second grade by 1,761, and third grade by 436. The total cost of the summer schools was $26,346.12.

Dairy Growth.

Inspector H. E. Vroman of the state dairy and food commission reported that the creameries, cheese factories and skimming stations of Olmstead, Mower and Dodge counties are well managed, prosperous and in a sanitary condition. The report is as follows:

Olmstead County—Fifteen creameries, 2 skimming stations, 1 cheese factory, 12,675 cows, 1,573 patrons, 208,508 pounds of milk daily, 9,000 pounds of butter and 275 pounds of cheese daily.

Mower County—Thirteen creameries, 2 cheese factories, 1 skimming station, 1,327 patrons, 155,200 pounds of milk daily, 8,875 pounds of butter.

Dodge County—Seven creameries, 13 cheese factories, 1,099 patrons, 144,469 pounds of milk daily, 3,000 pounds of butter and 5,000 pounds of cheese.

Stricken with Paralysis.

Patrick C. Tracy, a switchman for the Great Northern railway in St. Paul, was stricken with paralysis. Mr. Tracy was sitting on a bench in the yards waiting for a train. When he received a signal to join the switching crew he could not move from the bench. He tried to assist himself by placing his hands against a wall, but his limbs would not sustain him. Several men went to his assistance. He was placed on a street car and afterwards transferred to the police ambulance and taken to his home. His condition is thought to be serious.

Turning to Stone.

It is claimed that Andrew Buchler, a middle-aged man from the northern part of the state, is slowly petrifying at St. Joseph's hospital, St. Paul. A year ago, Buchler was a healthy man. Recently he came to the hospital, suffering with what he supposed was paralysis. Physicians discovered that his intestines were turning to stone, and say there is no hope. He can eat only a little ice, and drink ice-water with an occasional drink of milk.

News in Brief.

Postoffice inspector Smith arrived in St. Paul from Amiret, Minn., where he arrested Hugh Hendon, a farm hand, on a charge of robbing the postoffice at Amiret Aug. 20. The inspector recovered about $50 and stamps taken from the postoffice.

Prompt action on the part of Mrs. E. M. Goldsborough saved her 2-year-old daughter from drowning in Lake Minnetonka. The little one fell from the dock and, while her mother was not able to swim, she plunged in beyond her depth and rescued the child.

GRATEFUL, HAPPY WOMEN
Thank Pe-ru-na for Their Recovery After Years of Suffering.
Miss Muriel Armitage, 36 Greenwood Ave., Detroit, Mich., District Organizer of the Royal Templars of Temperance, in a recent letter, says:
"I think that a woman naturally shrinks from making her troubles public, but restored health has meant so much to me that I feel for the sake of other suffering women it is my duty to tell what Peruna has done for me.
"I suffered for five years with uterine irregularities, which brought on hysteria and made me a physical wreck. I tried doctors from the different schools of medicine, but without any perceptible change in my condition. In my despair I called on an old nurse, who advised me to try Peruna, and promised good results if I would persist and take it regularly. I thought this was the least I could do and procured a bottle. I knew as soon as I began taking it that it was affecting me differently from anything I had used before, and so I kept on taking it. I kept this up for six months, and steadily gained strength and health, and when I had used fifteen bottles I considered myself entirely cured. I am a grateful, happy woman to-day."—Miss Muriel Armitage.
Peruna cures catarrh of the pelvic organs with the same surety as it cures catarrh of the head. Peruna has become renowned as a positive cure for female ailments simply because the ailments are mostly due to catarrh. Catarrh is the cause of the trouble. Peruna cures the catarrh. The symptoms disappear.
Female Weakness is Pelvic Catarrh.
Always Half Sick are the Women Who Have Pelvic Catarrh.
Catarrh of any organ, if allowed to progress, will affect the whole body. Catarrh without nervousness is very rare, but pelvic catarrh and nervousness go hand in hand.
What is so distressing a sight as a poor half-sick, nervous woman, suffering from the many almost unbearable symptoms of pelvic catarrh? She does not consider herself ill enough to go to bed, but she is far from being able to do her work without the greatest exhaustion. This is a very common sight and is almost always due to pelvic catarrh.
It is worse than foolish for so many women to suffer year after year with a disease that can be permanently cured.
Peruna cures catarrh permanently. It cures old chronic cases as well as a slight attack, the only difference being in the length of time that it should be taken to effect a cure.
If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.
Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

WASHINGTON LETTER

Some Gossip of Interest from the National Capital.

A STRANGE CHARACTER GONE

Death of "Gen." William Hugh Roberts Ends an Odd Career—Race Suicide Again—Publications of Uncle Samuel.

The End of a Strange Life

Washington.—"Gen." William Hugh Robarts was found dead the other morning lying on the floor of the scantily furnished room which had been his only home for years, clad in the old gray suit which had been his garb summer and winter from a time which few can remember. His entire earthly possessions were gathered up and carried to a police station to await a claimant. They consisted of a few old books and papers of no conceivable value to anybody.

Thus passed away one of the most extraordinary characters who ever made Washington his home.

Robarts loved to envelop himself in mystery. He endeavored to fashion his reputation to the plan of some of those marvelous creations of Dumas, who were omniscient, omnipresent and inscrutable. Although he was quite without military experience of any kind, he posed as a master of the science of war. He would relate with the finest detail incidents in battles in which he was supposed to have been present, but which he knew about only from books or from hearing others talk about them. And his narrations were so skilfully contrived sometimes as to deceive even those who were there. He posed as a southern gentleman of the very old school, with aristocratic associations running close to royalty. He was born in Peru, Indiana, and his antecedents were commonplace, to say the most. He posed as the father of children who would inherit millions, although he was living in the hall room in a cheap boarding house. He knew all the intricacies of the dueling code, assumed to be the depository of countless state secrets, and to have mysterious lines of communication with every man of consequence in Washington as well as most of the capitals of Europe. Yet he had no friends or confidents, as far as anybody could see, and he lived a solitary life.

Uncle Sam, Publisher.

Uncle Sam is one of the most extensive publishers of periodical literature in the world, and it is probable that the circulation of his various periodicals exceeds that of all periodicals issued by any other single publishing establishment.

Uncle Sam's Editorial Department

Everybody knows about the Congressional Record, which is issued daily during the session of congress and usually contains a great many thousand words, surpassing in bulk if not in interest the daily newspapers printed for private gain. But not many are aware of the other publications which come out of the government printing office with regularity year after year.

A daily print of far-reaching interest is the "Daily Weather Map," which has a circulation in every city and hamlet in the United States, and which is dropped promptly every morning in the letter boxes of thousands of farmers living miles from a post office, through the rural free delivery. The weather map has 2,200 correspondents scattered all over the country who sends news right up to the minute of going to press. Then there is the Snow and Ice Bulletin issued to the navy department, which is eagerly sought by the operating departments of the big railroad systems and which is also in demand in seaports of the country. The agricultural department spends one million dollars a year in its periodical department. Most of its publications are weeklies. The most exciting of these is the "Crop Reporter," which is eagerly seized by Washington correspondents every week immediately upon its issue and telegraphed all over the United States. So great is the demand for what the Crop Reporter contains that the most rigid precautions are taken to prevent premature divulging of its news. Wall street and the Chicago wheat pit would give many thousand dollars to the editors of this weekly every seven days if they could have a few hours advantage of the rest of the world. The copy never leaves the editor's hands until two o'clock of the day of issue. Twenty minutes later the first copy is thrown from the printing presses, and two hours later the bundles are trundled to the mailing room. The "Crop Reporter" has a staff of 20,000 correspondents. A few of these are paid $1,200 a year. Most of them work for love.

The Daily Post Office Bulletin contains reports of changes in railway routes, the appointment or retirement of postmasters, the establishment or abolition of star routes and rural free delivery routes. Occasionally Editor Henry C. Payne or Assistant Editor R. J. Wynne will announce a new regulation for the improvement of the service or the stopping of abuses.

Race Suicide.

Society vs. the Babes

Race suicide is a very live issue in Washington just now. Dr. W. C. Woodward, the health officer of the district has been stirring himself with regard to the great mortality of infants in the District of of Columbia, which he attributes to the neglect of mothers, both of the poor and of the rich. The great proportion of deaths, he declares, is due to the practice of artificial feeding.

Dr. Woodward is very outspoken in his comment on the prevalent customs which result in poorly nourished babies during the oppressive summer months, with numerous cases of stomach and bowel complaints. At the same time he admits that there are instances where through poverty or from physical reasons mothers are unable to nurse their own infants. Those he denounces are the mothers who, although able to nurse their children, decline to do so, because of the demands of society or through personal vanity.

The returns of the health department, however, show that these form but a small part of the total number. Other mothers find artificial feeding necessary because they are physically unable to supply natural nourishment, or because they find it necessary to leave their infants during a certain part of each day in order to earn a livelihood. The remedy which Dr. Woodward suggests is the establishment of day nurseries throughout the city, where mothers who are compelled to work for their living may safely leave their children, in the scientific supervision of the milk supply of the city, and in the diffusion of knowledge with regard to sanitary matters throughout the community.

There is no doubt that some of these suggestions will be followed and it is believed that the mortality among the infants of the poorer classes will be greatly decreased thereby. Dr. Woodward is already reinforced by clergymen and other people and sermons are preached every Sunday in advocacy of the reforms which he has proposed.

A New Editor.

Our Special Foreign Correspondent

Secretary Cortelyou jumped into a full-fledged editorship when the department of commerce took from the state department the issue of the Daily Consular Reports, advance sheets of which are sent to every newspaper.

That is the most entertaining periodical published by the government; but it is rivalled by the Patent Office Gazette, which comes out every week and which is the only publication issued by the government which pays its own way. It costs $5 a year or ten cents a copy. It is handsomely illustrated and it contains sometimes as many as 250 pages. It shows exactly what each inventor claims and is the most interesting document for a thoroughly matter-of-fact publication that could be imagined.

In addition to these periodicals are more than a dozen others issued by the several departments and all more or less interesting to some particular profession or industry. Uncle Sam makes it his business to hunt out the wants of his readers and supply them.

Crookston is enjoying their new pavement, since the fall rains have commenced.

There is a lull in politicts just now but it is only the lull before a storm. —Crookston Press.

There don't seem to be much of a lull in the gubernational campaign, but the trouble is the news papers are in about the he same position as a "rooter" at base ball game, who won't get his chance at the bat until the primary campaign oapens.

Congressman Steenerson has ecieved an invitation from Gen. Charles Dick, who represents the old Garfield district in Ohio in ongress, and is chairman of the epublican central committee of hat state, to come down there nd assist them in the state campaign. The people of Ohio will ertainly hear some good campaign speeches, if they have the opportunity to listen to the big ongressman from the Ninth district of Minnesota.

What would happen if thefarmers should strike, asks an exchange. The employer class don't strike. The farmer is a boss, not a hired man. He works when he gets ready, loafs when he pleases, goes to the store and talks politicts or down to the river when the notion strikes him. The farmer is the best paid work man in the country He will never strike as long as the ground continues to produce golden corn and yellow legged chickens grow fat and tender.

If you want to prevent loss of horses and cattle by lightning' says an exchange, it can be done by grounding the barb wire fence [illegible] five-eighths iron rod and drive it intothe ground to the depth of three feet; pull it out and then take a strand of heavy fence wire and put down in the hole so made and tamp it down. Leave it long enough above the ground so it can be tightly wound around each strand of wire in the fence. A smrrt hand could fix all the fences on a quarter-section farm in a day in the manner indicated, and it will pay to do it.

FASHION IN SPEECH.

Some Words Go Out of Favor and Win Their Way Back.

The history of the race is written in the words it uses. As we grow and change, so our language grows and changes. Mr. Leon Mead in his book "Word Coinage" points out that some words go out of fashion and come back, like tan shoes and wide rimmed hats, although the change in words is much slower than the change in dress.

In Spenser's day "forestall," "fain," "scathes," "askance," "embellish" and "dapper" were not considered good, but they have since gained respectability and won their place in the language. The seventeenth century regarded as obsolete a number of Chaucer's words —"transcend," "bland," "sphere," "blithe," "franchise," "carve," "anthem." One by one these words came to life again and walk the pages of our literature in full vitality. Other words now indispensable which the seventeenth century rejected are "plumage," "tapestry," "tissue," "ledge," "trenchant," "resource," "villainy," "thrill," "yelp," "dovetail."

Bacon did not have the good word "encyclopedia," but used the heavy equivalent, "circle learning."

Fulke, the sixteenth century author who wrote "A Defense of the Sincere and True Translations of the Holie Scriptures Into the English Tong," did not admit "neophyte," "homicide," "scandal," "destruction," "tunic," "despicable," "rational." Another book published in 1058 puts the stamp of censure on "oblique," "radiant," "adoption," "caress," "amphibious," "horizontal," "concede," "articulate," "destination," "compensate," "complicated" and "adventitious."

It is hard to trace the history of a fashion in words. Seldom do we have the precise record that Chestsrfield furnishes us in a letter in which he says that he was present at the birth of the word "flirtation" on the lips of a beautiful woman. Even with that record we cannot tell why "flirtation" remained in the language and was not dropped like hundreds of other new coinages.

Cost of False Noses.

People sometimes lose their noses by disease or by accidents, and some have lost them in war. For noseless persons the most appropriate organs are said to be made of wax, and the best ones cost about $175, though a really good one can be got for $75. A nose made of papier mache may be bought for $5. Noses made of this material are enameled and are deceptive, and for a poor man they are said to answer all the purposes that are required. Waxen and paper noses are, in case of disease, preferable to those made by the planting of flesh on the diseased part, for several cases have been known where the transplanting of the flesh of the nose has endangered men's lives.—London Tit-Bits.

Beside Herself.

The fair young thing was telling about how happy she was when she saw her brother's baseball team win the intercollegiate game. "Oh," she gurgled, "I was so delighted that I just hugged myself for joy!"

Here the grave professor of psychology looked up with an air of interest. "Hugged yourself?" he asked. "Indeed, you must have been quite beside yourself to have done that."—Judge.

The Proof of It.

Riley—Oi am.

Casey—Shure, yer such a liar Oi don't know whether to belave yez or not.

Riley—Shure, thot proves Oi'm dead. Yez wudn't dare call me a liar if Oi wur aloive!—Judge.

Ungrateful Girl.

"Miss Pechls," began Mr. Klose, "if you marry me you can be assured that"—

"I'm sorry, Mr. Klose," the girl interrupted hastily, "but it is impossible. I can never marry you."

"What! Well, if that ain't ingratitude. Didn't I bring you a box of candy last week?"—Philadelphia Press.

Nothing More Doing.

The Mistress—How long were you in your last place?

Cook—Three wakes, ma'am.

The Mistress—And why did you leave?

Cook—Sure, ma'am, all the dishes were gone.—Detroit Free Press.

What He Didn't Mean.

Mr. Blunder—Why, your mother looks as young as you do, Miss Stale.

Miss S. (stiffly)—That is not very complimentary to me, Mr. Blunder.

Mr. B. (confusedly)—I—didn't mean that. I—I mean you look as young as your mother.

The Lime Juice Island.

Nearly all the lime juice used in the world comes from the tiny island of Montserrat, in the British West Indies. The lime grows wild in many West Indian islands, but only in Montserrat is it used commercially. That island is one vast garden of lime trees, and nowhere in the world is there a finer sight than its thirty miles of orchards, laden with the fruit of the lime or fragrant with its blossoms.

The fruit is gathered by negro women, who carry it down the hills to the shipping port in big baskets on their heads. Like all West Indians, they are remarkable for their ability to carry heavy weights in this manner. Once the company which controls the lime juice industry sought to lighten the burden of its laborers by introducing wheelbarrows.

The negroes filled the wheelbarrows readily enough, and then carried them on their heads as they had been used to carry the baskets. Many a negro woman will carry a hundredweight of limes on her head for a distance of a mile or more.—Indianapolis News.

Naming the House.

The custom of naming a ship when it is launched with the breaking of a bottle of wine on the prow is a survival of an ancient practice which had many forms. In early times, when the frame of a house was raised, the bottle of wine was broken on the ridgepole. The usage is mentioned in McLellan's "History of Gorham, Maine."

It was the custom at a raising to break a bottle of spirit on the ridgepole and to repeat some rhymes, "naming the frame," as it was called. When, in 1839, Jacob H. Clement of West Gorham raised a stable, John Phinney, an old Revolutionary soldier who was present, repeated the following lines, which he said were used in naming the frame of Captain John Stephenson's house and barn, which were raised about 1775:

FOR THE HOUSE FRAME.

Cursed is the Tory's heart
Which from the congress laws depart;
If the laws they do not fear
I hope they will not prosper here,
And if the laws they do obey
I hope they will prosper in corn and hay

Chair Postures.

It is one thing to have a chair and another to know how to sit on it. The ideal of a graceful sitting posture has varied in the different ages of the world. The Egyptian sat bolt upright, the knees and feet closely pressed together. It was the ceremonial attitude. The Greeks and Romans, when they were at liberty to forget their dignity, sat stooping, with one or both elbows supported by the arms of the chair.

The Chinese ideal was with the knees and feet wide apart. They have maintained that attitude in sitting for 400 years. The Saxons and early Norman kings are represented in old manuscript and on coins in the same position. Down to a date comparatively recent, kings and queens received sitting stiffly on their thrones, any marked change of posture being thought to derogate from the royal dignity. They now receive standing.

A Legend of February.

Here is the pretty legend which tells why February has only twenty-eight or twenty-nine days. Long ago, they say, February was a gambler, and he was so unlucky that he soon lost all his money. Like other gamblers, he tried to recover it, and he said to his companions that if they would lend him some money he would give them as security one of his days. January and March, who were naturally associated with him more often than any of the other months, accepted his offer, and as poor February soon lost the money which he had borrowed each of them acquired one of his days.

That is why January and March have each thirty-one days and February has only twenty-eight in ordinary and twenty-nine in leap years.

A Pocket Handkerchief.

In a book which has been published on that never failing topic, the vagaries of the English language, the strange meaning of the word "pocket handkerchief" is described.

A "kerchief" (couvrechef) means a small piece of cloth made to put on the head, so that a "pocket handkerchief" means literally a small piece of cloth to cover the head, to be held in the hand, to be put in the pocket.—London

HIS SECOND THOUGHT.

The Stage Driver Acted on It and Saved His Passengers.

Back in the good old days when nerves and railroads were little known an old stage road ran from Lake Champlain to Ogdensburg, N. Y., passing through the little town of Sodom. This village nestled in a valley between two great hills, over which the white ribbon of the road wound steeply.

Upon one of the trips of the stage the regular driver, who had been at home for some weeks recovering from an illness, was riding inside, while the red haired, mild natured, big boned Irishman acting as his substitute occupied the driver's seat upon the box. The day was a beautiful one, and the passengers were enjoying their drive keenly, their appetites increasing as the distance lessened between them and the town of Sodom, with its promised pause for refreshment.

Suddenly as the heavy stage lumbered over the brow of the hill, down which the road plunged at a sharp angle, running through the little town at its foot and ascending the hill beyond, the passengers became conscious that their pace had been recklessly increased. Faster and faster they went, dashing down the hill at a rate rapidly becoming a furious one. Trees and bushes at last became but a dizzying blur along the road. All clung to the reeling stage and held their breath in terror, while on the stage raced, down the hill with ever increasing speed, into the town, past the hostelry with the waiting host left standing in amaze at the door, past the post office without pause, and out upon the road leading up the face of the hill beyond. There the pace slackened, and as the incline grew more steep at last the smoking horses came to a standstill. With one accord the dazed passengers tumbled out and surrounded the driver, who now stood at the head of his reeking leaders.

"What is it, Pat? What is it? Did they get away from you?" came the breathless questions.

"Nope," replied Pat with a set face. "It wor that," pointing grimly before him. There lay the stage tongue dragging uselessly on the ground at the heels of the horses and completely severed from the coach. At a glance the regular driver comprehended the meaning of the danger to which the passengers of that stage, deprived of its sole means of guidance, had been exposed, and, realizing the miracle of their escape, he turned sick and fainted where he stood.

Later, back at the inn, when the excitement had somewhat subsided and fresh horses were being put to the repaired coach, some one turned to Pat and asked:

"Pat, what was your first thought when the pole dropped?"

"Well, sor," he answered, settling the quid more comfortably in his cheek, "me furst thought wor, 'Lord ha' mercy on our sowls!' Thin thinks I to meself, 'Confound a horse that can't outrun a wagon!' and I licked the poor bastes all the way down the hill!"—Lippincott's.

A Progressive Editor.

A very rich man once bought a newspaper. It was an afternoon newspaper, and he was interested in it for a month or two. One of his ideas was the publication of a noon edition that should contain more news than the noon editions of his competitors. He thought hard on this problem and finally decided it would be a great stroke to print the decisions of the United States supreme court at 12 o'clock each Monday when the court was in session.

This plan was complicated somewhat by the fact that the supreme court does not meet until noon. However, the editor was equal to the emergency. He telegraphed to his Washington correspondent: "See the supreme court at once and have them meet at 11 o'clock so we can get the decisions in our noon edition."—Saturday Evening Post.

A Discriminating Dog.

"Yes, the neighbors complain about my dog."

"Does he bite?"

"No, he's too affectionate. He has the reputation of being a judge of beauty, and every time a pretty woman passes along the street he frisks about extravagantly."

"I should think the women would like that."

"Yes; but there are only two pretty women on the street, and the others complained."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A CROWDED CITY.

To Walk in Constantinople Is Like a Fierce Struggle.

To walk in Constantinople is like a fierce and active struggle. One should look at once before, behind and underneath one's feet. Some danger or disgust is always threatening. I never walked up the steep road which leads from the bridge to Pera without the feeling that I was fighting my way through a hostile city. A horn blows furiously, and a black man runs up the hill, clearing the way before the dashing and struggling horses of the tram. At the same moment a cab drives at full speed down the hill, and the horses set their feet on the pavement. In front of you a man balances slices of offal on a long pole across his shoulder. They dangle before and behind. He swings cheerfully with his burden through the crowd. A Kurd, stooping under a weight higher than himself, follows, step by step, behind you. Your feet slip in slushy mud and catch on the cobbles or in the gaps of the road.

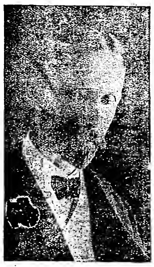
A dog with a red wound behind his ear and a long strip of mangy skin on his back lies asleep in the middle of the pavement. You step into the road to avoid the dogs and the hamals, and wheels and horses are upon you. You step back into the midst of the dogs and the hamals. As you stand aside for a moment a beggar with a handless arm rounded into a stump and a woman with her face eaten away in the cavity of the hood which she draws back before you appear suddenly, filling what had seemed the only alley of escape. The sun soaks down into the narrow street. The smell of the mud rises up into your nostrils, mingled with those unknown smells which in Constantinople seem to ooze upward out of the ground and steam outward from every door and window and pour out of every alley and rise like a cloud out of the breath and sweat and foulness of the people.—Arthur Symons in Harper's Magazine

RALPH CONNOR, NOVELIST.

How the Author of "Sky Pilot" Got His Nom de Plume.

The new Canadian writer Ralph Connor, whose books, "Black Rock" and "Sky Pilot," have placed him in the very front rank of Canadian story tellers, in private life is the Rev. Charles W. Gordon, a Presbyterian minister of Winnipeg.

Ralph Connor came of stolid Scottish stock. His father, the Rev. Daniel Gordon, went to Canada in the early forties, finally settling in the village of Glengarry, in the Indian lands, and there the author was born forty-three years ago. He was educated at Toronto university, subsequently taking a three years' course in theology at Knox college.



RALPH CONNOR, THE NOVELIST.

The nom de plume of Ralph Connor came to the Rev. Mr. Gordon in a rather curious way. He was discouraged over the appropriation that had been made by a certain missionary committee for work in the mining camps of western Canada. Disheartened, he went to the editor of the Westminster, a weekly published in Toronto. This editor, an old college mate, told him to wage his campaign for mission funds through his columns.

He wrote his first sketch. It is now the first chapter of "Black Rock." The editor was delighted with it, but what should the author be called? The signing of his real name at the time might have provoked criticism from the mission board. He telegraphed to Mr. Gordon asking what name should be signed.

Mr. Gordon received the telegram late in the evening, just as he was finishing a report to the missionary society. His eye lit upon the heading of it, which was abbreviated as follows: "Brit.-Can. Nor. West. Miss. Soc." The two syllables "Can" and "Nor" struck his fancy, and he telegraphed his reply, "Sign Cannor." By some slip of the telegraph operator the message reached Toronto, "Sign Connor." The editor prefixed the name Ralph, and so Ralph Connor was found.

Ralph Connor's books have been wonderfully successful, and his work as an author, so strangely begun, has brought substantial rewards as well as fame. Besides "Black Rock" and "Sky Pilot" he has written "The Man From Glengarry," "Glengarry School Days" and "Beyond the Marshes."

Squelched.

Feline amenities show themselves most forcibly at committee meetings. There was one of these latter gathered together to discuss a charity bazaar. The chairman smiled sweetly upon the artist's wife and said:

"You'll get your husband to let us have some little thing of his for the art table, will you not, Mrs. Mahlstick?"

"Well, you know husbands are not always easily managed, my dear."

"Ah, but take him after one of your nice dinners and then put in a word for our worthy cause. But remember we are not allowed to have anything which sells for over $25."

"Indeed!" And then Mrs. M.'s eyebrows went up alarmingly. "Then perhaps he'll induce one of his pupils to dash off something for you."—New York Times.

An Excellent Opportunity.

The old fashion of favoritism is well satirized in a story told of M. Bignon, a person of very little learning, who was made royal librarian by King Louis XV. of France. When the news of this appointment was brought by Bignon to his uncle, M. d'Argenson, the uncle exclaimed: "Good, nephew! Now you have an admirable opportunity to learn to read!"

Kicked on the Washing.

Anne, a southern beauty of four years, had a decided aversion to her morning bath. One evening her nurse was telling her of God's goodness and his willingness to wash away her sins, when she suddenly set up a lusty howl, exclaiming: "Oh, don't let him wash them away! Don't let him wash them! Tell him to pick them off!"

Worm.

"I am but a worm!" I protested, being in a grovelling, penitential mood.

"Oh, I think you're just nice enough to eat, actually!" cried the faithful little wife.

"That shows you're getting to be an old hen," whimpered I, more cast down than ever.—Detroit Free Press.

CARE OF MIRRORS.

How to Clean and Keep Them In Good Condition.

In the first place, it is well to know a good cleaner. This can be made by adding to whiting enough cold tea to make a thin paste. Remove the fly specks with warm tea and dry the mirror. Then smear some of the paste on the glass and rub with a dry cloth.

A good way to polish the mirror is with a soft cloth and a few drops of aqua ammonia, says the Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph. Cleaning with paper is not effectual unless the best quality of rag paper is used.

To scour mirrors make a paste of whiting and water. Smear the surface with it and let it dry on the glass. Then rub it off with tissue paper or with a soft newspaper. Rub gently, for the particles of grit in the paper may scratch the glass.

The following is a good way to fill in the scratches that often appear on the backs of mirrors: Scratch away the mercury for about a quarter of an inch around the scratch and wet the place with a clean rag dipped in alcohol. Take a broken piece of mirror and mark out a piece of silvering larger than the place on the mirror. Place a small drop of mercury on the center of this silvering, allowing it to remain a few minutes. Clean away the silver from around the patch and slip it from the broken glass to the place to be mended, pressing it into place with a small piece of cotton batting.

BLUSHING.

It Is Not an Art, Nor Is It a Sign of Ill Breeding.

Blushing is not an art, neither is it a sign of ill breeding, as some unkind people maintain. The fact is, it is just as natural for some persons to blush as it is for others to turn pale. The same laws of nature which govern the one rule govern the other. The capillaries, or small blood vessels, which connect the arteries and veins [illegible] particularly [illegible] work so fine that it is necessary to employ a microscope to distinguish them. Ordinarily the blood [illegible] through these vessels in normal quantities, leaving only the [illegible] complexion. But when some sudden emotion takes possession of the heart its action increases and an electric thrill instantly leaps to the cheeks. The thrill is nothing more than the rush of blood through the invisible capillaries just beneath the delicate transparent surface of the skin.

The causes that bring about this condition in the circulating system are called mental stimuli. They consist of joy, anger, shame and many other emotions. Sudden horror, remorse or fear, on the contrary, influences the nerves which control the blood vessels, and the face becomes white. Blushing and pallor result from the sudden action of the mind on the nervous system. So if the mind be forewarned and prepared for emotions both habits can at least be partially overcome. But when the nervous system is highly strung it would be a lifelong, if not a futile, task to endeavor to effect a perfect cure. It is the sensitive, nervous girl who blushes easily, while the girl stolid by nature, or who by conventional education has her nerves under perfect control, seldom blushes.—St. James Gazette.

The Pain of Silence.

"We women," she was saying again, "suffer in silence."

"I can readily believe that you do suffer in silence," the man replied. "You take so much pleasure in talk."—Philadelphia Press.

How to Abolish House Flies.

By placing shallow dishes or blacking box lids containing coal oil on the window joints and casings you can trap all large house flies. The dishes will need to be emptied quite often, but you will soon be rid of the flies.

Prosperity leads often to ambition, and ambition to disappointment.

Swearing to Excess.

A cricket club in the south of Scotland, which has evidently found that the use of lurid language doesn't add to the amenities of play, has passed the following bylaw:

"Any member swearing to excess may be expelled."

I have not heard whether the club committee has yet arrived at a definition of "moderate swearing." The attempt to find one to meet all cases is likely to result in language both "painful and free."—Glasgow Times.

How to Serve Macaroni.

Never throw away the shell of an edam or pineapple cheese, as it is useful for serving a cheese or macaroni preparation. Cook the macaroni as desired, have the cheese shell heated in a moderate oven, pour in the food, sprinkle with grated cheese and send to the table on a doily covered plate. Of course if the top of the macaroni has to be browned the shell must be set in the oven for fifteen minutes. Then it will be spoiled after three or four bakings. Wash and dry thoroughly after each time it has been used.

FEARED A SEPARATION.

The Dear Little Lamb Was Afraid Her Father Might Be Put with the Goats.

Her father had read her the parable of the sheep and the goats at the day of judgment. She made no comment, but that night a sound of weeping came from her room. Her mother went as consoler, relates Brooklyn Life.

"Why are you crying, dear?"

"About the goats! Oh, I'm so afraid I'm a goat!"

"Why, no, dearie, you are a sweet little lamb, and if you should die to-night you would go straight to Heaven." With this and like assurances she was finally pacified.

The next night the same performance was repeated, and again her mother inquired the reason.

"It's the goats! I'm afraid about the goats!"

"Didn't I tell you, dear, that you were a little lamb?"

"Oh," she sobbed, "I'm not crying about myself, but I'm 'fraid you may be a goat!"

A Boy's Victory.

Crossroads, Tenn., Sept. 14.—Orbra Young, the ten-year-old son of Lester Young, of this place, is a bright boy, and one who is very well liked by all who know him.

For some years Orbra has suffered a great deal with a form of Kidney Trouble which was very annoying, and which made him miserable all the time. He had to get up three or four times every night, almost all his life.

His father heard of a remedy called Dodd's Kidney Pills, and bought some for the little fellow with the result that he is now completely cured of the old trouble. He says:

"Dodd's Kidney Pills soon gave me great relief, and now I can sleep all night without having to get up. We will always praise Dodd's Kidney Pills."

There are many children suffering from Kidney and Urinary troubles. These disorders should be promptly corrected. Dodd's Kidney Pills is a safe and sure remedy for all such derangements.

Master Orbra Young conquered his troubles and made a well boy of himself by using Dodd's Kidney Pills, and any one may do the same by the same means.

Parents should see to it that their children are given a fair chance in life, and there is nothing that can undermine the health of a growing child as much as Kidney and Urinary derangements.

An Ice Cream Idyl.

Gentle reader, didst thou ever order one plate of ice cream with two spoons? Honest, now, in the dear old days when you were young and there was only one girl in all the world, and she had a round face like the full moon and as full of freckles as the skin of a brook trout? Did you, now? Come, own up! It was down in the little ice cream shop, the only one in the village, and you were dreadfully angry when the lady who waited on you smiled, as you thought. You would have been glad to get along with one spoon and take turns in licking, but you were too bashful for that. Still, you used to share licks when you thought the smiling lady was not looking, and love went with them, and the ice cream was twice as sweet and flavorsome. What! You never did? You really never did? Well, then, son, you have never known what Heaven on earth is. Your education has been neglected.—N. Y. News.

LONGING FOR YOU.

The yellow winged butterfly dips in the rose;
The cannas flare red, the blue glories unclose
On the vines by the porch, all asparkle with dew,
But my heart is all sad, for 'tis longing for you!

I know where white marguerites stretch o'er the lea,
And their perfume is borne on the breezes to me,
And the meadow-lark's wings are aglint with the dew,
But his song is a torture! I'm longing for you!

Still the warm shadows blend o'er the road that we took,
And the path wends around by the side of the brook,
And the wide water smiles back the heaven's own blue;
But my heart knows it not; it is longing for you!

Where the sycamore bends, where the bubbles float down,
Where the trout seems asleep in the pool's umber brown,
And the gold of the sunlight is filtering through,
There was joy ere I knew this wild longing for you!

Night falls like a benison on the old vale;
There's a tinkle of cowbells along the old trail;
But far, far wend my ways, and all bordered with dew;
And no promise of peace lights my longing for you!

An International Episode

By EDWARD B. CLARK

Betty Rawlins had a bank account, and a huge one at that. But Betty had a greater fortune in her face, for she was as pretty as a spring beauty, and though she was perverse and pouty when she wanted to be, she was ordinarily as sweet as a violet.

Betty lived in the summer time at Lowland Glen, not many miles removed from Fort Sherman, a big garrison with enough young officers on duty to fill the ranks of a company, had they been forced to drop the sword and shoulder the Krag-Jorgenson. Betty loved the military—what girl doesn't?—and if truth be told Betty's heart was set on marrying into the soldiery, but she had made up her mind secretly that she couldn't think of looking at anything less than a colonel, and when she thought of it she sighed, for the colonels in Uncle Sam's regulars were all so dreadfully old, and Betty was only 19, mind you.

There was young Roy Lanyard stationed at Fort Sherman. He was mighty good looking. Betty admitted this to herself, and it wouldn't be a bit hard to love him, but Roy was only a captain, and nothing but a colonel would do. Capt. Lanyard, to get into the middle of things at once, was just as desperately in love with Betty as a young soldier just old enough to know his own mind can be. He didn't care a rap about Betty's bank account; in fact, he never gave it a thought. It was just pretty Betty herself that he wanted, but he didn't dare say so.

Now, Betty had another failing, not uncommon among American girls not old enough thoroughly to understand that Yankee husbands are the best in the world, and that was a firm belief that the ideal condition in married life would be that which would come from a husband who was a combination of Englishman and English army officer. "The colonels are younger over there," said Betty to herself, "and they are all of aristocratic family, and, oh, well, Englishmen are just too lovely for anything."

The summer colony at Lowland Glen was unusually large that season. There were bunches of swell doings, as the slangy Yale cousin of Betty would put it. The army officers from Fort Sherman were much in evidence, and one young captain in particular was very much in evidence in the vicinity of Miss Betty Rawlins. Betty saw the evidence clearly, and how she did wish that the president would retire some few hundreds of superior officers so that Roy Lanyard could tack the abbreviation "Col." to the front part of his name.

One day there was excitement at Lowland Glen. Mrs. Calumet had invited two Englishmen, one of them an army officer, to spend the month with them at their summer home. The news reached Betty the morning after the arrival of the Calumets' two guests. Twenty young women had told her about it. Let the girls alone for spreading news of this kind. "And Betty," said one of her informants, "one of the Englishmen is a colonel in his majesty's service, and young and good looking at that."

Betty's heart gave a thump. "At last," she murmured to herself.

The next afternoon Betty met the Englishman at the Dexter Country club. Her heart fluttered a little as the younger of the two men—the other was old and out of the running—was introduced to her. Col. Reginald Southcote was his name. It fairly rang of aristocracy and militarism. Betty knew that he was a simon-pure Englishman all right enough, because of his name, his accent and his clothes—which didn't fit.

For the next week Col. Reginald Southcote was Betty Rawlins' shadow. Capt. Roy Lanyard looked on and was miserable. Betty gave him two dances and about three words during the entire week.

"No show for one of Uncle Sam's poor artillerymen when there's one of King Edward's men with a drawl and a monocle about," sighed poor Capt. Roy.

Col. Reginald Southcote was not long in finding out that Betty Rawlins had a pot of money, and that she adored the military. Betty asked him one day what his regiment was, and he replied promptly: "I am the colonel of the royal Yorickshire regiment," he said.

Betty had heard tales about Englishmen pretending to be what they were not, but the colonel looked honest enough, and the girl was half ashamed of herself when she went to a library in the city and took down a British military gazette from the shelf and looked for Royal Yorickshire regiment. She found it all right, and with the name of Reginald Southcote set down as colonel thereof.

From that time Betty was very cordial to the colonel. She turned the conversation occasionally on the Boer war, expecting to hear some deeds of daring modestly told, but the colonel was strangely silent on the subject of field service, and Betty put it down to a brave man's reticence when it came to speaking of his own acts on the field of battle. Betty might not have liked it had she known that when she was looking up the colonel's regiment he was making inquiries in certain financial circles about the extent of her bank account. The report seemed to please him, and he proceeded to make hay while the sun shone, and it was a particularly cloudless month at Lowland Glen.

Betty knew with a girl's intuition that an offer was not far away. She felt a pang, however, every time she saw Capt. Lanyard, and saw how miserable he looked, though he tried to put a brave face on the matter. If the truth be told, Betty cried a little in the privacy of her room when she looked at the glorious old flag floating in the sunshine at the flagstaff peak in the fort beyond, and sighed, and sighed again.

One day Lawyer Coke, who looked after Betty Rawlins' estate, heard from a close friend that a certain Englishman had been inquiring about Betty's financial standing. "Fortune hunter if not a fraud," said old Coke to himself, and then, as luck would have it, he happened to pick up a copy of the Broad Arrow, the journal of the united services of Great Britain. Lawyer Coke looked at it. His eye fell on a paragraph and he chuckled. He folded the paper up, put it in his pocket and took the first train for Lowland Glen. He marked the paragraph in the paper and put it where he knew Betty would be sure to pick it up, and from the nature of the publication he knew that she would be sure to read it from start to finish.

Betty Rawlins felt that the hour was coming when she would have to answer a question put to her by Col. Reginald Southcote. She was thinking of this when she picked up the Broad Arrow. She knew what the paper was, for she had heard of it. She read it eagerly. The date of the paper was three months back. The marked paragraph caught her eye. She read this:

"Gen. Powell-Baden inspected the Royal Yorickshire regiment last Thursday. It was the first training day of this militia organization for a year. The men were in poor trim, and Col. Reginald Southcote, who has seen no foreign service and very little at home, had hard work to give commands and to sit his horse properly. The regiment will need overhauling to bring it up to even militia standards."

The paper dropped from Betty's fingers. "Militiaman! never saw a day's real service; couldn't sit on his horse;" and then Betty gasped. Her thoughts turned to another paragraph that she had read in an American journal. It told how one Capt. Roy Lanyard had received the congressional medal of honor for personal gallantry in the saving of the life of a comrade under fierce fire in the Philippine islands.

Betty knew that night at the hall at the hotel that Col. Reginald Southcote was seeking her out, but she avoided him. Capt. Roy Lanyard met her and she smiled on him, and there was a look in her eyes that made the young soldier's heart leap. "Won't you go for a walk with me?" he said.

"Yes," she answered, softly.

As they passed down the hotel steps the moonlight fell full upon them, and Lawyer Coke, who was standing on the veranda, smiled, and, being a bit of a wag, he turned to a friend who had been watching the course of events for a month past and said:

"Alas! Poor Yorickshire."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Odd Corporation.

One of the corporations lately organized under the laws of Maine is known as the Conscience Law corporation, and its purpose is to provide a transportation medium for conscience money or conscience property, real or personal. Its letter-head bears the balance scale of justice, with "conscience law" in the lower balance and "Legal Law" in the upper. Along the side of the sheet are these mottos: "The foundation of true success in life is revealed in the Holy Bible and in no other book." "Do unto others as you wish them to do unto you," and "As you sow, so shall you also reap."

The Lost Continent Again.

It is reported from London that Mr. Scharff, of the Royal Irish academy, has revived the hypothesis of a lost continent in the Atlantic, which at one time joined America to Europe. He believes that Portugal was connected to the Azores and Madeira until the Miocene age of geology. Morocco was then united to South America, through the Canaries, by a land link which took in St. Helena. According to Mr. Scharff it was only at the beginning of the tertiary epoch that Europe was encroached upon by the sea.

King Edward is the only English monarch who has visited St. Paul's publicly for any purpose but that of thanksgiving. Only one sovereign has exceeded the number of visits made by Edward VII. to the present structure, Queen Anne paying no fewer than seven to commemorate victories over France and Spain.

He has been a congressman since 1894, winning and holding what used to be a democratic district. He is very popular at home and in Washington.

DOG ON A LONG JOURNEY.

Traveler Moralizes on Canine Crated Up for Shipment Across the Continent.

"Passing along a city street the other day," said a town traveler, according to the New York Sun, "I saw, tied on at the end of a loaded express wagon standing in front of an express office, a crate containing a dog, a dog that was being shipped somewhere by express.

"Curiosity prompted me to look at the shipping tag on the crate. The dog was going to a city on the Pacific coast, a long journey, but I didn't doubt it would get there safely.

"The crate was big enough for its comfort, and it seemed to me that the dog was one likely to stand the journey well, to make friends with all the expressmen and messengers it met on the way, and to get the best possible treatment.

"I'm no judge of dogs, and I may be away off on this one, but this didn't seem to me to be a valuable dog. It was short-haired, brindle in color, of medium size and rather lanky build, and with a rather stubby head. But it had an intelligent and friendly face, which was just now rather wistful.

"As I put my hand across the top of the crate to turn the tag so that I could read the address, the dog reached its head over toward me inside, glad to meet with somebody, even if the somebody was a stranger.

"It was, in fact, a gentle, kindly dog, and whether a valuable dog or not, I'll bet it is one beloved by whomever it is going to meet over on the other coast, and I'll bet that it makes friends with and gets the best of treatment from every man who has the handling of it on the way across."

Exports of Butter.

Argentina exports more than 3,000,000 pounds of butter annually, nearly all of it to Great Britain. It brings 16 cents a pound at the creameries, and the exporter gets an average of 24 cents a pound. Butter from no other country except Denmark brings as good a price. The cows are principally Durham crosses.

THE HIGHBALL IN WAR.

Potency of the American Thirst Remedy Illustrated in a Panama Revolution.

Our esteemed neighbor, Panama, places the world under emphatic obligations by producing something novel in the way of revolutions. The governmental convulsion the other day was due, not to a general uprising or disaffection in the army, but to the untamed thirst of Gen. Varquez Coboa, relates the Philadelphia North American.

The gallant man was led by some lighthearted person to tamper with the American highball. Possessing a temperament attuned to the innocuous beverages of France and Spain, he made a fatal error in attempting to harmonize with it the seductive drink offered by "el Americano," and the resulting discord was frightful.

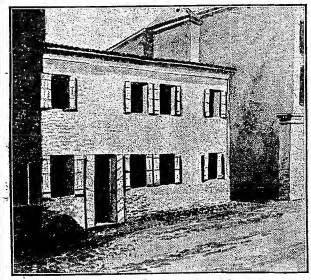
After the first one the general was more impressed with the dignity and power of his position than he had ever been before in his career. After the second he decided that he was the savior of his country, or ought to be. The third brought to him visions of an oppressed Panama, and the fourth and fifth fired his martial heart to deeds of patriotic valor.

Straightway he assembled the army, overthrew the government, chased the governor to the woods—and fell asleep. When he awoke he was under arrest, and is still in seclusion trying to find out what happened.

Electric Cars on Ice.

One of the winter sights of St. Petersburg is a system of electric tramways on the ice in the Neva. One runs from the left shore of the river to the island of Petrowsky and another from the English quay, opposite the Senate house, to the island of Basilio, near the Academy of Fine Arts. Wooden posts solidly embedded in the ice support the trolley wires. Besides these tramways many wooden roads, intended for pedestrians, cross the water in various directions. In summer bridges of boats take the place of the roads on the ice.

HOUSE IN WHICH POPE PIUS WAS BORN.



The humble cottage in which Pius X., the new pope, was born, still stands in Riese, near Venice, and is occupied by members of the Sarto family. The pope's parents were peasants, who could read and write only with difficulty, and their dwelling was one of the most modest in the village. They would have been unable to educate the future pope if it had not been for the assistance of the parish priest. Three of the pope's sisters are spinsters, another is married to a very poor man, and all support themselves by dressmaking. One of his brothers is the village postman, a position that pays just $80 per year.

WHERE THEY GET HURT.

There is no doubt about the "strength", of Uncle Sams marines, when they can "tote" a full barrel of alcohol on board the Cruiser Olympia, without being discovered by the officers.

The American battle ship-men always meet with their most serious disasters in time of peace, but when it comes to actual war, it seems that no foregin nation can hurt one of them fellows at all. The Olympia battle ship was in the fight with Dewey, and not a man was killed or injured in that memorable battle of Manila bay. Uncle Sams fighting men are safer on the blue water, or faceing a hostile foe than they are in port faceing old King alcohol.

Cleaned and Restored.

There is a certain lady who is addicted very strongly to the art of making up. What she does exactly is a mystery to all but herself and her maid, but the effect is precisely as if she had a thick coat of enamel or lacquer all over her face. A good deal of discussion has ensued as to whether this is renewed every day after ablutions. On this point a dear friend of hers observed: "Of course not. The expense would be enormous. Depend on it when she wants to wash she goes to some place where they clean old pictures."—London Tatler.

Natural Wonders.

"Why is a river the greatest freak of nature?"

"Didn't know it was. Why is it?"

"A river has a head, but no feet. Its mouth is where its feet ought to be."

"Pretty good. A mountain is somewhat freakish also. We have all seen the foot of a mountain, but we never heard of a mountain's head."

"That's so. Still it must have a head, for it has ears."

"Has ears? How's that?"

"Certainly. Did you never see a mountaineer?"—Kansas City Journal.

WELL TO REMEMBER.

How Lamp Chimneys May Be Put to Various Uses.

A chimney taken from a lighted lamp is one of the best and most quickly prepared "hot applications." Simply slip the hot chimney into an old stocking and apply to the pain. If steam is needed take a damp, warm cloth and wrap around the chimney. If the heat is for a cough or the croup wrap in flannel rag smeared with mutton tallow and turpentine. Applied to the chest or throat, relief will be had almost at once.

If your feet are cold at night place a hot chimney to them, and they will soon be warm, says the Woman's Home Companion. A lamp chimney is especially practicable during hot summer months, when the fires are out, for you can light the lamp and thus have hot application in a few minutes. Croup, colic, toothache, earache, coughs, rheumatic pains and many other ills flee before the hot lamp chimney in the household.

To press short seams without using an iron light a small kerosene lamp, regulating the blaze to keep the chimney moderately hot, then dampen the seam to be pressed. Pass the seam quickly over the spherical part of the chimney, and it will be pressed as nicely as could be done by a hot iron. Velvet ribbon also may be pressed in this way by dampening it on the linen or satin side, then rubbing on the chimney.

How to Brighten Cooking Utensils.

You can brighten tins and other cooking utensils by putting them all in the wash boiler and place on the fire with plenty of water and a liberal amount of washing soda. Let them boil for twenty minutes, remove the wash boiler from the fire, but do not take the tins out for three hours. At the end of that time they will be when washed bright and new looking.

How to Sponge Woolen Cloth.

Heavy woolen cloth should always be sponged, and this can easily be done at home. Lay the cloth out on a wide table, wet a sheet and spread over it, beginning about a foot from the end of the cloth. Fold over this portion of the cloth on to the sheet and continue the folds so that the wet sheet will come next to the surface of the cloth all the way. If the cloth is too long for one sheet use two or as many as required. Fold the ends of the roll together and let it lie for six or eight hours. This dampens the entire surface very evenly. Then press carefully with an iron as hot as can be used without scorching. It will not take long to go over the entire surface of the cloth, and there is the satisfaction of knowing that your suit will never shrink or spot.

To say silly things is about as bad as to do them.—Punxsutawney Spirit.

QUEER SUPERSTITIONS.

The following are some curious superstitions that are still extant among English speaking people:

If you kill frogs your cows will "go dry."

Tickling a baby will cause the child to stutter.

To thank a person for combing your hair will bring bad luck.

To kill a ghost it must be shot with a bullet made of a silver coin.

To dream of unbroken eggs signifies trouble to come; if the eggs are broken the trouble is past.

If you boast of your good health strike wood immediately with your fist or you will become ill.

To dream of a live snake means enemies at large, of a dead snake enemies dead or powerless.

To allow a child to look into a mirror before it is a month old will cause it to have trouble in teething.

A child will have a nature and disposition similar to those of the person who first takes it out of doors.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Johnson's First Tailoring Job.

President Andrew Johnson had never been ashamed of his humble origin; bad, indeed, often narrated the unhappy story of his first job at tailoring.

He had been summoned, he would say, to the residence of an influential citizen and had been bidden to make over one of the citizen's old coats for the son of the house.

Johnson, a little nervous through excess of zeal, took off his coat, turned back his sleeves, measured the youth and set to work. He was getting along well—the job, indeed, was nearly finished—when dinner time came and he reached out for his coat in order to put it on and go home.

To his chagrin he discovered then that it was his own coat which he had cut up for the boy.

How to Make Mock Oysters.

Chop one can of corn very fine, add to it one teaspoonful of salt, a little pepper, two eggs well beaten, one-half cup of flour. The mixture should be stiff enough to drop from the spoon. Fry in hot fat, drain on paper, arrange on a folded napkin.

How to Make Prune Jelly.

Wash and soak half a pound of prunes overnight. Cook until tender remove the stones, add half a cupful of sugar and hot water enough to make a pint in all and rub through a coarse sieve. Cover one-fourth of a package of gelatin with half a cupful of cold water, dissolve over hot water, add to the prunes with half a cupful of blanched almonds cut in strips. Turn into a mold and let it become cold.

Not Less Devoted.

"You used to sing 'Every Morn I Send You Violets' before we were married," said Mrs. Brimkin with a sigh.

"Yes," answered Mr. Brimkin, "but my devotion has taken a more practical form. Every month I pay the meat bill."—Washington Star.

Consoling.

He—Darling, I have lost my position.

She—Never mind, dear. Think how small your salary was.—Town and Country.

Curiosity Conquered.

"I thought Jane had such a dreadfully stiff neck."

"She has."

"Nonsense. There was a man painting the steeple of the brick church and she watched him for half an hour."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

RATTLESNAKE SUICIDE.

Deadly Snakes Kill Themselves When They Are Cornered.

While it may not be generally known it is a fact that a rattlesnake when cornered without chance of escape will deliberately take its own life. This was proved recently by George Coggswell, president of the Schaghticoke Rattlesnake club of Kent, Conn. He had taken a party of friends on a rattlesnake hunt and finally captured a big fellow by placing a forked stick over its neck.

A rattlesnake at bay is a sight never to be forgotten, especially if he is a game snake, for there are rattlers who are "quitters." No one along the Schaghticoke range knows rattlesnake nature better than George Coggswell. He saw the opportunity to show a rattlesnake at his worst.

"Now watch him close," said Coggswell, and then he proceeded in a manner born of long experience to tease the snake.

"They're a good bit like human beings," remarked the old snake hunter as he rubbed the fork over the rattler's head. "Keep tormentin' a rattler and he'll commit suicide, just like some folks when they get in trouble and despair."

The rattler would seize the fork in his mouth, and then, when some other fork prodded him in the back, he would loosen his fangs, only to dart them at the last tormentor.

"Keep your eye peeled now. He's a-gettin' desperate. Watch him kill himself! I've seen the devils do it many a time," said Coggswell as he continued his torment of the rattler.

THE SNAKE'S HEAD DARTED AT ITS BODY.

Then suddenly the rattler ceased his exertions.

"Now!" exclaimed Coggswell.

The snake quivered from his flat head to his now silent rattle. It was a convulsive little quiver. The scaly skin drew over the glistening, bead-like eyes, the neck arched itself into a graceful curve, and then, like a flash, the diamond shaped head shot like a dart at the body, and in a second the fangs of the rattler had dealt the blow that killed him.

And the tail of the rattler did not wriggle when the body was touched, like the tails of the snakes that had been killed.

"No, they never do," explained Coggswell. "When they kill themselves they are dead all over, and their tails don't wait till the sun sets back o' the ridge before they die."

How to Whiten the Hands.

A small, wide mouthed jar such as jelly or jam comes in should be placed near the sink in the bath room to hold the odds and ends of soap, and when it is three-fourths full it can be filled with boiling water. Add a little glycerin and the juice of a lemon, and you have a "soap jelly" which will soften and whiten the hands beautifully. This jelly is easily prepared and offers a good way to use up the odds and ends of soap which is within the possibilities even of those who do the lightest kind of housekeeping.

How to Prevent Shutters Rattling.

A rattling shutter frequently can be tightened so as to keep silent by the simple expedient of driving in a match or toothpick where the slat is loosened. If the slats rattle, a large spool pushed under the rod that goes through the middle will hold them still.

How to Chop Parsley.

If the parsley is wet, dry it thoroughly with a towel. Then pick the leaves from the stems, gather the leaves closely between the thumb and two fingers, press tightly and hold on a board. With a sharp pointed knife cut through the parsley as close to the fingers as possible. In this way each stroke of the knife does the work completely, the parsley is minced fine and evenly and does not have to be gone over again.

How to Dampen Clothes.

Dampen the clothes for ironing with hot water. This dampens them much more evenly than cold; also the things will be found ready for the ironing more quickly.

Treanor enlisted as a seaman, at St Paul, Minn. in July, 1901, and has been gun pointer since January 1, last.

GRANDSON OF A KING.

Charles J. Bonaparte, Special Counsel in Postal Trials.

Charles J. Bonaparte, who has been appointed a special counsel to assist the government in the prosecution of indicted officials of the postal department, is a direct descendant of the family of Napoleon the Great, emperor of the French.

His grandfather was the emperor's youngest brother, Jerome Bonaparte, who married the beautiful Betsy Patterson of Baltimore and who after being divorced from his American wife became king of Westphalia. Betsy Patterson's son, born of her marriage with Jerome, was the father of Charles J. Bonaparte.

Mr. Bonaparte is a graduate of Harvard Law school and since his admission to the bar in 1874 has practiced his profession with distinction in Baltimore.

CHARLES J. BONAPARTE.

Throughout his career he has been prominent in the affairs of the city and of the state of Maryland. In politics he is a Democrat.

Unlike young Lord Fairfax of Virginia, who recently went to England and claimed a seat in the British house of lords, Mr. Bonaparte has no longing for royalty or nobility and would rather be "Mr. Bonaparte of Baltimore" than "Mr. Bonaparte of Corsica."

The Schoolmaster.

I do not know in recent times a more stirring answer than that of Lacordaire, the famous Dominican, to the court of peers in France, who asked him what his profession was, when he replied simply; "A schoolmaster," unless it be the answer of his friend, the Comte de Montalembert, the noblest specimen, I sometimes think, of the modern French laity, to the same question: "A schoolmaster and a peer of France." Nay, it was but the other day that a learned and humble man of science, who will live in history as having declared that he had "no time to make money," began his will with the modest words, so great in their modesty, "I, Louis Agassiz, teacher."—Contemporary Review.

Miss Cranston, Who Is an Expert on Matters Sociological.

Miss Mary R. Cranston, who has just sailed for Europe in the interest of the American Institute of Social Service, will make special studies of the trained nurse of Paris, of the fresh air work in France and of the industrial and social conditions in European cities.

The institute was started some years ago as the League of Social Service, but within the past year its scope has been broadened and its present title adopted. The aim of the institute is to furnish information to members on any subject in relation to the betterment of man.

MISS MARY R. CRANSTON.

Miss Cranston, the librarian of the institute, is also a "social engineer," a new profession developed through the work of the institute. She studies and gives expert opinions on things sociological. Miss Helen Gould has supplied a large part of the funds for this sociological enterprise, and other supporters are the presidents of Bryn Mawr, Wellesley and Mount Holyoke colleges.

How to Air Beds.

The directions for airing beds given in a domestic training school are worth noting. Place two chairs with seats together near an open window. Fold the counterpane neatly the long way and lay over the tops of the chairs, allowing the middle to sag down to the seats. Fold the blankets next and place over the counterpane, allowing a space between each for the circulation of air. Proceed in the same way with the rest of the bedclothing. Beat up the pillows and place them where they will get the air.

QUIT WHINING.

A Plea For the Cheerful Soul Who Lives to Be Happy.

There isn't anything in the world more disagreeable than a whining person.

He whines if it is hot. He whines if it is cold. He whines at this, he whines at that, he whines at everything. Whine, whine, whine.

It is just a habit he has fallen into. There is nothing the matter with him. It is just a bad habit.

The whiner is generally an idle person or a lazy one. What he needs is to be set to work—at real hard work, mental or physical—some work that will interest him and engage his whole attention, and he will not have time to whine.

We know two women. One of them does her own housework and takes care of her horse besides. She is happy and singing all the day long. The keyboard of her life sounds no whining note. It is a pleasure to be with her; a good, wholesome tonic to watch her.

The other woman is so situated that she does not have to work; nothing to do but to amuse herself. She has no zest in life, no interest in anything. She is a bunch of selfishness and whines at everything. Whining has become such a habit with her that her most casual remark is tinged with a whine. She is miserable herself and makes everybody else in her presence miserable. She is a weakling, a parasite, a drag, a heavy weight on somebody all the time.

Get the whine out of your voice or it will stop the development and growth of your body. It will narrow and shrink your mind. It will drive away your friends. It will make you unpopular.

Quit your whining. Brace up. Go to work. Be something. Stand for something. Fill your place in the universe. Instead of whining around, exciting only pity and contempt, face about and make something of yourself. Reach up to the stature of a strong, ennobling manhood; to the beauty and strength of a superb womanhood.

There is nothing the matter with you. Just quit your whining and go to work.—Medical Talk.

To have a perfect stomach a diet of a woman must diet well and breakfast and sup simply.—Ladies' Home Journal.

SUMMER DRINKS.

How to Make a Number of Refreshing Beverages.

With the warm, thirsty days we begin to look for something long and wet to cut out the dust in our throats. Summer drinks are always a perplexing problem. All alcoholic drinks should be avoided, and to find something to take the place of cold water is not always easy. The New York American publishes the following recipes for making summer drinks:

The following is easily and quickly made: Into a large glass put the unbeaten whites of two eggs, juice of one lemon or two oranges, small cup of crushed ice and sugar to taste. Put in tin shaker and shake until light. Serve in a smaller glass.

Another good drink is made by grating a pineapple in a saucepan; pour over enough boiling water to cover it, let it steep on back of stove for five or six hours; then strain, sweeten to taste. Half freeze this; nothing better on a hot day.

A most refreshing drink is made as follows: To one quart of iced tea add a pint of apollinaris water, the juice of three lemons, juice of two oranges, several slices of orange, strawberries and shredded pineapple. Then sweeten to taste and serve very cold.

A good champagne cider: Put two teaspoonfuls of powdered carbonate of soda and two ounces of white sugar in a pitcher and pour over it a quart of sharp cider. The cider should be on ice before using.

A cooling drink which should be used sparingly is made by mixing and dissolving a pint of vinegar, two pounds of strained honey and three quarts of ice water.

A drink for sick or well is the yolk of an egg, one tablespoonful of sugar, two drops of vanilla, one-half cup of ice water. Beat and add a few pieces chopped ice; also the white of an egg beaten to a froth.

An inexpensive and refreshing drink is made as follows: Half gallon of water, one tablespoonful of cinnamon, half wineglass of vinegar. Sweeten to taste.

How to Clean Copper.

Half a lemon dipped in salt will clean copper beautifully, and the best part of it is that a lemon from which the juice has been squeezed does just as well as a freshly cut one. After rubbing with the lemon and salt rinse the copper in clean hot water and dry and polish with a clean soft cloth.

How to Make Cold Cream.

One ounce of spermaceti, a half ounce of pure wax, a quarter pint of oil of sweet almonds and a dram of rosewater. Crush the spermaceti and the wax and put them, with the other ingredients, into a jar set in boiling water. Stir gently until the wax and spermaceti are melted. Then pour into a thick basin or mortar to get cold. When quite cold, stir the mixture gently with the pestle, beginning at the surface and gradually working to the bottom. When the ingredients are thoroughly incorporated, add six drops of essence of roses, then stir and beat the mixture until perfectly white. This is not only a good cold cream, but it is a remedy for irritating skin affections.

How to Clean Panama Hats.

To clean panama hats brush them well to remove every particle of dust and cover them with a paste made of dampened corn meal. Leave this on overnight and in the morning brush it off. When the hat is dry sponge it with peroxide of hydrogen and dry in the hot sunshine.

How to Keep Mold From Jam.

Have ready the covers and as you fill each jar cover at once while boiling hot. This will make them perfectly air tight. Jam, jellies and marmalade made up in this way will keep two or even three years.

Inseparable.

Affrighted, he turned on his pursuer. "You black thing, why do you follow me constantly? What are you?"

"I am your sunshine companion," mockingly replied his shadow.—Chicago Tribune.

How to Care For Jewels.

People who have jewels should remember that if turquoises are wetted they are apt to lose color. Pearls should be exposed to light and air as much as possible, but not to damp, says Home Notes. Opals must never be exposed to great heat or they may crack and fall from their setting. Don't forget this when near the fire if you happen to wear an opal ring.

'Eugana E. Lario, of 751 Twentieth Avenue, ticket seller in the Union Station, Denver. Col., says: "You are at liberty to repeat what I first stated through our Denver papers about Doan's Kidney Pills in the summer of 1899, for I have had no reason in the interim to change my opinion of the remedy. I said when first interviewed that if I had a friend and acquaintance suffering from backache or kidney trouble I would unhesitatingly advise them to take Doan's Kidney Pills. I was subject to severe attacks of backache, always aggravated if I sat long at a desk. It struck me that if Doan's Kidney Pills performed half what they promised they might at least help. This induced me to try the remedy. It absolutely stopped the backache. I have never had a pain or twinge since."

The Trails That Crossed

By HOWARD DEVINE

(Copyright, 1903, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

"GO OUT and see if there isn't a story in these matrimonial agencies," said the Sunday Editor. "Join three or four of them; brush up against the game; meet the fillies they have in stock—get some good experiences. Never mind the fake part of it. I don't care to expose the frauds so much as to print some odd adventures and work up some interesting character sketches. Take your time and get a page, illustrated."

I was dead broke and unattached and the idea pleased me.

"How far shall I go in my explorations?" I asked, rolling a cigarette.

"The limit," he replied, laconically. "Clear to the altar. Get married. Do it up right."

Then we both laughed and he continued:

"Of course you haven't got a sou. Here's an order for $15. Come in and show progress and you can have more if you need it. But mind, no blowing money. This is not a news story. Do it right, but don't buy any wires."

I took the assignment gratefully and went out on my quest. I will not weary you with the details of my experiences with the cheap, stout women and cheap, thin men who preside over the matrimonial agencies, and the still cheaper females who are listed at these places. I posed as Hiram Adams, architect, with a limited income and great prospects, in search of a wife with some ready money that would help me get my start. I met attenuated school teachers, freckled stenographers and auburn haired spinsters residing at parental homes. I met stout widows and thin divorcees and sighing orphans of uncertain age. School teachers seemed to predominate. I made appointments to call, appointments to dine—all sorts of appointments, the expenses of which the Clarion cheerfully paid as I related my story of progress. Really I accumulated quite a decent story, but in the meantime I became most heartily sick of the assignment. The women were all so commonplace and their conversation so inane that it required something of a draft on my reportorial imagination, based on the experiences of a half dozen years, to make anything out of the material.

I was about through and had about enough material whipped into shape, and was entirely tired of the game when I met Elsie Norman, registered at Baldy's agency as an orphan and an heiress worth $100,000 in her own name, and looking for a husband through the agency because of eccentricity.

When I stumbled into the little box labeled Parlor G I was totally unprepared for the vision which confronted me. Listen, and I will try to describe it:

A petite little person, with a wealth of light hair, not golden nor brown, nor yet tow color, but of that peculiar shade—well, you know what it is as well as I; a broad forehead; mischievous blue-gray eyes; dainty hands and feet; features not regular nor beautiful, but interesting and attractive because of the intelligence manifested. She was gowned simply, but with exquisite taste, and in that peculiar surroundings and in the light of my recent experiences, the effect was paralyzing.

I confess that I stumbled over the frayed rug and comported myself altogether more in keeping with my assumed character than I had yet done.

She smiled reassuringly and apologized for the rug. The conversation I do not remember very distinctly, but before I left a date had been made for a little supper the next evening at a cozy Italian restaurant in an obscure street, known only to the elect. The queer thing about it was that I seemed to remember afterward that she made the suggestion as to place. Also she told me that I had been recommended to her by Baldy as the best thing (for her) he had in sight.

As I went out Baldy called me aside and confided to me that this girl surely was the real thing for me.

"She's rich, rich," he said, pounding his old walnut desk, "and beautiful and clever—beautiful and clever, I say, as well. Go to it."

"But there's von ting," he continued, looking me in the eye with so piercing an expression that I quailed, old stager that I was; "dis tid-bit is not for a mere fee. I haf secured it for you. If you get it, ve must haf an understanding. I must haf von-kewauter of the fortune. All you needs, man, is enough to put you up in business. You are in luck to get such a girl anyway. Promise me a kewauter, and sho is yours!"

I shook him and fled. That night I slept not, because of my burning memories of the fair young heiress. It might have been my horrible experience of the past week, but she certainly seemed to me to be the fairest lady of my dreams—and that is a whole lot for a calloused reporter to say.

The following day threatened to be the longest I had ever spent. Finally, in despair, I resolved to go to the Metropolitan agency and see what was "doing," although all interest in my assignment had lapsed.

"My deah boy, I've just what ya want," exclaimed Hobson, the manager, as I entered. "Parlor B, and get theah quick. I 'ave been a-holdin' it for ye all the mornin'."

Half pushed, half walking, wholly disgusted, I stumbled in, and there, right in front of me, fresh, dainty and alluring as before, sat Elsie Norman.

"What does this mean?" I demanded, sternly, tragically—melodramatically, I will now admit. "You make a date with me and then go gallivanting around these cheap agencies. What does it mean?"

"And as to you, sir?" she asked, demurely, in reply.

"I am trying to pass the time," I replied, sternly.

"And I," she replied, smiling.

As we emerged from the building, I called a cab and handed her in. Before I let it go, I said:

"Come, now, no more agency business until after the supper — if you please."

"Agreed," she replied, a merry smile lighting her face—and I thought I saw a hint of downcast eyes and a hint of responsive comradarie which well-nigh sent me into a fit of vertigo.

That supper was a red-letter occasion. I had never been much of a ladies' man, but had met many women of all degrees, and never had I met one with the charm of this mystifying product of the matrimonial agencies. She was so evidently up-to-date, so well-informed, so wise to everything going on in the world, so thoroughly posted in affairs and so well able to discuss current topics, that I could not reconcile her actual self with her position as a woman of fortune seeking a husband through the mountebank agencies. Why! without a cent, she was a prize for a prince.

While we sat at the little table in the cozy corner, a party consisting of newspaper fellows and an actor or two came in for a bite. As I nodded carelessly to them, and they returned my salutation, a puzzled expression crossed Miss Norman's face.

"Who are those people?" she asked, sharply.

"Oh, Tom Bates, of the Universe; Jimmie Burns, of the Recorder; Louie Drake, of the Clarion, and Harold St. Hubert, the actor," I replied.

"Do you know them?" she asked.

Then I recovered my balance and replied:

"I—I met Bates, casually, the other night, and he pointed the others out to me."

Then I changed the subject.

Later on we went to the theater, and before leaving her I made an engagement to take her riding on the following afternoon.

I lay in my room and smoked that night until far past dawn, buried in visions. The evening had strengthened and vivified every impression of my first meeting with the girl. There was no question but she was a lady in every sense of the word—and her alert intelligence was not the least of her charms. There was no dodging it, I was madly in love with her. All my doubts based on finding her at a matrimonial agency were cast aside.

"I would marry her without a question as to her object in being there," I said.

Then I groaned as I thought of the barrier of her wealth and the cheap part I was playing. For, of course, I must be honest with her.

Finally I made my resolve. I could not remain in so equivocal a position. I would make a clean breast of it, and hope for her friendship at least. More I dare not dream.

Perhaps years would efface the memory of my duplicity, and when I should have attained a high position in my profession, perhaps—who knows?

The next afternoon, far out on a lonesome drive, I pulled myself together and told her the whole wretched business.

"I owe you an apology as abject as a man can make, Miss Norman," I started in, tragically. Then I hurried on: "I am compelled to confess to you that I am not what I have pretended to be. My name is not Hiram Adams, but Stewart Vincent. I am a newspaper reporter doing the matrimonial agencies, getting material for a story for the Clarion. It was good enough fun before I met you, but I am heartily ashamed of myself now, and I humbly beg your pardon. I desire your honest friendship too much to go on with the deceit longer."

I had kept my eyes resolutely on the horse. I now turned to her, and was surprised to find her face suffused with blushes and her eyes downcast.

Then she uttered a merry little laugh and looked at me with a mischievous glance that nearly caused me to drop the reins and gather her in my arms.

"It's tit for tat," she said. "I am on the same assignment for the Universe, and—and I was just thinking how dreadfully cheap I was. My name is Eleanor Vance. I guess it's a case of two fools."

A great joy leaped through my veins.

"Not if we can be friends—no I don't mean that," I said—"if we can go on with this courtship, Miss Vance. My Sunday editor told me to follow this assignment clear to the altar—in fact, to get married, if necessary to get a good story. I consider it very necessary. I haven't a dollar in the world, but I can always hold a good job. Will you help me follow out my orders?"

"Mine were the same," she replied, softly, "and two salaries are twice as much as one,"—this in a whisper.

Then I dropped the reins and the horse had its own way for a season.

Two such stories never appeared as those in the next issues of the Sunday Clarion and the Sunday Universe. Mine led to a permanent job, and the Universe lost Miss Vance shortly, greatly to the gain of a cozy uptown flat.

And I did not begrudge paying both agencies liberal fees.

YANKEE INVENTIONS.

Chinese Newspaper in the Philippines Describes an Ingenious American Contrivance.

Admiral Dewey was a prominent figure at the Saratoga races. Usually he occupied a box. One afternoon a little party of farmers came up to shake hands with him, and thereafter, naturally, the talk turned to agriculture, says the Boston Post.

"When I was in the Philippines," said Admiral Dewey, "an American resident brought me, one day, a Chinese paper. He said this paper would interest me because it contained an account of an American invention. Then, with a smile, he translated a paragraph that ran something like this:

"'The ingenuity of the Yankee is typified well in a hen's nest that he has recently invented and patented. This nest increases the laying capacity of the hens to an unlimited degree. In the bottom of it there is a trap door, governed by a delicate spring. The hen lays an egg, the weight of which causes the trap door to open, whereupon the egg drops down into a subterranean compartment, and the door closes very swiftly and silently again. The hen gets up, turns to look at the egg, but sees none there. So she decides that she must be mistaken in thinking she had laid, and she sits down again and deposits another egg, which, like its predecessor, disappears. The process continues indefinitely.'"

UNDULY CAUTIOUS.

Infinite Precaution as Exemplified by the Trained Newspaper Reporter.

An American contemporary, having been cast in heavy damages for incautious reporting, declares that it will be more reserved in its statements in future, relates London Tit-Bits, and asks its readers how they like the following specimen:

"An alleged mad dog, said to be the property of an alleged butcher in Atlantic avenue, is said to have broken his chain yesterday afternoon and attacked the alleged daughter of Herman Jost, who claims to be a cigar maker in that street. It will be remembered by our readers that the alleged butcher, whose name could not be learned, was arrested some 16 months ago for an alleged assault on his alleged wife with an alleged brick, and he was sent to the penitentiary for, it is stated, the alleged term of two years, but was pardoned at the expiration of a term of months by the alleged governor of the state."

Texas Finds a Remedy.

Fate, Tex., Sept. 21.—Texas has seldom, if ever, had such a profound sensation as that caused by the introduction recently of a new remedy for kidney diseases. This remedy has already been tried in thousands of cases, and in almost every case the results have been wonderful.

Henry Vaughan, of Rural Route No. 3, Fate, says of it:

"I suffered with Kidney Trouble for over 18 months. I was very bad and could get nothing to help me till I heard of the new remedy, Dodd's Kidney Pills. I began to use these pills, and very soon found myself improving. I kept on and now can say I am absolutely cured and free from any symptom of my old trouble.

"I am very glad I heard of this wonderful remedy and I would strongly advise anyone suffering with Kidney trouble to try it, for I know it will cure."

Proper Distinction.

Little Mary's big sister was engaged to Mr. Brown, who was away on an outing trip with Mary's brother. Her father was writing to his son and prospective son-in-law and asked the little girl if she had a message to send to Mr. Brown.

"What shall I say, pap?" asked she.

"Why," said the father, "I believe it is the fashion to send your love."

Some minutes later her father inquired: "And what shall I say to brother Tom?"

"Well," replied the little miss, with a sigh, "you may send my fashionable love to Mr. Brown and my real love to Brother Tom."—Philadelphia Press.

Cheap Excursion to the South.

On Oct. 20th the Kansas City Southern Ry. (Port Arthur Route) will run a cheap excursion from Kansas City and all stations in Missouri and Kansas to Lake Charles, Shreveport, Beaumont and Port Arthur. The rate for the round trip will be $15, limited to 21 days from date of sale, good to stop over on going trip at all points en route, provided final destination is reached inside of 15 days from date of sale. This exceptionally low rate, together with liberal stopover privileges allowed, should insure a great crowd, especially in view of the fact that this is the most delightful season of the year to visit the Southland. Similar low rates will probably be placed in effect from points north and east of Kansas City: Ask your ticket agent.

Every effort will be made by the Company to secure the safety and comfort of its patrons. All inquiries relative to desirable locations to visit or other information will be cheerfully furnished. Address either S. G. Warner, G. P. & T. A., F. E. Roesler, T. P. & I. A. or J. H. Morris, T. P. A., Kansas City, Mo.

Her Degree of Courage.

Amie had been suffering from toothache for several days. At last she consented to go with her papa to the dentist. When she was starting, her mamma said: "Now, dearest, be a brave little girl. Show fortitude, and mamma will be proud of you."

In due time Amie returned. "And did you show fortitude?" mamma inquired. Amie hesitated. "It hurted awful, mamma; I guess (reflectively) I showed about twenty-tude."—Kansas City Journal.

Member of Congress From Virginia Writes.

Hon. G. R. Brown, Martinsville, Va., ex-member of Congress Fifth District, 50th Congress, writes:

"I cheerfully give my endorsement to your Peruna as a cure for catarrh. Its beneficial results have been so fully demonstrated that its use is essential to all persons suffering from that disease."—Hon. G. R. Brown.

The day was when men of prominence hesitated to give their testimonials to proprietary medicines for publication. This remains true today of most proprietary medicines. But Peruna has become so justly famous, its merits are known to so many people of high and low stations, that no one hesitates to see his name in print recommending Peruna.

The highest men in our nation have given Peruna a strong endorsement. Men representing all classes and stations are equally represented.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

WASHINGTON LETTER

National Capital Gossip That Is Just Now of Timely Interest.

THE DISTRICT GOVERNMENT

Commissioner West Turning Things Over — Many Opportunities for Fraud Have Existed—Rotation of the Cabinet Wheel.

Commissioner West.

Washington.—A good object lesson in effective administration is being given just now by a former newspaper correspondent who less than a year ago became one of the commissioners of the District of Columbia.

Henry Litchfield West was for many years the political writer for the Washington Post, and is pretty well known throughout the country for his articles on political and historical subjects; but even those who admired his ability hardly suspected that he had in him the making of a reform executive as he is demonstrating to-day.

When he went into the District government all the wheels seemed to be running smoothly. It was the habit to talk about the District of Columbia as the best governed municipality in the world. The government had the reputation of being clean, efficient and altogether above reproach. Then all of a sudden came the discovery that a trusted employe had been stealing the District money for years and that he had made away with over $70,000 of it before he was caught. West was as startled as everybody else.

He was only one of three commissioners, but he went to work without a minute's delay to investigate the system which would permit such a defalcation, and it was not long before he had unearthed a laxness of administration which was simply appalling. Men who had been officers of the District for almost a generation handling the taxes and disbursements were found not to be bonded properly, so that any deficiency in their departments must have been a complete loss to the taxpayers. It was discovered that the accounts of some of the disbursing officials had not been audited in 15 years and that there was actually no way to find out whether there had been misdoing or not.

Peculiar Methods.

Spoiling the Graft.

One most important discovery of West's is just announced. He finds that it is the practice of District officials to buy all supplies in the open market without inviting competitive bids. This is a practice which has not been permitted in any other department of the government for many years, and it is open to all sorts of abuse. It opens the way to pilfering almost without limit through purchasing officials standing in with dealers. It was learned, for one thing, that the District had been paying more than double the price for typewriter ribbons paid by departments which invited bids, and that there was similar extravagance all along the line.

To be sure there has been no development as yet of actual dishonesty, but it is not the fault of the system that there has not been thieving, and it may turn out that such is the case. In the meantime Commissioner West is determined that there shall be no further temptation and he has ordered that hereafter all supplies for the District be bought only after competitive bidding. The reform is certain to save the District thousands of dollars a year.

Cabinet Changes.

Wilson Is Not a Politician.

Only one of the original members of President McKinley's cabinet remains in President Roosevelt's cabinet—Secretary Wilson, the head of the department of agriculture.

Curiously enough Secretary Wilson was the least known of all the men selected by President McKinley at the time of his appointment. His reputation was confined to his state of Iowa, and even there he was regarded as something of a back number. But seven years as secretary of agriculture has made the American people thoroughly familiar with him, and there was no more popular official connected with the last administration or with this than he.

Of all the secretaries of agriculture Wilson has been by far the most efficient. It has been a labor of love with him, and he has devoted himself enthusiastically to the development of the agricultural interests of the country. Everything else connected with the government is of secondary interest to him. He had rather father the discovery of the secret of the superiority of Havana tobacco over the American product than he would to stand sponsor for the most successful diplomatic stroke of the administration. It is his ambition to see the United States produce the best of everything on its own soil. He will not admit that there is anything inherently impossible in producing the best of every product of the temperate zone right here, and he has scientists at work for him who have devoted their lives to special branches of that inquiry.

He is subject to disappointment sometimes, however. He had one not long ago. The department had in its employ the only man in the world who had made a profound study of the secret of raising tobacco. He was on the search for the germ which made the flavor of Havana tobacco superior to that of Connecticut—which gave the value to the weed. The department was paying him $2,000 a year. Japan came along with an offer of $12,000 a year and he was lost to us. There is not an expert in the department who has not received flattering offers from other governments, but most of them remain loyal, in spite of all temptation.

An Unusual Condition.

Rotation in Office.

Although Wilson is the only survival of the original McKinley cabinet it is a fact that there have been fewer changes in the cabinet during the past seven years than is usual in an administration.

The course of President Roosevelt in retaining so large a proportion of the advisers of his predecessor in office is unprecedented. If he had followed the example set by President Arthur when he succeeded Garfield there would be a clean slate by this time, and most of the cabinet officers would have been changed months ago. As it is, we still have Wilson, Hay, Knox and Hitchcock—exactly one half. And of these who retired, Root, Smith and Long left only after repeated solicitation from the president to stay.

There is no other case on record where the policies of one administration have been continued through another so consistently, and where even the men selected by one president have kept on under another chief the work originally planned by them.

When McKinley was shot he was surrounded by only three of the advisers whom he had with him at the beginning of his administration—Long, Gage and Wilson. He had seen more changes in the makeup of his own cabinet than Roosevelt has seen since the assassination. And in addition Roosevelt has made a cabinet minister out of McKinley's private secretary just as McKinley had planned for him.

Since McKinley became president there have been three secretaries of state, two secretaries of war, two secretaries of the navy, two secretaries of the treasury, three attorneys general, two secretaries of the interior, three postmasters general and one secretary of agriculture.

Hitchcock's Methods.

Hitchcock Knocked Out the Gang.

Secretary Hitchcock is another survival of the McKinley regime. In view of the fight that has been made on him ever since he became secretary of the interior it is almost marvelous that he continues to hold his place through the vicissitudes of two administrations. For Hitchcock is not in any way a politician. He is as innocent as a baby in all matters of political moment. First he was an object of the aversion of certain political elements in his own state of Missouri, who disliked to see so important a position filled by a Missourian who was not one of the "gang." It seemed like a waste of good material to have the most important political office held by any citizen of the state rendered practically useless from a political point of view through its bestowal on a plain business man.

But Hitchcock weathered that opposition, and he weathered the opposition of leading far western senators who persisted in going to the president with complaints that the secretary of the interior should be one more closely in touch than Hitchcock with far western affairs.

He is now engaged in a struggle with certain interests which believe they have been injured in a business way by the secretary's course. It remains to be seen how long the attacks will continue, and it will be interesting to watch the developments as they affect the secretary's future.

Before Hitchcock became secretary of the interior he was ambassador to Russia, so that for a plain business man without political aptitude he has managed to occupy some pretty important places.

LOUIS E. COOLIDGE.

ROUND ABOUT THE STATE.

The new M. E. church at Princeton was dedicated without debt.

Four hundred Pythians were in state convention today in St. Paul.

George Johnson, 22 years old, was drowned yesterday in Ocheeda lake while hunting.

A Story of Rossetti.

James MacNeill Whistler used to tell the following story about Dante Gabriel Rossetti, and in view of the famous prerapheelite's eccentricities in his later years it can readily be believed. Rossetti had invited the painter of nocturnes and harmonies to dine with him at his house in Chelsea, and when Whistler arrived he was shown into a reception room. Seating himself, he was soon disturbed by a noise which appeared to be made by a rat or mouse in the wainscoting of the room. This surmise was wrong, as he found the noise was in the center of the apartment. Stooping, to his amazement he saw Rossetti lying at full length under the table.

"Why, what on earth are you doing there, Rossetti?" exclaimed Whistler.

"Don't speak to me! Don't speak to me!" cried Rossetti. "That fool Morris," meaning the famous William, "has sent to say he can't dine here tonight, and I'm so mad I'm gnawing the leg of the table!"

Obliging the Conductor.

"Step lively!" bawled the conductor as the crowd started to board his car. "Step lively there!"

The portly father climbed, wheezing, aboard, carrying a small and chubby boy. Next came a little bright eyed girl of six, perhaps, while the mother climbed un last, carrying the baby.

There were seats for the father, the mother, the small boy and baby —the last two on their parents' knees—but the little girl had to stand.

"Mercy on us, Hester!" said the mother. "What are you hopping about that way for?"

The little girl was clinging to the seat ahead and was dancing excitedly, hopping on one foot and then the other as fast as she could.

"Why, mamma," she said, still eying the stern conductor, "I'm stepping lively!"

Even the conductor smiled.—New York Press.

How to Clean Silk Dresses.

A Pocket Handkerchief.

In a book which has been published on that never failing topic, the vagaries of the English language, the strange meaning of the word "pocket handkerchief" is described.

A "kerchief" (couvrechef) means a small piece of cloth made to put on the head, so that a "pocket handkerchief" means literally a small piece of cloth to cover the head, to be held in the hand, to be put in the pocket.—London [illegible]

USEFUL HINTS.

How to Solve Several Perplexing Household Problems.

A quick and easy way to slip a rod through curtains is to pare the end of the rod, put a thimble on the end, and the rod will slip through quite easily without tearing the curtain.

To prevent windows from steaming clean them thoroughly and apply a small quantity of glycerin over the polish with a soft cloth. Rub briskly and lightly until the glycerin is well rubbed in.

To prevent portieres catching underneath the door when opened quickly screw a small ring such as is used for picture frames into the center of the door frame. To this fasten a length of blind cord sufficient to reach to the bottom of the curtain. Put another ring in the center of the door at the top, thread the cord through and fasten to the bottom of the curtain, and as the door is opened so the curtain rises.

Do not throw old incandescent mantles away. They make a splendid polish for silver. Put a little on a soft duster and rub on the article to be cleaned. It will polish beautifully without scratching or marking the silver.

Before cleaning out a fireplace sprinkle a good handful of tea leaves among the ashes. This makes the ashes lift easier and prevents the dust from flying about the room.

When machining soft materials such as silks or muslins pin or tack strips of paper along the parts to be machined so that the paper is next to the teeth of the sewing machine and the work uppermost. Then the material will not ruck or gather, as it otherwise would. Even chiffon can be machined in this way.

Never disturb an invalid by making a noise when putting coals on the fire in the sick room. Put the pieces of coal in paper bags and put both coals and bag on the fire.

The Essential Thing.

The primary class in Sunday school was listening to a lesson on patience. This, according to the Boston Herald, was what came of it, at least in the minds of the more literal minded children:

The topic had been carefully explained, and as an aid to understanding the teacher had given each pupil a card bearing the picture of a boy fishing.

"Even pleasure," said she, "requires the exercise of patience. See the boy fishing. He must sit and wait and wait. He must be patient."

Having treated the subject very fully she began with the simplest, most practical question:

"And now can any little boy tell me what we need most when we go fishing?" The answer was shouted with one voice:

DOGS IN FICTION.

Parts They Have Played in the Great English Novels.

Although it may be conceded that among the animals of fiction the horse holds first place, the part played by dogs, especially in modern literature, is very large and important. The pages of many famous novels have presented us with members of the canine race as carefully drawn and as lovingly delineated as any of the human characters introduced. Not infrequently the role of hero or heroine is doubled with, or wholly supported by, a dog. And in numberless instances it is the intervention, conscious or unsconscious, of a dog upon which the whole plot turns. As might be expected, it is among the works of such novelists as are specially noted as dog lovers that the finest and most frequent descriptions of their four footed friends are to be found, and naturally Sir Walter Scott, well known for his extreme attachment to dogs, heads the list.

Big dogs are Scott's special favorites, and his noblest example is Sir Kenneth's hound Rosval, who bears an all important part in the plot of "The Talisman." Rosval is described as a large staghound of splendid proportions and great sagacity, who shares his master's watch on St. George's Mount beside the banner of England, above the camp of the crusaders. Tempted by woman's guile, the knight forsakes his post for a short space, leaving Rosval to guard the flag. A base attack is made in his absence, and Kenneth returns to find the flag gone and its faithful defender wounded apparently to death in its defense. Kenneth's remorse for the violation of the English banner is scarcely more keen than his grief over the dog, who wags his tail and licks his master's hand even in the agonies of death. It is a most touching scene, drawn by a master hand, and the reader's satisfaction is not less than the knight's is represented to be when the Arabian physician Saladin, disguised, appears opportunely, and by his timely ministration saves the hound, who lives to identify his till then unknown assailant by dragging him bodily from his horse. In "Ivanhoe," Gurth, the swineherd, possesses a noteworthy dog, Fangs by name, "a rugged, wolfish looking dog, a sort of lurcher, half mastiff, half greyhound," who assists his master in the care of his refractory charges, is wounded by Cedric the Saxon, and whose adventures are carried on throughout the book.

Dickens was a dog lover, and possessed several dear canine friends. It is recorded in his biographies how greatly moved he was on one occasion by the sympathetic concern evinced by two of his favorites, Turk and Linda, when during a walk he was suddenly struck with lameness.

Thackeray, however, makes little use or mention of dogs. George Eliot also lays no great stress upon them.

Fury of A Fish

Sea Monster, Enraged by a Harpoon Wound, Attacks a Man.

How a Giant Swordfish Pierces the Hull of a Boat and Nearly Killed Its Occupant.

Christopher Norwaugh, one of the best known fishermen in the fleet that hails from Block island, had a terrific battle with a 500 pound swordfish and sustained injuries from which for a time it was thought he could not recover.

During the struggle the fish rammed the small boat in which the fisherman was at work and sent its sword through the hull and into the fisherman's body, causing a punctured wound of the most serious character. So severely injured was Norwaugh that the Block island doctors thought it advisable to send the patient to a hospital for surgical and such other treatment as the case might necessitate.

Norwaugh was one of the fishing crew of the sloop Lindsey, Captain Edwin Dodge. The craft left Old Harbor in company with the fleet about sunrise, and when six miles south of the wireless station Wallace A. Mitchell, another member of the crew, sighted a swordfish from the masthead. The fish, the largest and most ferocious seen this season, rose at full length above the feathering seas to the height of six feet a number of times. The craft ran down toword the fish and Captain Dodge, in the "pulpit," made ready to harpoon the monster. When the fish came in range Dodge sent the keen weapon deep into its back and it immediately dived.

THE FISH LEAPED OVER THE BOAT.

As the Lindsey's head pointed up to the spot where the fish was last seen Captain Dodge proceeded to haul in the line. The fish made no violent demonstration until it was within a few yards of a small boat in which Norwaugh had left the Lindsey to assist in landing the fish, and then the struggle began. The fish circled the boat a dozen times as fast as it could swim, and then it went out of the sea, clearing the small boat and tearing out the harpoon. The fish's tail grazed the fisherman's head. The monster dived deep, and turning quickly came up directly under the stern. The sword struck the bottom of the boat with terrific force, penetrated it, entered the interior of the fisherman's left leg and was forced through the fleshy part. The point of the sword came out on the exterior of Norwaugh's leg at the hip.

The weapon with which the fighting fish struck the man was over three feet long, and the wound it made was a tearing wound nearly thirty inches in length. The flesh and muscles of Norwaugh's leg were torn from the bone.

Mitchell saw the struggle between the man and fish, and the crew of the Lindsey went to the rescue as soon as possible. Norwaugh was found to be terribly torn, and he was bleeding profusely. It was feared he would bleed to death. The flow was stopped, and with the injured man aboard the Lindsey made for the harbor under both sail and ten horse power auxiliary with which the craft is supplied. Nearly all the way in the vessel was throwing the sea over her bows. Everything depended upon the earliest arrival of the craft in port, where a doctor could dress the injuries of the fisherman. The Lindsey arrived at Block island shortly after noon, and surgeons attended the man.

At this season the swords of swordfish are coated with a slime which is said to be deadly poison, and this poisonous matter is liable to cause blood poisoning and probably death. Norwaugh has a family living on the island

A similar battle with a swordfish occurred off No Man's Land, forty miles east of this place, three years ago. The fish struck the fisherman, killing him instantly. The body fell into the sea, and it is supposed sharks seized it.

Curing an Otter Skin.

A full grown sea otter is from four to five feet long and perhaps a foot or more wide. When a hunter secures one he loosens the hide from the nose and head, and, without cutting it lengthwise at all, he pulls the skin down over the body, the hide being so elastic that this is not a difficult job. It is then stretched over a smooth board six and a half feet long, nine inches wide at one end and ten at the other end. Each end of this board is tapered to a point. Another board exactly the same size is then inserted, and the skin is stretched a foot or eighteen inches longer than its original length.

A third board half the length of the other is wedged in and the skin lightly tacked at the ends to hold it in place. If any flesh adheres to the skin it is then cut off, and the hide is cured and dried in this condition. In a few days it is taken off the boards and turned fur side out, when it is ready for market.

SIAMESE BELIEFS.

Some Peculiar Notions of a Very Superstitious People.

"The Siamese are a very superstitious people," says Ernest Young, author of the "Kingdom of the Yellow Rule." "They have many peculiar explanations of natural phenomena. Thunder, for instance, is 'the sky crying.' They believe that in the realms above is a horrible giant, whose wife has a violent and uncertain temper. When they quarrel the echo of his voice comes in long, rolling notes from the clouds. If he is very angry he throws his hatchet at his unruly spouse, and when this ponderous weapon strikes the floor of heaven the thunderbolt falls through and comes to earth.

"Falling stars are accounted for by the fact that the angels occasionally indulge in torch throwing at one another. When these same beings all insist upon getting into the bath at once the water splashes over the side, and it rains. The winds that sigh in the night are the voices of babies that have lost their way in their travels to the land beyond the grave.

"When a Siamese dies he is not buried, but his corpse, fully dressed and then wrapped in a winding sheet, is placed in a sitting posture in a copper urn. A tube is placed in his mouth, and through this a mixture of quicksilver and honey is poured into the body. In this way it is kept for a long time, often for years. Eventually it is burned, and the ashes are carefully preserved. The souls of those whose bones at least are not burned are supposed to become slaves of a horrid taskmaster with a head like a dog, a human body and the temper of a fiend. He sits for all time with his feet in the fires of hell, and it is the duty of his slaves to keep these fires from growing too hot. To do this they must carry water in open wicker baskets through all eternity."

ENGINE ROOM HEROES.

Wonderful and Perilous Feats That Are Performed at Sea.

Nobody who has not been to sea can imagine all the things that can happen to a ship's machinery nor properly estimate the cleverness and ingenuity used up in repairs. The youth who leaves his shop full of wonderful and costly machines has another complete education waiting for him at sea in the wonderful things that can be accomplished in time with a plain, ordinary hammer and chisel, a rather wornout file and a great deal of ingenuity. I should like to have been aboard that steamer disabled in the Red sea where they took a boat davit, straightened it out in a rivet forge, made a new boiler feed pump piston rod out of it and went on again, or, better still, on the ship that lost a propeller and the end of her tail shaft off the west coast of Africa, to replace which they were obliged to move her cargo, pump her forward compartments full to sink her bow and raise her stern out of water, drag the broken shaft, several tons in weight, out through the long alley (too low and cramped to stand up in), plug up the hole behind it, drag in the spare shaft and couple it up and lower the new propeller down over the stern, all while she kicked and wallowed in a heavy sea, and finally had to lower the chief engineer over after the propeller, where he sat tied to a flimsy staging making all fast and secure while the vessel jounced him up and down in the sea till he bled at the nose and ears and the crew kept the sharks at bay with pistols and boat hooks to prevent them from eating him up before he finished the job. That was seventy-two hours in which the young and aspiring engineer might learn a host of valuable and interesting things. — Benjamin Brooks in Scribner's.

A Horse's Strength.

The average weight of a horse is 1,000 pounds; his strength is equivalent to that of five men. In a horse mill moving at three feet per second, track twenty-five feet diameter, he exerts with the machine the power of four and a half horses. The greatest amount a horse can pull in a horizontal line is 900 pounds, but he can only do this momentarily; in continued exertion probably half of this is the limit.

The Sacred Plants of the Druids.

The Druids held many plants sacred, as, for instance, vervain, selago, mistletoe, and among trees the oak and the rowan. There is, I think, no serious doubt as to the identity of any of these except the second (selago), which is generally thought to be the club moss. Oak mistletoe is certainly rare, and that may have been the reason why it had an especially sacred character, but it does exist.

How to Keep Milk Sweet.

A tiny pinch of carbonate of soda or salt put into the milk as soon as it arrives will help to prevent it from turning sour, and if it seems inclined to turn and is slowly heated to nearly boiling point and a pinch of carbonate of soda then stirred in the sourness will disappear. Some people also add a tiny pinch of sugar.

How to Freshen Carpets.

The carpet will look better if after sweeping it is well rubbed with a cloth wrung out of ammonia and water, one tablespoonful to two quarts of water. Turn and rinse the cloth frequently and change the water when dirty.

How to Remove Paint From Glass.

Splashes of paint on glass if left for any time will become hard. To remove them take boiling water and in it dissolve a lump of soda, a piece about the size of an egg to a pint of water. Wet a cloth or piece of flannel in this and rub the marks, when they will be found to come off quite easily.

LED THE PLOTTERS.

Colonel Maschin and His Part in Servia's Tragedy.

One odd phase of the recent Servian tragedy is the fact that the leader of the assassins of King Alexander and Queen Draga was a brother-in-law of the ill fated queen, whose [illegible] ambition finally led her on to her [illegible]. The name of this chief conspirator against the Obrenovitch dynasty is Alexander Maschin, who became the implacable enemy of Queen Draga when she was still plain Draga Maschin, wife of his brother. As soon as Draga, after years of scheming, won[illegible] the affections of the young king and became his queen in defiance of [illegible] sentiment in Servia, she speedily brought about the downfall of her old enemy. Colonel Maschin lost all his appointments, was looked upon with suspicion and disfavor by King Alexander and was in disgrace despite the fact that he still held rank in the Servian army.

Queen Draga was a good hater and a dangerous enemy, but she seems to have more than met her match in the person of Maschin. In revenge for the slights that had been put upon him he seems to have used all his influence to inflame his brother officers against the royal couple, who were none too popular already, and when the conspiracy against them was organized he was its chief. On the night of June 10 he gave his final instructions to the plotters at a tavern named the Servian Crown and then led them to the palace, where, it is said, he even took a personal part in the butchery of the king and queen. When the couple concealed themselves it was Colonel Maschin who searched for them with such persistence that they were finally discovered and dispatched in the secret room to which they had fled.

Colonel Maschin is a veteran of both the Servian army and diplomatic corps. He served with distinction in the army, was military attache at Vienna and also served as Servian minister at an unimportant post. He is now minister of public works under King Peter Karageorgevitch and was a conspicuous figure at the welcome accorded the new king when he reached Belgrade recently.

SUMMER DRINKS.

How to Make a Number of Refreshing Beverages.

With the warm, thirsty days we begin to look for something long and wet to cut out the dust in our throats. Summer drinks are always a perplexing problem. All alcoholic drinks should be avoided, and to find something to take the place of cold water is not always easy. The New York American publishes the following recipes for making summer drinks:

The following is easily and quickly made: Into a large glass put the unbeaten whites of two eggs, juice of one lemon or two oranges, small cup of crushed ice and sugar to taste. Put in tin shaker and shake until light. Serve in a smaller glass.

Another good drink is made by grating a pineapple in a saucepan; pour over enough boiling water to cover it; let it steep on back of stove for five or six hours, then strain, sweeten to taste. Half freeze this; nothing better on a hot day.

A most refreshing drink is made as follows: To one quart of iced tea add a pint of apollinaris water, the juice of three lemons, juice of two oranges several slices of orange, strawberries and shredded pineapple. Then sweeten to taste and serve very cold.

A good champagne cider: Put two teaspoonfuls of powdered carbonate of soda and two ounces of white sugar in a pitcher and pour over it a quart of sharp cider. The cider should be on ice before using.

A cooling drink which should be used sparingly is made by mixing and dissolving a pint of vinegar, two pounds of strained honey and three quarts of ice water.

A drink for sick or well is the yolk of an egg, one tablespoonful of sugar, [illegible] drops of vanilla, one-half cup of water. Beat and add a few pieces of chopped ice; also the white of an egg beaten to a froth.

An inexpensive and refreshing drink is made as follows: Half gallon of water, one tablespoonful of cinnamon, half wineglass of vinegar. Sweeten to taste.

How to Clean Copper.

Half a lemon dipped in salt will clean copper beautifully, and the best part of it is that a lemon from which the juice has been squeezed does just as well as a freshly cut one. After rubbing with the lemon and salt rinse the copper in clean hot water and dry and polish with a clean soft cloth.

How to Make Cold Cream.

One ounce of spermaceti, a half ounce of pure wax, a quarter pint of oil of sweet almonds and a dram of rosewater. Crush the spermaceti and the wax and put them, with the other ingredients, into a jar set in boiling water. Stir gently until the wax and spermaceti are melted. Then pour into a thick basin or mortar to get cold. When quite cold, stir the mixture gently with the pestle, beginning at the surface and gradually working to the bottom. When the ingredients are thoroughly incorporated, add six drops of essence of roses, then stir and heat the mixture until perfectly white. This is not only a good cold cream, but it is a remedy for irritating skin affections.

How to Clean Panama Hats.

To clean panama hats brush them well to remove every particle of dust and cover them with a paste made of dampened corn meal. Leave this on overnight and in the morning brush it off. When the hat is dry sponge it with peroxide of hydrogen and dry in the hot sunshine.

How to Keep Mold From Jam.

Have ready the covers and as you fill each jar cover at once while boiling hot. This will make them perfectly air tight. Jam, jellies and marmalade made up in this way will keep two or even three years.

How to Care For Jewels.

People who have jewels should remember that if turquoises are wetted they are apt to lose color. Pearls should be exposed to light and air as much as possible, but not to damp, says Home Notes. Opals must never be exposed to great heat or they may crack and fall from their setting. Don't forget this when near the fire if you happen to wear an opal ring.

Prosperity leads often to ambition, and ambition to disappointment.

COW BELLS.

Scarlet, purple, orange light
Fades to palest green:
Farm house windows grow less bright
Where the glare has been.
Dusky lie the fields about.
And, faintly heard again,
Far-off, thro' the mist and dew,
Cow-bells down the lane,
Tinkle, tinkle, clink-a-clink,
Cow-bells down the lane.

Swallows sheep on circling wings,
Winds have chilly grown:
And the cricket shriller sings;
Trees look strange and lone.
Nearer, clearer, past the woods,
A silvery refrain.
Winding slowly up the hill,
Cow-bells down the lane,
Tinkle, tinkle, clink-a-clink,
Cow-bells down the lane.

Bess and Brindle, Snowflake, Jet,
Breaths like new-mown hay,
Dewy noses, trickling wet,
Barnward wend their way.
One by one, faint, pearly stars
Watch the twilight's wane.
And the put-up bars shut out
Cow-bells down the lane.
Tinkle, tinkle, clink-a-clink,
Cow-bells down the lane.

SIMEON, THE BEAR AND THE SHEEP

Case of a Man Who Insisted on Running Against Nature.

"UNCLE JASE sot a minute," said the man from the Knob country, "and then he says to the Squire, sort of as a clincher:

"'Squire,' says he, 'happens that Simeon was an ancestor o' mine,' he says, 'and not so long back, either,' he says, 'and it's a leetle queer, seems to me,' he says, 'that I never heerd of a bear makin' him out to be a sheep thief,' he says.

"First place, I says to the Squire then, and I'd say it to him now:

"'Squire,' I says, 'you hadn't ought to done it! S'pose you have got idees about Uncle Jase?' I says. 'S'pose one o' them idees is that no matter what folks thinks as to the leetle statement Paul mede in his haste about mankind in gineral, they don't hesitate a minute to say that if it don't hit Uncle Jase plumb as a shot in the bullseye, then the lightnin' never bit a barn?' I says. 'There's such a thing as goin' a lettle too fur, Squire,' I says, 'and you hadn't ought to done it!' I says.

"But the Squire he jest only grinned.

"Uncle Jase is from the Rocky Hill deestrict, and he's a feller-citizen that most folks has toler'ble strong idees about, particularly the Squire, and Uncle Jase had come in this time and told about Evander havin' snuck up onto a bear that was asleep and got a rope around it before it could wake up and clutch him; and, more than that, had yanked the critter, in spite of itself, all the way into his clearin', where he had it tied to a pole, safe and sound, that very minute. Then the Squire had said to Uncle Jase, jest as if he didn't have no more doubt about that bear than he did that he was settin' there, that Evander had run his head slam ag'in natur', and he'd better keep his eye peeled.

"'If there's one thing that a bear won't never forgive nor fergit,' says the Squire, shakin' his head solemn at Uncle Jase, and lookin' fer all the world as if this doin's of Evander was worryin' him like all-possessed, 'it's bein' ketched and done fer while it's asleep, 'cause then you're runnin' slam ag'in natur',' he says. 'Natur' is wonderful,' he says, 'and you can't beat her. And there ain't nothin' she's so wonderful in as she is in bears,' he says.

"'If you sneak on to a bear when it's asleep and git the best of it,' says the Squire, 'look out! You're tryin' to beat natur', and natur' won't have it!' he says. 'If you ketch a bear in that way, it's bound to have it in for you and git even, and to make it a sorry day for you when you done it. There ain't nothin' natur' is so wonderful in as she is in bears, and Evander wants to keep his eye peeled,' says the Squire.

"Then Uncle Jase sticks up his nose and says: 'Poof.'

"'Jest exac'ly what poor onfortunit Simeon up and says to my gran'father!' says the Squire, holdin' up his hands. 'And I rather calc'late he lived to see the day he was sorry, poor feller!' says he. 'Simeon had snuck up onto a sleepin' bear jest like Evander has been doin', and got a rope onto it and yanked it home and tied it to a pole.

"'My gran'father says to Simeon,' says the squire, 'that he had run his head slam ag'in natur', so he had, and that if he didn't put a ball into the bear and end its future right there, he'd find sorrow and tribulation ahead of him worse than rassalin' with a sawmill; but Simeon only jest turned up his nose and says: "Poof!"

"'My gran'father,' says the Squire, 'knowed bears from A to izzard, and how wonderful natur' was into 'em, and he went away sorrowin', 'cause he knowed there was a day o' reckonin' for Simeon if he didn't kill that bear he had snuck up and ketched when it was sleepin'. And natur' is natur' now and bears is bears jest the same as they was then,' says the Squire. 'I feel sorry for Evander,' he says.

"Then Uncle Jase he says 'Poof!' ag'in as scornful as Sam Hill; and the Squire he shook his head and says: 'Too bad! Too bad!'

"'As fer Simeon,' says the Squire, 'he wa'n't partic'lar popl'ar in the deestric', that's so, but he hadn't never done nothin' wrong as anybody knowed on. Yit he had ways, and folks didn't care much fer him. Then along about that time some one took to stealin' sheep around there most tremendous. Who was doin' of it nobody couldn't git no idee.

"'One day,' says the Squire, 'my gran'father was talkin' to Simeon, and he says to Simeon that it'd go hard with the sheep stealers if they was ever ketched. It'd be state's prison, sure as cats, he says.

"'The bear that Simeon had ketched asleep was layin' there by its pole, pretendin' to be snoozin,' but when my gran'father spoke them words it opened its eyes and looked up sudden and queer. Then it got up and took to thinkin' like, and kep' turnin' its eyes on Simeon, and gran'father says to Simeon ag'in to beware o' that bear; but Simeon jest says: 'Poof!'

"'Next day,' says the Squire, 'gran'father went away on a three weeks' raftin' trip, and the day after that young Steve, who lived next farm to Simeon, got up early and found three of his sheep gone. But the thief had left such a trail that Steve follered it till it stopped, and then he almost kerflummixed, he was so astounded.

"'But he went right off,' says the Squire, 'and woke up the justice of the peace, and told him he wanted a warrant for the sheep thief; and when young Steve told him who it was he 'most fell in a fit. Then Steve routed out the constable, and where do you think he led him? Straight to Simeon's!

"'First,' says the Squire, 'they went to the milk house. There hung young Steve's three sheep. And they were skinned! Then they went to the barn. There laid the pelts off o' them sheep, on the barn floor.

"That was all they wanted. They got Simeon up, served the warrant and marched him off in spite of all he could say. 'Young Steve said afterward,' says the Squire, 'that he see the bear dancin' around the pole, and huggin' itself as if it was jest about bustin' with joy or somethin', but Steve didn't think nothin' about it, bears bein' queer.'

"The Squire went on and told Uncle Jase how the upshot of it all was that the day his grandfather got back from his three weeks' raftin' trip he went over to Simons to see how him and the bear was gittin' along, the Squire's grandfather, of course, not havin' heerd anything about Simeon bein' took up for sheep stealin', and there was the bear layin' down by the pole, ponderin' like, when along comes young Steve with the news from the county seat, and he hollers out:

"'Hooray! Simeon gits three years in jail! Hooray!'

"'With that,' says the Squire, 'the bear jumped up and danced and hugged itself, and almost hollered hooray, too.'

"When the Squire's grandfather heerd all about it, he up and says:

"'I warned him! I warned him ag'in the bear, but he poofed at me! The bear stole them sheep and put it on to Simeon, sure as guns!'

"'Then,' says the Squire, 'the bear quit huggin' itself, and laid down and looked skeert and sneakin'. But there wouldn't nobody else believe that the bear had done it, and the unfortunate man that poofed at my ancestor, who knowed bears from A to izzard, and that scoffed at Natur', not knowin' she was so wonderful in bears that a bear ketched asleep was bound to git even with its ketcher, even if it had to make him out a sheep thief—that unfortunate man had to serve his time. Uncle Jase,' says the Squire, 'the best thing you can do is to send Evander warnin'.'

"Uncle Jase he sot a spell, and then he says to the Squire, sort o' as a clincher:

"'Squire,' he says, 'happens that Simeon was an ancestor o' mine,' he says, 'and not so long back, neither,' he says, 'and it's a little queer, seems to me,' he says, 'that I never heerd of a bear makin' of him out to be a sheep thief!' says he.

"'What!' says the Squire, jest as if he was s'prised more than he could say. 'Simeon an ancestor o' your'n?' he says. 'Well—well—well!' he says. 'Kin it be, then,' says he, 'that the bear didn't steal them sheep after all?' says he.

"And I says to the Squire then, and I'd say it to him now:

"'Squire,' I says, 'you hadn't ought to done it!'

"But the Squire he jest only grinned."

PATENTS FLYING MACHINE.

South Dakotan Employs Balloon Supporting Frame Driven by Motor Power.

Isaac I. Morris, of Melletto, S. D., has been granted a patent for a flying machine. It is his own invention. It is alleged that the machine flies and is controlled with ease. The inventor had trouble to satisfy the examiners that the invention would work. In his application Mr. Morris says:

"A balloon-supported frame is employed, provided with a motive power, including means for lifting and means for driving. It also carries a steering device and wheels to support the structure when on the ground.

"Another purpose is to provide a novel form of rotary wings used in connection with fixed canopy wings of like construction, all the wings being provided with automatically operating valves, the valves of the rotary wings opening at the upper strokes and closing at their downward strokes, while the valves of the fixed canopy wings operate simultaneously with the rotary wings, but reversely, the valves of the canopy wings are closed with their downward and lifting motion and closing when the side wings are on their up stroke to maintain an elevation acquired by the side wings during their downward stroke."

AT HOME IN A HACK.

Good Listener Had No Thrilling Tales to Relate, But He Made a Hit.

President Roosevelt, John Borroughs, John Muir, one or two statesmen and a couple of cowboys were sitting around a campfire in the west swapping anecdotes, relates an exchange. Mr. Muir told of an encounter with a polar bear in the Artic circle. Mr. Burroughs had had several exciting experiences. One of the statesmen had participated in a whale hunt. Both cowboys had passed through strenuous moments. The president's reminiscences included an encounter with a mountain lion and a conflict with a grizzly. One of the statesmen in the party, a man of much ability, vouchsafed no stories. "Come," said the president, "tell us some of your experiences." "Mr. President and friends," replied the lawmaker, "there are no thrilling natural history chapters in my career. Lions, Indians, bears and wild horses have never come across my path. In fact, I have never been astride a horse of any description in my life, but," he added, solemnly, "I am simply out of sight in a hack!"

Boiled It Down.

An amusing story is told of the editor of a go-ahead London evening newspaper, who, in the eternal rushing to press to get ahead of the opposition, was constantly impressing upon his reporters the necessity for condensing all news.

A terrific boiler explosion had taken place on board a big ship lying at Portsmouth.

"Get down there as hard as you can," he said to one of his men. "If you catch the 11:40 from London bridge you'll be there soon after two and can just wire us something for the fifth edition, but boil it down."

And the reporter went. Soon after two o'clock that afternoon they got a wire from him.

"I thought that high church was high church, and that ended it."

More Cause for Divorce.

"The general run of allegation in divorce proceedings is commonplace, but sometimes we get a case in which the charges are really amusing," remarked a man who is well known as a member of the bar. "Some time ago," he continued, "a neat little woman called at my office and inquired as to how to go about instituting a suit for divorce against her husband. I gave her the necessary information and she placed the case in my hands. The first charge that she made against her spouse was that 'He refused to kneel down and say his prayers the first night we were married, the brute!'"—Chicago Chronicle.

"I Found It So."

McCormick, Ill., Sept. 28th.—Miss Ethel Bradshaw, of this place, has written a letter which is remarkable for the character of the statements it contains. As her letter will be read with interest, and probably with profit by many women, it has been thought advisable to publish it in part. Among other things Miss Bradshaw says:—

"I had Kidney Trouble with the various unpleasant symptoms which always come with that disease, and I have found a cure. I would strongly advise all who may be suffering with any form of Kidney Complaint to use Dodd's Kidney Pills, a remedy which I have found to be entirely satisfactory.

"This remedy is within the reach of all and is all that it is recommended to be. I found it so, and I therefore feel it my duty to tell others about it."

Dr. Dunaway, of Benton, Ill., uses Dodd's Kidney Pills in his regular practice, and says they are the best medicine for Kidney Troubles. He claims they will cure Diabetes in the last stages.

TOOK RISK IN COUGHING.

Barber Used to Shaving Colorado Consumptives Always Gave Warning.

The man in the chair coughed suddenly and unexpectedly, states the Philadelphia Record. "Don't do that again," exclaimed the barber, with an unwarranted display of irritation. The man in the chair resented in somewhat lurid language this restriction of his personal liberty and intimated that he would cough whenever he felt like it. "All right, then, cough your head off, but don't blame me if I cut you," returned the barber. There was no more coughing, however, and the man in the chair made his escape without any injury. But, as he paid his check at the desk, he remarked to the boss barber:

"Say, you want to give some nerve tonic to the fellow who just shaved me."

"Oh, don't mind him," replied the boss. "He's from Colorado and he's used to shaving consumptives. He was telling me the other day that he's been in the business for over 20 years and has shaved everything from a 16-year-old boy to an octogenarian drunkard, but his nerve went back on him when he drifted into Colorado Springs and started to shave the consumptives who hang out there. Ever since then a man with a cough gives him cold chills. Out there, he tells me, not a day goes by that some 'lunger' doesn't get a gash in his throat while being shaved."

Cheap Excursion to the South.

On Oct. 20th the Kansas City Southern Ry. (Port Arthur Route) will run a cheap excursion from Kansas City and all stations in Missouri and Kansas to Lake Charles, Shreveport, Beaumont and Port Arthur. The rate for the round trip will be $15, limited to 21 days from date of sale, good to stop over on going trip at all points en route, provided final destination is reached inside of 15 days from date of sale. This exceptionally low rate, together with liberal stopover privileges allowed, should insure a great crowd, especially in view of the fact that this is the most delightful season of the year to visit the Southland. Similar low rates will probably be placed in effect from points north and east of Kansas City: Ask your ticket agent.

WORN OUT, DRAGGED OUT,

Are Most Women in Summer. —Pe-ru-na is a Tonic of Efficiency.

Mrs. Tressie Nelson.

Mrs. Tressie Nelson, 422 Broad St., Nashville, Tenn., writes:

"As Peruna has done me a world of good, I feel in duty bound to tell of it, in hopes that it may meet the eye of some woman who has suffered as I have.

"For five years I really did not know what a perfectly well day was, and if I did not have headache, I had backache or a pain somewhere and really life was not worth the effort I made to keep going.

"A good friend advised me to use Peruna and I was glad to try anything, and I am very pleased to say that six bottles made a new woman of me and I have no more pains and life looks bright again."—Mrs. Tressie Nelson.

JOSEPHINE MORRIS, 236 Carroll St., Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:

"Peruna is a fine medicine to take any time of the year, but I have found it especially helpful to withstand the wear and tear of the hot weather. I have taken it now for two summers and feel that it has kept my system free from malaria, and also kept me from having that worn-out, dragged out look which so many women have.

"I therefore have no hesitancy in saying that I think it is the finest tonic in the world."—Josephine Morris.

Peruna is frequently used as a mitigation of the effects of hot weather. What a bath is to the skin, Peruna is to the mucous membranes. Bathing keeps the skin healthy, Peruna makes the mucous membranes clean and healthy. With the skin and mucous membranes in good working order, hot weather can be withstood with very little suffering.

Frequent bathing with an occasional use of Peruna is sure to mitigate the horrors of hot weather. Many ladies have discovered that the depression of hot weather and the rigors they have been in the habit of attributing to malaria, quickly disappear when they use Peruna. This is why Peruna is so popular with them. Peruna provides clean mucous membranes, and the clean mucous membranes do the rest.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

HAVOC OF TORNADO.

The Village of St. Charles is Nearly Wiped out of Existence by Terrific Storm.

Seven People are Killed, a Number Injured. The Property Loss Very Large.

Winona, Minn., Oct. 5.—Seven people dead and twenty-three injured, over fifty buildings in ruins and a property loss of at least $200,000 is the result of a tornado which swept St. Charles Saturday afternoon about 2:30 o'clock.

The dead are: John Ebens, Sr., Wm. Ebens, Jr., Will Adams, Oscar Crittenden, George Jessen, Ed. Murphy and Ed. Peters, Dover, Minn.

St. Charles is a village of 1,500 inhabitants on the western boundary of Winona county, and is one of the oldest settlements in the state.

The tornado was formed by the union of two storm clouds over the southern limits of the village and with an awful roar swept down and through the center of the town.

In less than three minutes every building in the center of the town was either totally demolished or badly damaged.

The entire main street of the town was literally wiped out, hardly a business place left standing.

The country people had gathered in large numbers in the main street to do their customary shopping. At 2:30 the storm cloud was seen approaching and there was an immediate scramble for places of safety.

The residences further back from the business centre were struck and many of them blown away.

Utter confusion reigned in the town. The streets were filled with wreckage of buildings, trees and farm buildings which were blown through the air.

The horror of the affair completely paralyzed action for a time on the part of the citizens who stood about awe-stricken at the awful devastation caused by the elements.

It was some time before the crews began to clear away the debris, which was feared might cover many a sickening sight.

Word was at once sent to Winona for doctors and nurses. The Northwestern furnished a special train and a dozen doctors and four trained nurses departed for the scene.

Among the buildings wrecked were the Central school building, the Chicago Great Western depot, the Catholic church, Parrott's wagon works, Spencer's, Ebben's and Logan's saloons, Hendee & Sivley's wagon factory, St. Charles Furniture House and stock, L. Sheridan's jewelry store, Sorenson's store, Stevenson's elevators and Snell's elevator.

Almost every building of the main street had its front torn off and was partly or wholly unroofed. Part of the high school was torn away, the Congregational church and big livery stable unroofed, opera house greatly damaged, and the new flour mill damaged to the extent of $10,000.

There was not a dollar of tornado insurance on a building destroyed.

The storm came upon the town with such suddenness that it was filling the air with the debris of demolished buildings before the citizens fully realized the nature of the calamity.

W. O. Crittenden, a farmer, got in his wagon to drive home. He had a plow in the wagon. The wind lifted the plow and drove the share through his neck, almost severing his head. Wm. Mitchell had his hand on Crittenden's shoulder when the latter was killed, but Mitchell escaped.

Mr. Crittenden was afflicted with cancer of the stomach. He had just consulted a doctor and was told that he could not live.

In Spencer's saloon, young Spencer jumped under a billiard table and was unhurt, although the saloon was a total wreck. Negro Cal crawled out from under the ruins unhurt.

Two miles northeast of St. Charles the storm struck two farms owned by Johnson and Pike. Johnson's young daughter was seriously crushed and Pike's son was killed.

Many farm buildings were badly damaged and all those owned by John Simons at Altura were destroyed. The total damage cannot be estimated.

The storm started at St. Charles, from there proceeded through Bethan, Altura, Rolling Stone and across the river into Wisconsin. It died out after passing Independence.

When the big furniture store fell, Mr. Beckway, manager, struck a falling wall. His skull was crushed and he cannot live. The store, two-story building and basement, is a total loss with the stock.

At the depot which was demolished one freight car was destroyed and one torn from the truck.

Mrs. C. Sorenson was in the building when it collapsed. The front was torn out and the building fell into the street. She walked out on the street unhurt. The same circumstances happened to Mrs. L. Sheridan when that building collapsed.

There are 106,898 dogs in Minnesota, according to the assessment rolls of the counties, and their value for purposes of taxation has been determined by the state board of equalization is $5 per dog.

Standing in the pulpit of the Thirteenth Avenue Methodist church, Minneapolis, Rev. Truman F. Allen was suddenly stricken with apoplexy. He was taken to his home, 926 Thirteenth avenue S, and died three hours afterwards.

William Ward, colored, and Daniel Evans, white, both 6 feet 4, and ex-volunteers in the army of the Philippines, met in Minneapolis, got drunk and stole some clothing. Ward confessed and drew two years and a jury convicted Evans, so they will meet again at Stillwater.

President Charles S. Mellen of the Northern Pacific announced that his resignation has been presented to the directors of the system. He will be elected president of the New York, New Haven & Hartford at a meeting of the directors Oct. 21.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Had Much Wealth.

Several days ago James Collins a railroad laborer, went into a saloon run by J. Johnson, in Minneapolis and left a package with Johnson, which Collins said contained a large sum of money. He told Johnson that he was a heavy drinker and was afraid that he might die, and that if he did not show up for the money to notify Mrs. J. W. Hearne of Stillwater.

Johnson took the package, thinking the man was slightly demented, but was willing to humor him.

Saturday night a man claiming to be J. W. Hearne appeared at the central police station and wanted an officer to go with him to a saloon to witness the payment of a certain sum of money to him by the saloonkeeper.

A man accompanied Hearne, and in his presence Johnson handed over a package containing $3,600 to Hearne.

Sunday morning Collins died of delirium tremens in the city hospital. It is not known where he accumulated such a sum of money.

Minnesota's Oldest Church.

The fiftieth anniversary of the building of the St. Peter's church at Mendota was celebrated with due ceremony. It is the first permanent church erected in what is now Minnesota. Replete with historic memories, it recalls the days when Mendota was the metropolis of the Northwest, and St. Paul the suburb. Old settlers, some of them among the builders of the historic old church, were present at the ceremonies, their faces beaming with pride at the achievements commemorated.

It was a great day for Mendota. The members of the congregation gathered from miles around. The picturesque old village was enlivened by the crowds which thronged about the old church. Several of the former pastors of the church were there. A dozen neighboring priests assisted Mgr. Oster, the pastor, in the celebration of an event which has a unique significance to the Catholics of Minnesota and particularly of the region which was once included in the parish of St. Peters.

Found Dead.

The mystery surrounding the disappearance of Mrs. N. C. Edridge, of Minneapolis, which puzzled the police and her friends for several weeks, was cleared away recently, when the skeleton of the woman was found lying in the woods near Lakewood cemetery. She had evidently been dead for some time, as the flesh had fallen off the bones and the skull had been disconnected from the trunk. Circumstances seem to indicate that she died from exposure and exhaustion, but the police will thoroughly investigate certain ugly rumors before the case is dropped.

Will Talk About Bugs.

F. L. Washburn, state entomologist, is preparing to hold a series of practical talks on Minnesota insects in different localities during the fall and winter to discuss with farmers the best means of combating such pests as chinch bugs and hessian fly, with which those localities are troubled. These talks will be illustrated with specimens or pictures, or both. Farmers desiring a meeting of this kind are invited to correspond with the entomologist of the experiment station at St. Anthony Park.

Increased Valuation.

A total increase of $3,275,878 in the assessed valuation of public franchise companies was made by the state board of equalization by a unanimous vote. Of this amount $2,855,443 was added to the valuation of the Twin City Rapid Transit company, $140,000 to the Duluth-Superior Traction company, $100,000 to the St. Paul Gas Light company, $92,570 to the Minneapolis General Electric company, and $87,865 to the Minneapolis Gas Light company.

Poisoned by Cat's Bite.

Surprising symptoms of hydrophobia are said to have been exhibited by an 11-year-old boy who was taken through St. Paul for treatment at the Pasteur Institute, Chicago. The boy is Charles Upton, son of Amos Upton, of Morris. Charles was bitten by a cat several weeks ago. He is said to have begun to "me-ow," and to spit and howl like a cat. These symptoms, displayed at the union depot in St. Paul, alarmed travelers.

Electrocuted.

While attempting to save himself from falling off the roof of Liidertafel hall at St. Paul, on which he was working, Alfred Steinhoff, a tinner, caught hold of one of the feed wires and was instantly killed by the terrible shock he received. Oscar Kuntze also narrowly escaped electrocution while trying to rescue his companion. He was rendered unconscious and his right hand and arm were burned almost to a crisp. He will recover.

News in Brief.

The cool fall weather is unfavorable for the blossoming of gubernational candidates, but they are in the hud.

It is predicated that some of the early gubernational blossoms will get niped in the bud, but look out for the early bird and see him catch the "gub".

The Ortonville Herald-Star, is not among our exchanges, but it must be a warm one, when its editor can spring a six liner that it takes the Northfield News, (Joel P. Heatwole's paper) two and onehalf colums to answer.

The Crookston Journal is devoting a good deal of space to advertising "hold ups", in East Grand Forks. This may be a good plan to coax the harvest hands to Crookston to spend their summer wages, yet it looks bad to eastern people, that are contemplating coming to Polk County.

ROOSEVELT IS RIGHT.

In the employment and dismissal of men in the government service, I can no more recognize the fact that a man does, or does not belong to a union as being for or aginst him than I can recognize the fact that he is a protestant or a catholic. A jew or a gentile as being for or against him. —THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

The above is the explanation of president Roosevelt to the labor unions who demanded the discharge of Miller a book binder in the employ of the government because he was not a member of the book binders union.

It is a plain and concise statement from a plain man and rings of the true American sentiment in every line, and certainly could not offend any one.

Labor unions are all-right as long as they advocate and promote the best interest of their members, but they take a step on dangerous ground when they attempt to dictate who shall, or shall not be employed by this government.

President Roosevelt will be indorsed by the masses of the people for his action on this question, and we beleive that the leaders of organized labor will take the right view of his action, when they have fully considered it from the view of Americn citizins.

WHO WON THE RACE?

Lipton in an interview made the remark: "The smartest sailors I ever saw in my life are sailing the Reliance." Sir Thomas was corect, as the result proved. As compared with the crew of Shamrock 111, they were quicker and more enteligent, and quickness and intelligence in obaying orders count for success in a race. They were men who anticipated Cap. Barrs orders and were ready to obey them before they were given. In other words they were experts in navigation specielties, and each man was selected for special work. Capt. Wringer's sailors were not so quick because they did not antisipate orders.

Reliance is a Yankee boat. It was built at Bristol by Herreshoff, who in spite of his name is a Yankee born in Bristol. But Reliance did not have a Yankee crew. There was not an American on board of it nor a person born in America. Its captain is a Scotchman, who has taken out his first papers. The first second and third mates are Norwegins. Of its crew of forty-two men thirty-seven are unnaturglized and two naturalized Norwegin, two unnaturalized Sweds, and one unnaturlized Dane. Reliance therefore, was a Yankee boat mnaged by a Scotch-American captain and and a Scandinaven crew. * * * * It is surprising that Sir Thomas Lipton, with a knowledge of these desendants of the Vikings on the water, has not manned one of his Shamrocks with Norwegins instead of Britishers, for they are the men who successfully maintain the blue blue ribbon of the seas.—Ex.

Why This Feverish Haste?

Now there is talk of three-day ships across the Atlantic. Why should reasonable human beings be wildly impatient to be thrust from one side of the ocean to the other in the amazingly short time of seventy-two hours? What will they gain? Will they hope in time to excel on the sea the pace of the fastest electric engines and the swiftest automobiles on land.

Fine Business Woman.

Mrs. Mary Coggins of California is a successful woman lumber dealer. She has established a box factory, of which one of her sons is general manager, while she signs the checks, pays off the employes and holds the purse strings generally. Mrs. Coggins also helps in the management of two sawmills and many thousands of acres of timber land.

Coming to Us.

The government of Honduras has decided to have its postage stamps and postal cards engraved abroad this year and the work is to be done in the United States, according to a report from Consul W. E. Alger of Puerto Cortez. The government has also arranged for a supply of silver coin to be minted in Philadelphia.

Trainer of Wild Beasts.

A New Jersey man claims to have an educated alligator ten feet long who will eat from the same plate with the household cat without trying to swallow either the cat or the plate, and now if the alligator trainer will whirl in and train some of those New Jersey trusts to eat from the same dish as the public without devouring the public he will be a national benefactor.

Chance for Girl Bachelors.

It is hard enough to be a good minister, according to Rev. W. Gehman, to be a good minister's wife you must not have too much tongue, must love your husband and his work, must not be jealous or worldly or lazy or untidy, must be economical, handy, love children, be a good housekeeper, vocalist and evangelist. Engagements are ready for girls answering the description.

CARE OF CLOTHES.

How to Keep Your Wearing Apparel In Good Condition.

For taking spots out of cloth it is best to have at hand; the necessary materials, as it is much easier to remove spots when they are new than when they become old and dry. Benzine, gasoline and naphtha are all good. A little piece of plain white flannel or some very fast dye cloth is best to apply this with, or in the absence of this you might use an old sponge.

The care of gloves may be best subserved by the observance of a few simple rules, says Haberdasher. Keep them in tissue paper. Don't pull them out of shape. It is no test of quality and spoils their beauty.

Glove powder freely used is the price of a pair of gloves in many cases. A perspiring hand forced into a dry glove—often one or two sizes too small—will usually come out the least injured, and the blame will be as unfair as the treatment.

If you send your clothes out to be done up be sure that you select a hand laundry. Machine work and acids make short work of fine clothes. Shirts, collors and cuffs should be done up without gloss. Insist on the domestic finish. Have your poke and wing collars ironed flat, not curled.

All clothing should be carefully hung up, and if you will study your closet and use the modern appliances, which are easily procured, you can keep a great deal of clothing in good condition in a very small space. The cheap twisted wire coat racks are good enough. On these put the waistcoat, and then over the waistcoat put the coat. There are also patent trousers hangers which keep the trousers pressed in shape, but it is much easier to fold your trousers properly and lay them in the bottom of your closet or in a long drawer.

A piece of paper should be put between each pair of trousers, and it will not hurt them if they have to be folded once. In light weight suitings, such as homespuns and flannels, it is much better to lay the trousers out flat in a drawer than to hang them up. All clothing should be carefully brushed and kept as free from dust as possible.

How to Make Orange Omelet.

Beat three eggs, add three tablespoonfuls of orange juice and two teaspoonfuls of powdered sugar, pour into a buttered frying pan, cook slowly until a crust is formed, fold in half, turn the omelet on a hot platter, sprinkle thickly with powdered sugar, heat a poker till red hot, score the sugar, serve hot.

How to Cure Colds.

Here are five cures for a cold, says Household: First, bathe the feet in hot water and drink a pint of hot lemonade; then sponge with salt water and remain in a warm room. Second, bathe the face in very hot water every five minutes for an hour. Third, snuff up the nostrils hot salt water every three hours. Fourth, inhale ammonia or menthol. Fifth, take four hours' exercise in the open air. A ten grain dose of quinine will usually break up a cold in the beginning. Anything that will set the blood actively in circulation will do it; but, better than all, if your cold is inveterate or serious, consult your family doctor, and at once.

How to Remove Tomato Skins.

Cover the tomatoes with boiling water for half a minute and then put them in cold water until they become perfectly cold. When this has been done the skin will then come off quite easily and leave the tomato in an unbroken condition and quite firm.

THE CITY OF COLOR.

NEW YORK A PICTURE OF PLEASING CONTRASTS IN HUES.

The American Metropolis in This Respect Surpasses All the Great Monotone Tinted Capitals of the Occidental World.

New York has been written about from almost every possible point of view—architectural, commercial, political and social. Yet, so far as we know, it has never been properly appreciated for the one thing in which it surpasses all the other great capitals of the occidental world, and that is for its color. Those of us who live here all our lives or who absent ourselves for only brief and inconsiderable periods of time never know how extraordinary is the environment in which we have been placed. It is only the stranger with an artistic sense or the native who has been long away who gets the full effect of this city of ours in its unique prismatic floridity of hue such as visits no other city of its kind.

If you will think for a moment and visualize from memory the great cities of Europe as a colorist would see them you will be struck by the fact that each one is a monotone. London has the dull, dingy, smoky hue of its own November fogs, and as you pass along its miles and miles of streets, a welter of unvariegated facades and lonely chimney pots, your impression will be more and more that London is one great smudge, hideous and unrelieved beneath a sky of watery paleness which merely accentuates a little more the dingy hue of everything beneath it. Paris equally represents a monotone, a delicate gray that is neat and clean and that adds to the symmetry and harmoniousness of the whole effect, but that is seldom diversified by warmer tones. Berlin is a monotone in buff, and Rome, like Paris, for the most port, a monotone in gray.

One thinks at first of Naples as a city brilliant with the hues of the south, but a little reflection will show that it is not the city itself which can be rightly so regarded, but rather the setting of the city as one perceives it from the ship on which he enters the glorious bay or from the Capo di Posilipo. The intense blue of the sky, the emerald of the surrounding hills, the sparkle on the waters that lap its crescent shore, the huge dun slope of Vesuvius, with its golden smoke, and Capri in the distance swimming in a golden mist—these things afford an unforgettable dream of perfect coloring. But Naples itself! The place is as commonplace and dirty and depressing as Constantinople, which also from a distance cheats you into thinking it a colorist's paradise.

It is New York alone which, after delighting the eye with the beauty of its harbor, embraced by the long slopes of billowy green, fascinates the eye by the brilliancy and diversity of its color scheme. The sky is as blue as that which is arched above the Mediterranean. Its sunshine is as bright, and it is sifted down upon the city like gold dust scattered by a lavish hand. But the sky and the sunlight merely intensify the vividness of the color contrasts which are visible at every turn. Here is no convention, no conformity, no desire for harmonious effect. The snowy whiteness of marble and the clean gray of granite are everywhere intermingled with the cheerful buff or the warm, rich reds of brick. Patches of green appear at the end of every vista.

The enormous display windows of the shops are a riot of blues and yellows and pale rose and heliotrope and scarlet. Gilding catches and reflects the sunlight at every turn. Flags and streamers and multicolored awnings add to the effect, so that every street is a veritable spectrum. Throughout the whole length and breadth of the island city color abounds in flecks and splashes. It is just a bit barbaric possibly, but it is also wonderful and striking.

To the sober dullness of Madrid or Rome or London it is what the Pompeiian wall paintings are to the quiet canvases of Harpignies—not art, but instinct nevertheless with a sensuousness and a glow that stir one strangely. If you are a native of New York perhaps you never noticed this. Yet all the same it is set before you every day, and if you will only think of it the next time you go out of doors you will perceive it as a revelation and will know that whatever else New York may be it is, at any rate, a color city, and as such it is one that has no rival.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

How to Draw an Oval.

Take two stout pins and stick them firmly into the table through the sheet of paper on which you wish to draw the oval, about two inches apart. Then tie together the ends of a bit of string about eight inches long so as to form a loop, leaving two loose ends, each about an inch long. When you have done this tie the loose ends into a smaller loop which need not be larger than sufficient to admit the point of a pencil. Now place the larger loop over the two pins and, putting the point of your pencil through the smaller loop, stretch the string as far as it will go and circle all around the pins. You will find that in moving from one pin to the other the string forms an ever varying triangle and that the figure described in passing all around the pins is as perfect an oval as the most delicate instrument can produce.

AIDS TO HAPPINESS.

The Time When Help, Kindness and Sympathy Count Most.

It is during the formative period, the time when a man is seeking to get foothold, that help counts for most, when even the slightest aid is great. A few books lent to Andrew Carnegie when he was beginning his career were to him an inspiration. He has nobly repaid the loan; made posterity his debtor a millionfold by his beneficence in sprinkling libraries over the whole country. Help the saplings, the young growing trees of vigor; the mighty oaks have no need of your aid.

The heartening words should come when needed, not when they seem only hypocritic protestations or dextrous preparations for future favors. Columbus, surrounded by his mutinous crew, threatening to kill him, alone amid the crowd, had no one to stand by him, but he neared land, and riches opened before them. Then they fell at his feet, proclaimed him almost a god and said he truly was inspired from heaven. Success transfigured him; a long line of pebbly beach and a few trees made him divine. A little patience along the way, a little closer companionship, a little brotherly love in his hours of watching, waiting and hoping, would have been great balm to his soul.

It is in childhood that pleasures count most, when the slightest investment of kindness brings largest returns. Let us give the children sunlight, love, companionship, sympathy with their little troubles and worries that seem to them so great, genuine interest in their growing hopes, their vague, unproportioned dreams and yearnings. Let us put ourselves into their places, view the world through their eyes so that we may gently correct the errors of their perspective by our greater wisdom. Such trifles will make them genuinely happy, happier by far than things a thousand times greater that come too late.—From "The Power of Truth," by William George Jordan. Published by Brentano's.

Told Out of School.

The infant terrible is always with us and in making trouble runs a close race with the wagging tongue of scandal. Accompanied by her young hopeful, a woman was calling on a friend who happened to live in one of a row of houses of exactly the same appearance.

"The great objection to living in a row of houses," remarked the hostess, "is the liability of making a mistake. Do you ever have any difficulty, my dear?"

The Retort Courteous.

A young and popular member of parliament was addressing a meeting at which there was a considerable rowdy element present. Hunting on Treacherous Soil.

Snipe shooting on an Irish bog is an excellent test of a gunner's skill and enthusiasm. An experienced bog shooter if he finds himself going down throws himself flat on his side or back and at the same time throws his gun to his attendant, generally an unshod "gossoon," who rarely fails to catch it. The sensation of being bogged is very unpleasant, but if a man throws himself on his side or back there is strength enough in the peat to support his body.—Forty-five Years of Glass Eyes for Animals.

Glass eyes are now made for horses, cats and dogs, as well as for human beings. These animals use a larger eye than man, and several are ordered for them at the same time, as a new one is necessary about once in six months. The edges become roughened and produce irritation, from the acids of the secretions affecting the enamel.

Footprints in Stones.

While a road contractor at New Aberdour, Aberdeenshire, was quarrying stones for road macadamizing recently, he turned out two stones, one of which had the impression of a man's footprint, and the other that of a pear with the pedicle, both the natural size. The stones were basaltic, and the prints grayish-white silica.

The Beauty of Kindness.

Glory.

Glory is but a transient dream that gives color to a sleep bespangled with illusions of greatness; a mirage, glittering, but unsubstantial, hovering above the oasis in the desert of life at whose fountain many a weary traveler would quench his burning thirst that he may press on to grander heights. It beckons us on to where the broad light plays on countless graves of those once called great, but now forgotten, upon whose gravestone is chiseled the mocking phrase, "Sic transit gloria mundi." How often does the victor, spent and worn, look around for the laurels and the peace he has earned, only to find the bubble bursted, the colors faded.—Roanoke

Southern Europe.

A traveler writes: "I have often been struck by the ease with which people in southern Europe are amused. In Paris 100,000 people go out to Longchamps for the Grand Prix race, and half a million people go out and line the roads on their return to see them come back. In Rome at the feast of the "Divino Amore" 5,000 people go out on the Campagna to a spot where once stood a temple to Venus and hold a picnic, while 50,000 go out and line the Appian way to see them return. In Madrid this peculiarity is even more marked. On the Puerta del Sol about a thousand people stand around and do nothing outdoors, while crowds of people sit indoors or lean from balconies to watch them do it. And in Seville the idle rich sit in clubs and cafés on the Sierpes to watch the lower classes walk by, while the lower classes walk by to watch the idle rich sitting in the clubs and cafés on the Sierpes."

How to Press Sleeves.

In pressing sleeves, which is the bane of the amateur's life, keep a wooden rolling pin for that purpose alone. Insert in the sleeve, and the pressing of seams and wrists also is as easily done as though it were a flat surface. Cover pin with flannel. Keep a heavy piece of flannel to lay over the ironing board when pressing wool goods. This prevents the shiny spots so objectionable in a finished garment.

Foolish Fear of the Opal.

Many people to this day have a superstitious dread of wearing opals, because they really believe ill luck is attached to this beautiful stone. Three centuries ago the opal was an exceedingly fashionable gem, and the Italian goldsmiths particularly favored its use for their most exquisite settings.

The opal was at the height of its popularity when the plague broke out in Venice. Some especially observant individual discovered that when a plague stricken sufferer was at the point of death the opal, if he wore one, would grow brighter, and after his death it would grow dull. The reason for this appears to have been that the burning fever warmed the stone and that after death the damp and chill of the body dulled it. But many deduced from this a belief that it was the opal that had brought death and misfortune, and with the spread of this superstition the opal declined in popular favor.

Many persons would on no account whatever even accept one as a gift, much less wear what they foolishly deem the unlucky opal.—New York Press.

How to Care For Jewels.

People who have jewels should remember that if turquoises are wetted they are apt to lose color. Pearls should be exposed to light and air as much as possible, but not to damp, says Home Notes. Opals must never be exposed to great heat or they may crack and fall from their setting. Don't forget this when near the fire if you happen to wear an opal ring.

Easy to Get.

Pierpont, O., Oct. 5th.—Remarkable indeed is the experience of Mr. A. S. Turner, a man now over seventy-one years of age, and whose home is here.

For many years this old gentleman had suffered with a very unpleasant form of Kidney Trouble, a kind that very often bothers aged people. He would have to get up four or five times every night, and this very tiresome disease was fast wearing him out.

At last after having almost made up his mind that he would never be able to get relief, he stumbled over a medicine which relieved him almost immediately, and has cured him permanently. It is so very easy to get and so simple that Mr. Turner thinks everyone should know it. Every dealer in the country has it, and all you have to do is to ask for Dodd's Kidney Pills. Mr. Turner says:—

"I can heartily and honestly recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills, for they cured me. Several others in the family have used them, too, and always with the best results. I think they have no equal."

He Won.

Like other men of prominence, Admiral Dewey often comes across the irresponsible party, who always affects to be on terms of intimacy with notable persons. Courteous and genial to a degree, the admiral has profound dislike for this sort of nuisance, and does not hesitate to show the feeling. Not long ago, while out walking in Washington, he was accosted by an effusive stranger, who grasped his hand and said: "George, I'll bet you don't know me." The admiral looked his displeasure as he answered, grimly: "You win," and walked on.—Detroit Free Press.

Cheap Excursion to the South.

On Oct. 20th the Kansas City Southern Ry. (Port Arthur Route) will run a cheap excursion from Kansas City and all stations in Missouri and Kansas to Lake Charles, Shreveport, Beaumont and Port Arthur. The rate for the round trip will be $15, limited to 21 days from date of sale, good to stop over on going trip at all points en route, provided final destination is reached inside of 15 days from date of sale. This exceptionally low rate, together with liberal stopover privileges allowed, should insure a great crowd, especially in view of the fact that this is the most delightful season of the year to visit the Southland. Similar low rates will probably be placed in effect from points north and east of Kansas City: Ask your ticket agent.

Every effort will be made by the Company to secure the safety and comfort of its patrons. All inquiries relative to desirable locations to visit or other information will be cheerfully furnished. LITTLE RED MOROCCO SHOE.

The little red morocco shoe,
A-gap where baby's toes peeped through;
Here tiny piggie to market went
In the old days of sweet content.
The buttons dangling by a thread—
Once touched by fingers, with the dead—
Each straggling one it brings to me
A perfume from life's sacristy.

This tiny shoe without a heel,
Where little piggies used to steal,
To me is more than priceless gem
Plucked from a royal diadem.
It brings from amaranthine shore
The face my loving eyes bent o'er;
It brings, dear heaven! from the night,
Her kiss, her voice, her smile's delight.

Ah! what may not a mother list
Whose ears are bended to the mist
That rises out of shadow land
Made glad by the angelic hand?
Their voices come on wings of air
To greet her, patient, waiting there,
Enrapt with this morocco shoe
A-gap where baby's toes peeped through.

There comes no sweetness like the song
Of love's Invisibles, who throng
The sacred cloisters of the heart,
Unknown to all the world apart.
So, I may list the whispers soft,
Waft to me from the throne aloft—
Ah! only heard by me, the while
My mind recalls the baby's smile.

A Double-Barreled Ruse

By J. C. PLUMMER

(Copyright, 1903, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

CAPT. PRAY gazed placidly around from the bridge of the tramp steamer Grimsby, moored alongside the huge elevator, when Mr. Hogg, chief officer, accosted him.

"Smiley is in trouble, sir," he said.

Capt. Pray frowned. "Out with it," said he.

"You see," began Mr. Hogg, "Smiley used to run on the Pillman boats, and on one of his trips to Baltimore he meets a young lady. One thing led to another, and the first thing Smiley knows he is engaged to be married to her. Then he leaves the Pillman line and goes on the Grimsby in the Black sea trade, and never expecting to come to Baltimore again, he gets engaged to a girl in Birkenhead."

"That's nothing," remarked the captain, disappointedly; "all sailors do that."

Mr. Hogg continued: "Smiley had a quarrel with the second engineer of the Pillman boat, and he knowing all about the Baltimore engagement, writes the girl of the Birkenhead woman and also says Smiley is coming to Baltimore on the Grimsby."

"Well," snapped the captain, as Mr. Hogg paused.

"When the pilot came aboard at the capes he hands Smiley a letter from the Baltimore girl raking him fore and aft, and saying she would have him arrested for breach of promise as soon as the ship moored."

Capt. Pray glared at his chief officer.

"Where am I going to get a chief engineer if Smiley is put in jail?" he roared, "and the Grimsby barely time to load and save her charter."

"I've thought of that," said Mr. Hogg, sadly, "but some years ago Smiley did me a favor, and he expects me to get him out of this badly bad mess."

"If it wasn't for detaining the steamer, I'd let him get out of it in his own bloody way," growled the captain, "but something must be done. Ha!" He slapped the rail sharply. "I have it. I'm good at these things! I have it, Hogg."

Mr. Hogg gazed admiringly at his commander.

"Smiley must fall sick," announced the captain, briefly.

"Sick!" ejaculated Mr. Hogg.

"Not real sick, you swab," snapped the captain, "but make believe sick. Lay in his bunk and groan. She'd never haul off a sick man to jail."

Mr. Smiley was not enthusiastic at the plan, but Capt. Pray waxed eloquent.

"You'll lay in jail until you rot, Smiley," said the captain. "You haven't the money to pay the lawyers who'll swarm around you like tugs about a stranded steamer."

"How long must I stay in my bunk?" asked Mr. Smiley.

"Until the Grimsby pulls out o' dock," replied the captain, firmly. With gloomy forebodings of evil Mr. Smiley turned in.

"Now, Hogg," exclaimed the captain, "you go to the girl's house and tell her Smiley is confined to his bunk. Don't lie. I'm a chapel member, and I won't have any lying done. Tell her it may be smallpox or yellow fever. Stick to something, Hogg, but don't lie."

"You've a great head, sir," remarked Mr. Hogg. "I'll work it all right."

"When you come to the catching part put on all steam, Hogg," advised the captain. "We don't want her coming to the steamer, but be careful not to lie."

"I'll be careful, sir," said Mr. Hogg, winking his eye, and he departed on his diplomatic errand.

Captain Pray then walked on tiptoe to Smiley's bunk.

"How are you feeling, my poor fellow?" he asked, in subdued tones.

"I'm all right, sir," replied the invalid, sulkily.

"Sh!" said the captain; "don't talk. I'll get you some beef tea."

"This here is only make-believe sickness, sir," expostulated the engineer, uneasily.

"See here, Smiley," said the captain, sternly, "this whole thing is done for your benefit. It's a kind of deception Mr. Hogg and I are playing, and I want to keep as close to the truth as I can, for I'm a chapel member and Mrs. Hogg is a religious woman. We'll have to make this sick business as near to truth as we can."

Mr. Smiley sighed.

"After you've taken your beef tea I'll give you a nice dose of cod-liver oil," announced the captain.

Mr. Smiley disgustedly swallowed the oil, and then the captain, after stationing a burly seaman at the stateroom to give the alarm in case of a crisis, went on deck.

He had just reached the bridge when Mr. Hogg excitedly rushed up to him.

"They're coming," he gasped.

"Who?" inquired the captain.

"The young lady; and she's fetching a doctor with her."

"You have botched the whole thing, Hogg," groaned the captain. "Now we are in a devil of a mess."

"Told her your identical words, sir," explained Mr. Hogg. "I said it might be catching, and she says: 'I'll come and nurse him, and bring a doctor.'"

"You didn't come out strong enough on it's being catching," said the captain, in despair.

"Indeed, I did, sir," said Mr. Hogg; wringing his hands, "and she says: 'I'll nurse my poor Henry if he has all the plagues of Egypt.'"

At that moment a tall, reddish-haired young woman and a slender man with spectacles on his nose walked on deck and asked for the captain.

The two officers sheepishly descended from the bridge and approached the couple.

"Oh, captain!" cried the lady, "is Henry worse?"

"He's no better," replied the captain, guardedly.

"I've come to nurse him, and have brought a doctor," exclaimed the lady. "Take me to him."

"Some sicknesses are catching," said the captain, hesitating.

"Orful," chimed in Mr. Hogg.

"I'm not afraid when Henry's life is in danger," she persisted. "Take me to him."

The two officers, with perturbed countenances, led the way below, and the lady pushed the burly man on guard away as if he were of straw.

"Henry, are you very sick?" she asked.

Mr. Smiley caught the glowering eye of the captain, and said, feebly, that he felt very ill, which was not far from the truth, as the mixture of oil and beef tea was not having a pleasing effect.

"I have come to nurse you, Henry," she said, "and I have brought the doctor to examine you."

Mr. Smiley turned very pale as the doctor stepped forward and asked him to put out his tongue. Then he tapped his chest and asked him to draw a deep breath.

"Good Heavens!" exclaimed the doctor, with concern; "let me feel your pulse."

"This is very serious," he continued, placing his ear to where Mr. Smiley's heart was supposed to be.

"What's the matter?" asked Mr. Smiley in a cold sweat of terror.

"Where does this young man's family reside?" asked the doctor, with solemnity.

"Is there something the matter with me?" asked the engineer, piteously. "Am I going to die?"

"Be quiet, poor fellow," said the doctor, sadly.

Capt. Pray, with a pallid face, dragged the doctor from the stateroom.

"Do you mean to say he's sick?" he asked, hoarsely.

"He may be dead before morning," replied the doctor.

"He was well enough a little while ago."

"My dear captain, some illnesses come like the flash of a gun," replied the doctor, "but I haven't given up hope. We may save him."

"I suppose you've plenty of tar on the ship."

"Lots," excitedly replied the captain.

"Make two large plasters and place one on his back and the other on his breast," said the doctor.

"I'll do it," asseverated the captian.

The doctor then persuaded the young lady to go home, as the patient was in good hands, and they left.

It was a bad night for Mr. Smiley, as between the tar plasters and the large doses of cod-liver oil which the captain insisted on administering at intervals, he had much to bear, but the next morning the doctor reported him as better, but not out of danger.

The captain accompanied the doctor on deck, and, pointing to the spouts which were emptying the grain into the hold of the steamer, said, earnestly: "See here, doctor, I've got to sail to-morrow and I can't sail without an engineer. Is it likely Smiley will be able to be up by to-morrow?"

"Mr. Smiley," replied the doctor, "has a remarkable disease. It comes quick, and either kills or goes as quickly. Thanks to your knowledge and prompt use of cod-liver oil, I think he will be as well as ever he was by to-morrow."

The next morning when the doctor boarded the Grimsby the assistant engineer had steam up, and everything was in readiness for a start. He hurried below, and, examining the engineer, said: "You can get up, Mr. Smiley. You are entirely well, but you have had a narrow escape. Here's a letter for you."

While the Grimsby was steaming down the bay, Mr. Smiley read by the sunlight gleaming in a port the following letter:

"Dear Mr. Smiley: I never intended marrying you. I was racking my brain for a reason to break it off when I heard of your treachery, and I resolved to scare you, so I sent that letter by the pilot. When Mr. Hogg came with his story of your sickness, I saw through it and, with a medical friend, gave you a little scare. You were not sick in the least, but you were awfully scared. I hope the tar will stick longer than your promises. Yours forgivingly,

"MAGGIE."

NEEDLE WORK NOTES.

Some Pretty Things That Can Be Done by the Woman Who Is at All Handy.

Mexican drawn work is as much liked as ever, says the Chicago Daily News.

Knotted fringe borders for counterpanes suggest colonial days.

Fine white swiss bureau scarfs over a tint are among the daintiest.

A finely embroidered linen bedspread in a light weight is a possession to rejoice over.

Russian applique is conspicuous on down comfortables, covered with some silk and satin.

Fancy aprons were never more popular than now and offer a suggestion to the woman who does fine needlework.

Counterpanes with insertions are noted, though it seems more sensible to have them either all lace or with none at all.

Pincushions are very small and are covered with a square of embroidered linen fashioned at the corners by tiny ribbon bows.

The dainty little covered baskets picked up for a trifle are used by one clever needlewoman for gifts. She lines them with satin linings filled with sachet powder and cleverly converts them into useful sewing boxes with side pockets or lovely jewel cases.

Glove cases are very useful, indeed, serving to keep gloves separated from other things, and if well embroidered they are ornamental as well. Sachets or cases for gloves are preferable to boxes, especially to those who move about a good deal, as they take much less room in packing. A glove case can be made of art linen, Roman satin, silk, etc., and should be long enough to take ordinary four-button gloves easily, and if you put a division in it the result will be good. A division is made lengthwise and consists of a doubled piece of the silk used for lining. This permits of the separation of white from colored gloves.

An odd and attractive gift, suitable for a holiday or birthday souvenir, is a wonder bag. It is made of some light material like silkoline or light weight cretonne, and fitted with many pockets, the more unexpected in location the better. Into each of these pockets is put some gift, trifling or substantial. The recipient is expected to search out one of the gifts each day as long as they last, or reserve them for such special days as Christmas, New Year's, Easter, St. Valentine's day, May day and so on. As a general thing the wonder bag makes a more pleasing gift when it is understood that the various pockets are to be searched daily until the contents are exhausted than if certain and far apart days are suggested for the search. For a child this bag is apt to prove a very acceptable gift, particularly if the youthful recipient be permitted to explore all the pockets at once.

MAKING JELLY.

Pointers That Will Show the Way to Success if Directions Are Closely Followed.

Jelly bags should be made at home. They are three cornered in shape, preferably of flannel, and at least half a dozen should be in readiness for the canning season, advises the New York Tribune.

In making jelly take care not to squeeze the straining bag, as it impairs the clearness of the jelly. While the juice is cooking, place the sugar in a pan in the oven and heat through; take care that it does not burn, and stir it about from time to time, so it will heat evenly. When the fruit juice has cooked for 20 minutes pour the sugar into it a little at a time; the sugar, being hot, does not lower the boiling point, and jelly made in this way will always "jell." If the sugar does not hiss as it touches the juice it is not sufficiently hot. Let it all boil up together for a few minutes after the sugar dissolves, and then pour into a pitcher, tying over the nose of the latter a piece of cheesecloth, first wet in cold water and then wrung dry out of very hot water. Pour the juice into the glasses through this cloth, discarding it for a fresh one as soon as it becomes covered with pulp. This final straining is little extra trouble, and makes the jelly clear and sparkling, as jelly should be. Tin covers are not advisable for jelly, as they are apt to rust and impart a disagreeable flavor. Paraffine paper is considered best for the tops of jelly glasses. Tie the paper firmly in place after the jelly is cold, moisten it with water, and it will adhere closely to the glass. If paraffine wax is used it should be put on in a thin layer, as a thick coating is apt to shrink and leave the jelly exposed. Cover the jelly while it is cooling, as it makes an excellent culture medium for germs, and set in a cool place. A layer of granulated sugar placed over the top of the jelly just before the paper is put on will prevent the formation of mold.

To all such fruits as grapes and peaches, which do not give a clear jelly, a little apple juice should be added. This will not destroy the flavor of the grapes. With apples, except in the case of crab apples, some other fruit should be used to give flavor. A small quantity of the parings and cores of quinces will flavor a large amount of apple jelly, but the seeds should never be allowed to get into preserve or jelly, as they will make the one sticky and prevent the other from being clear. A rose geranium leaf bruised slightly and left on the top of the jelly while it is cooling, also imparts a delicate flavor.

Dead ripe fruit seldom "jells" properly. It is better that it should be a little underripe, both for this purpose and for ordinary canning.

Rather Antique.

"At last," said the great inventor, "I have succeeded in perfecting a powder that is both smokeless and noiseless."

"Pshaw! That's as old as the hills," replied the observing person. "Women have been using that brand of powder ever since Eve posed as a fashion leader."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Needed a Knife.

Prof. George Lincoln Burr, of Cornell, who lately toured New England on his bicycle in order to gather facts about witchcraft, is an authority on the history of superstition and persecution, and is also an indefatigable wheelman. Prof. Burr, with his bicycle, has penetrated many primitive and secluded parts of the United States.

From these journeys, says an eastern exchange, he returns with little stories that are now quaint, now strange, now humorous. A story of the latter sort concerns a visit to Tennessee.

"I arrived one night at a mountaineer's cabin," said the professor, "and asked for shelter for the night. The good people were very hospitable. They gave me a comfortable bed and an excellent meal.

"While I was eating the meal my host watched me narrowly to see that I had everything I wanted. He kept ordering his wife to fill my glass, to bring me more bread, and so forth. Finally, when I began to eat a piece of apple pie, he exclaimed in an indignant tone:

"'Jane, why don't you bring the gentleman a knife? Don't you see him here tryin' to eat his pie with a fork?'"

Modern Sherlock.

The modern Sherlock was told to spot the suspected man.

"Well," said Sherlock, "I have at least found that his wife is away on a vacation."

"How did you find that out?" asked the mystified friend.

"He is wearing a safety pin instead of a suspender button."—Chicago Daily News.

ALL TIRED OUT.

The weary, worn-out, all-tired feelings come to everybody who taxes the kidneys.

When the kidneys are over-worked they fail to perform the duties nature has provided for them to do.

When the kidneys fail dangerous diseases quickly follow. Urinary disorders, diabetes, dropsy, rheumatism, Bright's disease. Doan's Kidney Pills cure all kidney and bladder ills. Read the following case:

Veteran Joshua Heller, 706 South Walnut street, Urbana, Ill., says: "In the fall of 1899 after getting Doan's Kidney Pills at Cunningham Bros.' drug store in Champaign and taking a course of the treatment I told the readers of this paper that they had relieved me of kidney trouble, disposed of a lame back with pain across my loins and beneath the shoulder blades. During the interval which has elapsed I have had occasion to resort to Doan's Kidney Pills when I noticed warnings of an attack. On each and every occasion the results obtained were just as satisfactory as when the pills were first brought to my notice. I just as emphatically indorse the preparation today as I did over two years ago."

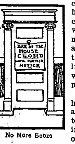
WASHINGTON LETTER

Some Timely and Interesting Gossip from the National Capital.

NO DRINKS FOR LEGISLATORS

Senators and Congressmen Will Have to Go Outside of the Capitol Building for Their Intoxicants—Lawmakers Not Hard Drinkers.

Washington.—For the first time since there was eating and drinking at the capital, farther back than anybody can remember, it will be impossible next winter to buy anything with a taste of alcohol in it anywhere within the capitol precincts.



BAR OF THE HOUSE CLOSED UNTIL FURTHER NOTICE

No More Booze

Nominally there have been rules against selling intoxicating liquors in the restaurants of the senate and the house for a great many years, but these rules have never been enforced. It has been assumed as a matter of course that they were adopted for the sake of appearances and that they were not to interfere with the comfort of statesmen or with the facility with which they might entertain themselves or their friends.

Every little while there has been a bluff at one end of the capitol or the other about shutting off the booze altogether, by law, the understanding being that if such a bill passed at one end of the capitol it would be quietly smothered at the other, thus giving everybody a chance once in awhile to go on record without interfering with bibulatory freedom.

Last winter the game was tried in the house. They got into a sharp debate on prohibition during a debate on the immigration bill, which contained a clause forbidding the sale of beer or wine at immigrant stations. One member dared another to offer an amendment prohibiting the sale of liquor in the capitol. The dare was taken and the amendment was adopted with a rush. Nobody had the hardihood to vote against it. Then it went over to the senate and the expectation was that it would be heard of no more, but the senate last winter was imbued with a spirit of mischief and the amendment was retained exactly as it passed the house.

So at last the law is firmly fixed in the statutes and there it is likely to stay. For nobody is ever going to risk his political future by offering an amendment allowing the sale of liquor in the capitol and nobody of consequence would vote for such an amendment if it were offered.

Law Makers Not Drinkers.

Of course there is a lot of rather cheap talk about the bibulous habits of members of congress, but as a matter of fact this will not prove a serious discomfort to anybody.

A Mistaken Impression

The senate and house restaurants are open for only a few hours each day and there is precious little drinking during working hours at the capitol. For a long time it has been impossible to get anything stronger than beer at the senate restaurant and the lack of stronger stimulants has not occasioned the slightest complaint. The counter at the other end of the capitol has been patronized, it is true, but almost wholly by visitors and not to any great extent by members.

The capitol has really for years been a temperate place. The day has long passed when a senator or representative could appear in a state of insobriety in the neighborhood of the halls of legislation without causing unfavorable comment and perhaps ruining his reputation.

Men go about the work of legislation nowadays seriously and temperately. The same standards prevail among public men that prevail among business men, and if the shutting of liquors out of the capitol will only help to disabuse the public mind of the contrary impression it will be a very salutary thing even though it makes no real difference in the conduct of senators and representatives.

A Presidential Possibility.

Senator Gorman, of Maryland, seems to be the favorite just now of southern democrats who are talking about the presidency.

Senator Gorman

That is not surprising, for Gorman has been the most popular man in public life among southern democrats in Washington for a good many years. They like him primarily because they credit him with the defeat of the so-called "Force bill" in the Fifty-first congress when he lead the filibuster in the senate which prevented the measure coming to a vote, but that is not the only thing which draws them to him. For a good many years he has been regarded as the south's best representative among the business interests of the north, which have so great an influence in legislation.

It is pretty hard to classify Maryland either as a southern or a northern state. The predominating sentiment is undoubtedly southern, although its commercial alliances are with the north. Gorman is about as hard to classify as his state. His sympathies are undoubtedly with the south, although his business interests are with the north and his associations are largely northern. He is without question the shrewdest politician on the democrat side in congress, and he is recognized as the legislative leader of his party.

Gorman is a sphinx. He is canny of speech and nobody has ever yet surprised him into an indiscreet utterance. And yet there is nobody in Washington whose personal relations with newspaper men are closer or of a more confidential character. He began as a page in the senate and his entire life has practically been passed within the shadow of the capitol. For he was assistant postmaster of the senate after he became too mature for the pageship, and he had not long returned to Baltimore before he was elected to the senate.

Big Man for a Little Office.

A curious conjunction of office and man is that of Gen. H. V. Boynton and the presidency of the board of education of the District of Columbia.

Gen. Boynton

If there is any position in the national capital which would naturally be supposed to go to a man of peace and love it is the presidency of the district school board, but Gen. Boynton is the "fightingest" man in the entire district when he gets his fighting clothes on. He not only has a record in two wars, but he was for years the most pugnacious correspondent on newspaper row, tilting fearlessly at every perceptible abuse and making enemies right and left in the pursuit of his calling.

When he was appointed president of the school board he supposed that it was to be a place of more or less routine and that for the moderate allowance of $500 a year he was to preside over the meetings of the board with dignity, and enunciate his findings with solemnity. He hadn't been there a fortnight, however, before he was engaged in a scrap and he has been in some sort of a scrimmage ever since. First he tackled the school histories. He happened to find an incorrect historical allusion in one of them and he proceeded to examine them all. He discovered that they were full of mistakes and he ordered them all out of the schools until the mistakes could be corrected. Of course that angered the writers and publishers, but he didn't mind. He won his point. Then he learned that the contractors for coal were furnishing the school buildings with an inferior article at an exorbitant price and that they were selling badly underweight. He stopped that and made every coal dealer his mortal enemy in consequence. A little later he fell afoul of a personal scandal that was keeping the schools in a turmoil, and he went at that with a vim that startled the community and resulted in the elimination of the cause.

And yet Gen. Boynton personally is one of the gentlest and most considerate of men. It is only when he scents an abuse that he vaults into the arena.

LOUIS A. COOLIDGE.

Getting Back at Him.

Comedian—No money to pay salaries, you say? Well, you're a nice manager, you are.

Manager—Well, the business has been bad—
